TRUE BILL OF MURDER RETURNED BY LINDSAY GRAND JURY AGAINST M'GAUGHEY AT ASSIZES OPENING

First Scene in Last Act of Love Tragedy That Has Stirred Victoria County.

MR. JUSTICE LOGIE PRESIDING JUDGE

McGaughey Indicted for Slaying of Beatrice Fee on May 25 Last.

COURT WAS CROWDED

J. J. Bacon Also Goes to Trial for Murder of Infant in Haliburton.

(By a Staff Reporter)

LINDSAY, Sept. 30.—The curtain rolled up yesterday on the first scene in the last act of a drama that opened two years ago when Frederick McGaughey became engaged to Beatrice Fee. It had its climax on May 25 when the peace of a Sunday evening drive was shattered by revolver shots as McGaughey fired round after round into the body of his struggling sweetheart.

Yesterday the Grand Jury at Victoria County Fall Assizes under Mr. Justice Logie of Hamilton returned a true bill indicting McGaughey on a charge of wilful murder.

The case is stirring great interest in Lindsay and throughout the district between there and Omemee, both parties being well known. Crowds thronged the court house more than a hour before proceedings were scheduled to open and stood in corridors and doorways despite the efforts of several constables, encouraged by the presiding justice, to keep the aisles clear. Scores, pushed and scrambled for sitting accommodation, family parties squatting on the floor of the public gallery, and others stood in three lines along the back of the court.

Preliminaries Brief.

In a remarkably short address, His Lordship handed the two murder charges to the Grand Jury for presentment, and in less than fifteen minutes from the opening of court the Grand Jury had retired under the charge of Peter White, K.C., Crown Prosecutor and J. E. Anderson, County Crown Attorney. It returned at 4.50, after deliberating three hours and a half, presenting true bills of indictment in both cases. The second charge of murder is one in which J. J. Bacon of Furnace Falls, Haliburton county, is accused of killing an infant. He was brought from Kingston penitentiary to stand trial, being now under long sentence for incest.

Forty-eight men were called for duty on the petit jury which today has charge of the case, and room was made for these talesmen by clearing the court for an equal number of spectators. Many women were seated in the public gallery, and some were prepared to stand in the doorways through the trial, but were moved by court constables. Sheriff A. E. Vrooman had a difficult task in maintaining the quiet His Lordship demanded, and was compelled on several occasions to take strong measures.

The Grand Jury was composed of the following: Newton Smale (foreman); G. A. Campbell; Thomas Christian; A. Fleming; A. Law; J. Hutton; William Magee; L. C. McArthur; John A. Ross; D. A. Sin-

LEADER OF ULSTER.

SIR JAMES CRAIG.

DISCUSSION OF IRISH BOUNDARY

Principal Question Before British House In Session Opening To-day.

SOLUTION SOUGHT.

LONDON, Sept. 30. — The appointment of an Irish Boundary Commission is the chief business before Parliament in its re-assembly to-day.

The Free State treaty provided for a boundary commission to settle the question of the frontier to the north, among other things, "in accordance with the wishes of the inhabitants." Two of the necessary commissioners have been named, but Northern Ireland, by refusing to name the third, has held up all the functions of the commissioners.

The trouble seems to hinge on the fact that President Cosgrave of the Free State and Sir James Craig, Premier of Ulster, are unable to meet each other on moderate ground because of the extreme views of the die-hards within their respective sections. Premier MacDonald and his two predecessors in the Premiership want a settlement by consent, and Lord Dunraven, now a Free State Senator; Viscount Grey, former Foreign Secretary; John R. Clynes, Lord Privy Seal, have all voiced the view that a satisfactory and lasting solution must be looked for in a settlement by agreement.

"Irish unity cannot come through the use of physical force," said Mr. Clynes. "Agreement between the North and South is the supreme need of Ireland. If the Irish leaders fail to settle their quarrel on the boundary issue, however, the British Parliament must not fail to honor the clear intentions of the treaty entered into with the Irish leaders."

And Sir James Craig, over in Ulster, had this to say: "We are ready to consider light readjustments, but we can never consent to hand over any one of the counties as a whole. No power on earth can force us to hand over any one of the counties we hold."

SWEETIN WOMAN UNABLE TO EAT

One of Principals in Poison Case a Mental Wreck—Sunday's Service.

FAITH UNSHAKEN

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Sept. 30.—Elsie Sweetin and the Rev. Lawrence M. Hight are paying a terrible price for their confessed poisoning crimes.

The woman, a mental wreck, spent Sunday in her cramped cell at the old Salem jail—thinking and thinking.

"What a fool I was!"

This she confided to an attendant who offered her food. But she could not eat.

The Rev. Mr. Hight read his Bible in the light of a bright autumn sun that poured its rays through the bars of his cell in the Nashville jail. He said:

"There is still lots of good I can do in the world, if they will let me."

The preacher does not want to hang. He wants to live, even though the rest of his life must be spent in the penitentiary.

Here in Mount Vernon the crime of the minister and the woman was retold as the villagers meet on the streets. They discussed the poisoning of Mrs. Sweetin's husband, the poisoning of Hight's wife—the confession of the guilty couple and the possible punishment.

The verdict of Mount Vernon is that the minister should be hanged and that the woman should be sent to the penitentiary for life.

The Methodist Church, where Hight filled the pulpit before the discovery of his crime, was deserted. These people of Mount Vernon believe in God—they stand steadfast, even though their minister forgot Him.

Ten women, seven men and four children filed into the little white church Sunday and praised God because He never fails them, though human beings do.

Next door is another little white frame house, like the other, devoid of paint and cheer. It is pitifully stark and naked, locked up with only the ghosts of the pastor of the church and his murdered wife as occupants.

The church held the remnants of the congregation of fifty or sixty to whom Hight used to preach to two Sundays each month.

They were a sincere and determined nucleus—middle-aged women with hair clubbed in tight knots and men with weatherbeaten faces that smacked of life close to the soil.

"Brother" Hayes Acts.

"Brother" Hayes, a youngish old man with a checked suit and a vagrant string tie, led the service, while the man whose place he took on the platform wonders what the Jaw will do with him for committing the most atrocious crime the community ever has known.

It was "testimony" meeting, during which every one of the members of the congregation made an avowal of faith, a faith not to be shaken by the sins of the pastor.

"Brother" Hayes prayed. As his voice rose to a climax, tears streamed from his red face. And the "Amens" of the people were sniffed through handkerchiefs. Before the prayer was over everybody was crying frankly and unashamed.

The service was not long. Three hymns, the testimonials, the prayer and the benediction. There was no sermon.

CAPTURE OF MECCA MAY INFLAME MOSLEM MILLIONS
GREAT POWERS VIEW MAHABIS REVOLT WITH CONCERN

ISLAM'S HOLY CITY.

NOTHING TO LOSE.

(By Milton Bronner)

LONDON, Sept. 30.— Ibn Saud, sultan of Nejd in interior Arabia, by capturing on Mecca, capital of King Hussein of Hedjaz, has just started a blaze which may set the whole Mohammedan world aflame.

Every one of the world powers including the United States, is noticing with uneasiness this tribal brawl which upon its face would appear only a personal rivalry for possession of various deserts, palm trees, harems and shrines.

Hussein, then sheriff of Mecca, aided the allies during the war and was rewarded by being made king. His territory includes the holy cities of Mecca and Medina. To Hussein's sons were given the kingdoms of Iraq, formerly Mesopotamia, and of Trans-Jordania east of Palestine.

Sultan Starts War

Sultan Ibn, type of the ancient zealot who carried the crescent throughout the world at the point of the scimitar, has no patience with Hussein, his policies and his religion. Recently he declared open warfare. He captured Taif, Hussein's summer capital, 60 miles east of Mecca. It is his reported intention to drive the king to the protecting guns of the British fleet at Jeddah.

There begins trouble for the dominant Christian powers.

No nation wishes to take sides in the quarrel for fear of offending its own Mohammedan subjects who already are restless enough. There are about a quarter of a billion Moslems in the world, most of them living under the flags of Christian nations.

England has millions in India, the Soudan and various dependencies and mandates. France has them in Algeria, Morocco, the Sahara, Senegal and elsewhere. Italy has them in Tripoli. The United States has them in the Moros of the Philippines. Soviet Russia has Moslem subjects in the Caucasus and in some of her Asiatic states.

Mecca Pilgrims Complain

King Hussein, owing his rise largely to the allies and looking to them for protection would continue friendly to Europeans. Sultan Ibn, owing nothing to any western power, would be for strict non-intercourse with them if he obtained possession of Mecca. He can lose nothing in the attempt.

The powers in general have nothing but trouble to expect from the controversy. Only the Soviets may gain. They will use every endeavor in Persia, in Afghanistan and in Turkey to stir up animosity. The total result may be a shaking to the very foundations of the western nations' power over their Moslem subjects.

The reign of King Hussein, it must be admitted, has caused dissatisfaction among Mohammedans of many lands. His little capital of Mecca is the most venerated of all cities. It contains the great tombs of the sheiks, the mosque of El Haram and the holy shrine of the Kaaba, inclosing the black stone supposed to have been placed there by Abraham, himself.

Every year some 100,000 Mohammedan pilgrims come to kiss this stone. They complain now that Hussein has been harsh to these visitors. Furtherore the Turkish and Egyptian religionists deny his claim to be caliph of the Moslem world.

SHIP BUILDING ACCOUNT MADE BIG OVERDRAFT

Home Bank Witness Denies Vessels Were Used for Running Rum.

EXCEEDED MILLION

TORONTO, September 30. — The accounts of C. A. Barnard came in for some detailed examination at the trial of Sidney H. Smith, auditor of the Home Bank, on charges of making returns, at the county criminal court yesterday. The Barnard account was opened in the Montreal branch of the bank, and Victor W. Scott, who was the manager of that branch, was questioned regarding the account. He said that it was opened in 1917 with a large deposit. It was a very active account with many large deposits but after 1919 ran into continuous overdrafts. At one time L. C. Hurdman gave a note to take care of part of the overdraft. The overdrafts continued and were eventually placed in an account on orders from the head office of the British Dominion Holding and Investment Company. With this account the overdrafts continued and on May 31, 1923, amounted to $1,273,000. The officers of the British Dominion Corporation were: H. J. Daly, president, K. F. McLaren, vice-president; W. R. Fleming, T. S. O'Connor, J. C. Whittaker, directors, and J. C. Austin, secretary-treasurer. Mr. Austin was employed Mr. Barnard's office, said the witness.

Cheques for $350,000

Asked when the big overdrafts occurred in the Barnard account, witness said it was when cheques for $350,000 from the Davie Ship Building and Repairing Company could not be paid.

Witness said that Barnard was the managing director of the D[illegible] Company. When the British Dominion Corporation account was opened it was taken out of his jurisdiction said the witness, and operated from the head office in Toronto, to which he was transferred after May 31, 1923. Witness said that security in the Barnard account included two boats.

R. H. Greer, counsel for the defence, asked if these were the boats

JAPAN'S OBJECTION TO PROTOCOL REFERRED TO LEAGUE COMMITTEE

ISSSUE IS GRAVE

British Dominions Clash With Mother Country on Question Japan Has Raised.

GENEVA, Sept. 30—The swing of sentiment to Japan was the outstanding feature of the critical situation in Geneva last night. After laboring without cessation throughout the entire day the leaders had to confess that they had not yet discovered the miraculous formula, which, while satisfying the aspirations of the Japanese, would keep the proposed protocol of arbitration and security strong enough to win not only the support of the delegations assembled at Geneva, but what is more important, the ratifications of the world parliaments.

While no solutions were found, various channels of settlement have been explored and prominent delegates said that there was an earnest expectation of reaching some accord. here is however, no weakening in evidence among the Japanese, who say they have unequivocal directions from Tokio to maintain their attitude of opposition to any protocol plan which would make Japan an aggressor if she failed to abide by a world court decision based on the interpretation of matters supposed to be within the exclusive jurisdiction of the other party to the dispute.

Referred to Committee

The entire Japanese difficulty was threshed out yesterday at a private meeting of the league council when Viscount Ishii, at the request of the council made a frank exposition of the Japanese viewpoint. This council examination was followed throughout the day by repeated private conferences between the principal delegates, all desperately striving to find light on the issue raised by Japan. Eventually the problem was entrusted to the study of three men, Sir Cecil Hurst, of England, M. Loucheur of France, and Signor Scialoia, Italy, the first and last named being celebrated international jurists, and M. Loucheur being one of the most prominent industrialists of France, owner of newspapers and a former cabinet minister. This committee will meet to-day.

Delegates Exhausted

Everybody connected with the affairs is so worn out and excited by the suddenness and gravity of the issue that by unanimous assent all decided to pass the night in quiet reflection. Realizing the importance a revised protocol would have in the eyes of the world, the delegates de-

SNAKE BIT CHARMER.

First Person To Survive Gila Monster's Bite.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 30.—Bitten by a gila monster, Mrs. Hazel Hodge, a snake charmer, is recovering in a local hospital. She is said to be the first person on record to survive a gila monster's bite.

Mrs. Hodge was rushed to a hospital a few minutes after she was attacked, and this is believed to have saved her life.

She said the gila was a house pet, kept in a cage. She was bitten while feeding the reptile.

TOLL BRIDGE OVER OTTAWA PROPOSED

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—(Canadian Press).—A delegation of representative men from Argenteuil County was received here Monday by Premier Taschereu to discuss the matter of building a bridge across the Ottawa River, between Grenville, in Argenteuil County, and Hawkesbury, Ontario. The cost of the bridge will run to $300,000, it is estimated. Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, and M.P. for Argenteuil, who headed the delegation, suggested that Quebec pay a share of the cost, Ottawa would be ready to pay one-half, it was said, and Ontario had intimated its readiness to do the same as Quebec.

Mr. Taschereu, in reply, suggested neither Province make a direct contribution, but that a company should be formed to build the bridge and operate it on a toll basis. He believed the Province of Quebec would be ready to guarantee a quarter of the bonds floated to pay for the bridge.

Plebiscite Bulletin

Sept. 30, 1924 PETERBOROUGH No. 9

Decreased Consumption of Liquor

Facts utterly disprove that oft-repeated lie that "There is just as much liquor drunk as ever."

So successful has been the enforcement of the O.T.A. that large numbers of breweries in Ontario have been forced to close since the Act went into effect.

MANY BREWERIES CLOSED

	Breweries.	Beer Manufactured.
1914	50	24,193,619 Gallons
1923	21	6,379,667 Gallons

This includes all near-beer, the strength of which comes within the regulations of the O.T.A. (2½ proof spirits) and also the strong beer manufactured for export. Probably not more than 5% as much intoxicating beer is consumed in Ontario to-day as formerly when under license.

WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC.

The Purity League—what a name for them to adopt—tried to make out in last night's Examiner that there was some sort of connection between the white slave traffic and Prohibition. What a farce! Every national and international conference that has been held for the control of the white slave traffic has shown that this traffic is always the worst in those countries where liquor is sold most openly. No such conference has ever even hinted that the traffic was due to or increased by Prohibition.

In Quebec—where they have so-called Government control of the liquor traffic—the white slave traffic has become so shameless and flagrant magistrates in the Criminal Courts of Montreal have been denouncing it vigorously and calling for assistance in combatting it.

THE SALE OF DRUGS.

Associated with the white slave traffic is the sale of drugs. Government statistics show that more drugs are sold in the two wet Provinces of Quebec and British Columbia—where they have Government control—than were sold in the other seven Provinces, a few of which have since gone wet. Here are the figures:

Conviction in Qubec and British Columbia	763
Convictions in other Seven Provinces	448
Increased Convictions in Wet Provinces	315

ART ASSOCIATION HELD A MEETING

A Total of 106 Members Was Registered Last Year.

The annual meeting of the Women's Art Association was held in the studio at the Conservatory of Music, when reports of the year's activities and election of officers for the ensuing season took place.

The reports of the different committees and officers showed that each department had been active, doing its share to make the Association a successful organization. A total of 106 members was registered last year. In her address, the president, Mrs. F. C. Neal, gave suggestions for the coming year that should prove helpful to the new officers and executive. Most of all, she stressed the necessity of individual interest, each one feeling that she should do her part and be an active member of the organization. Mrs. Neal voiced her appreciation of the work of the executive and the various committees, of the support given by the press and by everyone who had helped to make the past year and her previous years in office, so pleasant. A letter was read announcing an exhibition of pictures to be held in the Hall of the Collegiate Institute on Thursday evening, October 2nd, at which members of the Study Club were especially urged to be present.

The Study Club will begin its year's work on Tuesday evening, October 14th, the first meeting to be held at the home of the new president, Mrs. J. E. R. Munro, who will give a talk on Balance and Composition in Pictures. Every member is requested to be present, those not caring to re-enter the class being asked to telephone the recording secretary, Mrs. B. L. Barns.

New Officers.

The following officers for the new year were then elected:

Honorary President: Mrs. McKay, Toronto; President: Mrs. J. E. R. Munro: Vice-President: Mrs. F. C. Neal; 2nd Vice-President: Mrs. V. Eastwood: 3rd Vice-President: Mrs. W. R. Widdess: 4th Vice-President: Mrs. G. N. Gordon; Corresponding Secretary: Mrs. L. J. Pettit; Recording Secretary: Mrs. B. L. Barns; Treasurer:Madame Masson; Assistant Treasurer: Miss Edith Murphy; Press Representative: Miss G. Glover; Archivist: Mrs. J. B. Mann; Little Theatre Club: Mrs. W. McKee Bingham. Convenors of Committees — Refreshment or Social: Mrs. H. Morphet and Mrs. E. W. Borbridge; Programme: Mrs. R. Gliddon; Exhibition: Miss Cameron Edwards; Needlework: Mrs. W. H. Pretty; Telephone: Mrs. W. R. Cormack; Art Study Club: Mrs. B. L. Barns; Representatives: Mrs. A. Mowat, Mrs. R. M. Waddell, Mrs. F. A. Hodgson, Mrs. A. Moir, Mrs. G. Langley, Mrs. T. Cruikshank, Mrs. G. E. Porter, Mrs. Robt. Harstone, Mrs. R. A. Brown, Mrs. C. C. Cragg, Miss M. Rush.

The report of the secretary, Mrs. B. L. Barns, was given, followed be the report of the treasurer, Mrs. G. E. Porter; of the Exhibition Committee, by Miss C. Edwards; of the Little Theatre Club, by Mrs. W. McKee Bingham; and of the Crafts Club, given by Mrs. F. C. Neal in the absence of the convenor, Mrs. W. H. Pretty.

Review of Year's Work.

The report of the secretary, Mrs. Barns, gave a summary of the year's activities in the various departments of the Association. Reporting that the past year had been in several years one of the most successful in the history of the society, Mrs. Barns went on to enumerate some of the work done. Three exhibits had been held in the studio, one a showing of South American curios, accompanied by a paper read by Miss Stockton, of the Toronto Women's Art Association, another an exhibit of Mexican articles of interest and a paper by Mrs. F. A. Hodgson, and the third an exhibit of paintings by members of the Toronto Association.

Three musicales were also given, two literary afternroons, and two travel talks. The studio teas during the season were well attended.

The first theatre night of the Association was given in March, when Miss K. McCarthy's play 'Melange' was presented at the Capitol Theatre, under direction of Mrs. W. McKee Bingham, and sufficient money realized to pay for the stage curtain hanging in the Conservatory Hall.

Progress in weaving was made by the Art Needlework Club, another loom having been secured for this year's work.

The Study Club held nine meetings, at which a comprehensive study of painting, from the fourth to the eighteenth centuries, inclusive, was made.

At an executive meeting held on June 18th, the following suggestions for the next year were made:

(1) That an effort be made to have regular meetings of the Dramatic Club, at which studies suitable for an understanding of the drama be taken up, and various plays reviewed and studied, also to make an effort to have more plays and theatrical events take place.

(2) That a similar study be made along the line of music.

(3) That increasing stress be laid upon the Crafts department, and an effort made to encourage and develop all useful and beautiful crafts.

(4) That a large committee be used in preparing the programme of musicales, lectures, etcetera, thus spreading and increasing interest among the members.

(5) That a semi-annual meeting be held yearly.

(6) That the studio be rented until the end of September, so that the new lease will correspond with the Association's year, from October to September.

Mrs. Barns also announced an invitation received from the W.A.A. of Toronto to have any ceramic artist of the local branch send one or two pieces of work for the exhibit of decorated china made by the Toronto Society at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Flowers For Mrs. Neal.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Mrs. L. J. Pettit very delightfully expressed the pleasure of the society in having Mrs. J. E. R. Munro as their new president, and also voiced the appreciation of the society to Mrs. F. C. Neal, the past president, for her efforts in making the Association so successful. On behalf of the executive, a very artistically-arranged bouquet of carnations, roses and ferns was presented to Mrs. Neal by Mrs. W. McKee Bingham, and acknowledged in appropriate fashion.

ST. GEORGE'S HELD HARVEST FESTIVAL

Church Was Beautifully Decorated With Flowers and Fruit For the Occasion.

The harvest festival sehvices were fittingly observed at St. George's Anglican Church, Braidwood Ave., on Friday and Sunday last. The church was tastefully degorated with an abundant supply of fruit, flowers, vegetables, and grain by a band of willing workers, who spared neither time nor effort in making the church look its best. Rev. J. L. Hughes officiated at all the services, which were fully choral. The choir, under the direction of Mr. Quinn, organist, rendered suitable music, the anthem, "Sing to the Lord of Harvest," soloist Miss Scott, being well sung on Friday evening and repeated on the Sunday morning. On Sunday evening the anthem was "What Shall I Render Unto the Lord," Miss Scott and Mr. Breadman singing the solo parts.

The lessons on Friday evening were read by Rev. M. R. Kingsford, assistant curate of St. John's Church, the preacher being Rev. A. T. Weir, rector of Christ Church, Omemee.

The preacher, basing his remarks on the words, "Let everything that has breath praise the Lord" (Psalm 150, verse 6), led his hearers up to the thought of God as a personal God and not merely a personification of force. From His creatures "made in the image of God" should come a full response of reason, will, and love.

On Sunday morning the pulpit was occupied by Rev. Walter Cox of St. John's Church, Lakefield. Taking as his text the word "Hallelujah," Mr. Cox spoke in terms appropriate and interesting to both Sunday School scholars and adults. He showed how the Christian had every right to be joyful and glad-hearted, and the realisation and appreciation of God's love should be shown forth in practical thankoffering in the life.

The inclement weather of Sunday evening interfered with the attendance anticipated, nevertheless a fair-sized congregation was present. Rev. J. L. Hughes delivered a thoughtful sermon upon "The Services of Angels and Men" in the work of carrying out God's will for the world, in the protection and guardianship of souls, and in the offering of divine worship and adoration.

The collections reached a record amount.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Annual Rally Day Services Held in the Church on Sunday.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 30.—The annual Rally Day services were observed in the Methodist Church on Sunday, Rev. Frank Langford, general secretary for Young People's work, being the special preacher for the day.

A feature of the morning service was the girls' choir, the selections chosen including "Love that passeth knowledge," and "Open thy Windows." Miss Ethel Richardson trained the girls' voices for the occasion.

Rev. Joseph Wilkes led in the opening prayer and Rev. Mr. Langford told for a children's story, Hawthorne's "The Great Stone Face." The Scripture lesson was from Psalm 78, the text, comprising the first eight verses with special reference to the words, "That the generation to come might know . . . and declare them to their children." The importance of Christian education was specially stressed throughout the discourse as was appropriate to a service for Sunday School teachers and scholars.

What is education? The boys and girls of this generation have Christian ideals because they have been born in a Christian community but to have honesty, courage, strong purpose to do right, ingrained into their hearts and lives it is absolutely necessary that they be taught—such knowledge must never be taken for granted. Only by the long, slow process of teaching, passing on a little bit at a time, will they have their minds stored, and Christian characters formed. An early start is a distinct advantage in making progress in the things of God.

How do you do it? The only way anyone ever learns anything is by being exposed to it. To play, to talk, to be generous, to be stingy, sober and temperate, or a drunkard, a musician, to use good language or bad language—these things a child learns by being exposed to them—good or bad will the mind's storehouse become filled with according to what the developing nature is exposed to it in daily living. The greatest danger in this country to-day is that hundreds and thousands of boys and girls may grow up without having been adequately and searchingly exposed to the teachings of Jesus.

"I do not know the deep things of God, nor how to teach them," is some parents' plaint. Well, since there is no redress against being starved to death which is what will happen to your child's spiritual nature if no food is offered, go as far as you can—do the best you can—God will see to it that he absorbs what he needs and rejects what he cannot use, and so will build Christian character. Not telling your child anything about God, no teaching how to pray, no word of thanks at table, no reading of God's Word, means that he will grow up to live without God. Pass on the things which have been of value to you, what you have seen in the face of Jesus, to this generation that they may know how to live for the highest ideals.

By what agency is education carried one? Through lives on fire, literally, for the truth they are bent on passing on. Sunday School teachers who impart the truth as the greatest and most precious thing in their lives, not as though it was a painful duty which must be performed, will realize a glow, and a passionate enthusiasm from the contact of the spirit of God upon their spirits. Parents also will know this gracious and soul-uplifting experience if duty to their children in this matter of supreme importance is faithfully performed.

School Attendance.

The year in connection with the Young Worshippers' League closed on Rally Sunday and the rewards for those who attended church twenty-five Sundays or over being given out at the morning service.

The League has for its object the formation of the habit of regular church-going, the age limit being placed at fifteen years, but no child is too young to belong provided it may be brought to church at all. Miss Marjorie Skitch is the secretary and will gladly receive all names of those wishing to be enrolled. A number will be dropping out now, having reached the age limit, and upon the parents rests the responsibility of keeping up the membership of the League. The present enrollment is between forty and fifty names.

Those receiving recognition on Sunday included: Wilma Fallis, 51 Sundays; Mary Burnham, 46 Sundays; William Skitch, 45 Sundays; Elsie Spence, 42 Sundays; Lawrence Rowland, 37 Sundays; Marian Earle, 36 Sundays; Elwood Fallis, 36 Sundays; Marshal Fallis, 34 Sundays; Martha Earle, 33 Sundays; Allen Earle, 33 Sundays; Walter Sayles, 33 Sundays; Gerald Todd, 32 Sundays; Gordon Muspratt, 27 Sundays; Aubrey Todd, 25 Sundays.

Sunday Afternoon.

The auditorium of the Methodist Church was well filled on Sunday afternoon for the Rally Day service in connection with the Sunday School, the superintendent, Mr. W. Fred. Fallis, taking charge, Rev. Frank Langford, of Toronto, being associated with him on the platform. Miss Ella Elson presided at the pipe organ, and Messrs. G. E. and Ernest Burnham with their cornets gave good lead to the hearty congregational singing.

The programme, 'Our Neighbors' was successfully carried out, and the special Rally Day offering taken up after Rev. Mr. Langford had explained its object. The interesting information that two hundred new Sunday Schools had been started in the West this past summer, for which free supplies were given for a period of three months, was among the important facts presented by Mr. Langford.

Besides the responsive readings, hymns and prayer periods, the programme included a temperance recitation by Mary Burnham and Bryar Edmunds, "Little Brother"; recitation by Lawrence Rowland, "Other Boys Like Me," by Walter Sayles, "The Little Brown Girl and I," by Sadie Rowland.

The Canadian Girls-in-Training Group pantomimed the story of the Good Samaritan, those taking part being: Hazel McMahon, Margaret Howard, Flossie McMahon and Bertha McMahon, who presented the introduction. Jean Burnham acted as reader and the other characters were: Priest, Eleanor Fallis; Levite, Wilma Fallis; Wounded Man, Marie Kenyon; Samaritan, Marjorie Sayles; Innkeeper, Elsie Spence.

The reports for the day and for the quarter were read by the secretary, W. G. Rowland, the attendance on Sunday being 242, including nineteen of the teachers and officers of the school; offering $16.35.

The attendance for the quarter was 1,584, average 122; verses recited 801, average 66; collections $69.90, average $4.61.

Rev. Mr. Langford's address on Sunday afternoon included some personal experiences in connection with his visit to Japan and Korea at the time of the World's Sunday School convention, with some very encouraging incidents showing the effective work being done by the missionaries in the Orient.

The girls' choir assisted with the Singing at the afternoon service, the hymn, "Who is on the Lord's Side?" being sung toward the conclusion of the programme.

The anniversary services of the Millbrook circuit will be held as follows: Fallis Line, Sunday, October 5th, at 2.30 and 7 p.m., Rev. R. T. Richards, B.A., B.D., of Cavanville, being the preacher.

Zion, Sunday, October 12th, at 2.30 and 7 p.m., Rev. A. McLaughlin, B.A., B.D., of Keene, preacher.

Millbrook, Sunday, October 26th, Rev. H. B. Kenny, of Belleville, speaking morning and evening, 10.30 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Mr. E. Howard, of Toronto, is visiting his parents, Rev. F. H. and Mrs. Howard, at the Parsonage. Miss Mary Howard returned to Toronto last week to resume her studies at the University. Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Howard accompanied her as far as Whitby.

Mr. Reg. Armstrong, of Bailleboro, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. W. Fred Fallis, on Sunday.

F. A. Mongeau, popular night clerk at the Prince of Wales Hotel, 17 and 19 McGill College Ave., Montreal, Canada, lends his name to further the cause of Tanlac, the treatment that has proved of such great benefit to him.

I got to where I simply had to limp around on a cane. My nerves became affected, my sleep unsound and I felt completely knocked out.

"Six bottles of Tanlac, taken eight months ago, made a new man of me and I have had no further trouble with rheumatism, or my health, since. My nerves are as steady as a die, I sleep fine and feel the same way. Anyone wanting to know from me what Tanlac will do, just phone me here at the hotel."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute.

Over 40 million bottles sold.

Witness said there had been no audit of the Montreal branch during his time there.

No Bad Loans.

Gordon L. Chapman assistant manager of the Toronto office identified numerous items in the books of the company, tracing loans, etc. He said that he had sometimes given credit to customers up to $20,000 when no senior officers of the bank were present. He always had these confirmed later by higher officials. He said no bad or doubtful debts had been made from the Toronto branch since 1919. He swore that as far as he was concerned all reports made to the head office were accurate in figures and that there had never been any falsification of the books.

MAKES NO DIFFERENCE?

With a system of Government control in Manitoba, the Manitoba Free Press declares that beer is being sold illegally and in large quantities in Winnipeg hotels.

With the Ontario Temperance Act in force in Ontario it is declared that beer is being sold illegally and in large quantities in Toronto hotels.

Apparently, then, so far as the sale of beer in this manner is concerned, it makes no difference how Ontario votes on October 23rd.

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING.

The old lesson, so simple and yet seemingly so difficult to learn, that it is impossible to get something for nothing in this world, is once again illustrated by the plight of the Hamilton bank employee who is charged with the theft of a large sum of money from the bank in which he was employed.

This man, like so many others who have fallen by the wayside, played the races.

One of those tips that "can't go wrong" came his way, and he helped himself to $2,000 of the bank's money to wager, with the result that might have been expected.

The tip was a failure, the horse did not win and the victim was minus $2,000.

The sequel can be guessed.

In a mad effort to regain what he had lost he "borrowed" again from the bank, and lost again.

The trouble is that there is always a new crop of men who think they can beat the betting game, and they don't find out that it can't be done until they are penniless—or worse.

SPORTSMANSHIP.

A recent assault case arising out of an incident at a lacrosse game between Weston and Brampton points a moral that could advantageously be studied by followers of sport in general throughout Ontario.

It appears that when a Weston man was ruled off for rough play a spectator—a former ex-Mayor of Brampton—shouted "That's right; put the Weston wood-chopper off," whereupon the Weston trainer struck him in the face, an assault charge followed and the trainer was fined.

But the magistrate made some remarks in delivering his judgment that are worth remembering.

"I am surprised," he said, "at the ex-Mayor lowering himself to make the remark he did. I think we have the poorest class of sportsmanship in Canada of any country in the world, with the exception of the United States. I feel that our sportsmanship is getting worse, and the magnificent games of hockey, lacrosse and baseball are being spoiled."

This may be too sweeping a condemnation, but it is undoubtedly true that in the average Ontario town there is a striking lack of that spirit of fair play and good sportsmanship that should be characteristic of Anglo-Saxons.

The visiting teams, and in many cases the officials, are targets for verbal abuse, and there is an apparent desire to win at any price, that gets a long piece away from the old standards of genuine sport.

The magistrate was not far wrong in his warning.

MUNICIPALITIES AND THE PROVINCE.

In a recent speech Premier Ferguson made an important announcement, but, unfortunately, spoiled it immediately after.

He declared that it was the intention of the Ontario Government to restore to the municipalities certain sources of revenue that had been taken over by the Province.

And then he added that his Government would have to retain these revenues "for the immediate present because of the need for funds."

In other words, the rights of the municipalities are acknowledged, but the Province intends to hold on to the swag just the same because it needs the money.

It has never been accepted as a good defense in a theft case that the accused was hard up, but apparently the Provincial Government regards that contention as valid.

The present administration, of course, is not to blame for encroachment upon the rights of the municipal.

One Provincial Government after another has extended this poaching until it has cut a wide slice out of municipal revenues.

It may be regarded as a distinct gain to have an Ontario Premier admit that there has been usurpation of funds that should have gone to the cities and towns.

But it would be a much greater gain if these revenues were restored at once, while the Province endeavoured to finance itself upon its legitimate sources of income.

THE KNEE BREECHES WILL SURVIVE.

Members of the British Ministry are in for a bad session when the Labor Party holds its annual conference next month, says the London Advertiser. At that gathering it is going to be asked how it comes that Labor Ministers, members of the Cabinet, wear such outlandish things as knee breeches, silk stockings, buckled shoes and cocked hats when they attend court functions.

The rank and file of the party don't like these trappings; some of them snicker at the thought of a coal miner exhibiting his legs incased in silk stockings; others hold that the old hob-nailed boots are far superior to buckled slippers. So all and sundry will train their artillery on the gay breeches and the silk stockings, while such matters as cocked hats and buckled shoes will be subjected to a gas attack.

Who started this business of men wearing knee breeches anyway? A man who plays golf feels that they are as necessary as a putter. He gets the things on and he parades in them; he feels that he is a real golfer. If before he made a hole in five, and with his new trousers he takes seven, well it's the fault of his play; he's off form or something like that. He'd never blame his outfit, in fact he would defend it.

So the Ministers of the Labor Government will do the same. It would be safe to wager a shilling to a twopence piece that they will dig themselves into the trenches and fight for their regalia. So the rank and file of the party can bang away; they can shoot oratorical holes in the breeches and pepper away at the gay cocked hats, but when it's all over the door of the clothes press in the spare bedroom will swing wide and the gay old garments will be found to have escaped without so much as a button having come loose or a silk stocking running a thread.

CANADIAN UNITY.

Some little time ago Sir John Willison made a powerful appeal for a wider knowledge of the French language among English-sperking Canadians. Apart from the general cultural reasons on which the acquition of foreign tongues is urged in all civilized countries, there are, of course, special arguments why French should become generally known in the Dominion. The course of history has given Canada a French-speaking Province, with separate traditions, and a people who are proud of their ancestry, devoted to their religion, and no less loyal to the country of their birth. Fate has decreed that descendants of both British and French stock shall be bound up together in the bundle of their common national life, and the great problem is to secure that notwithstanding their differences of origin and habits of thought, they shall become in the real and best sense a united and mutually respecting community. In the past that happy condition has not been attained to the extent that is desirable, and, indeed, necessary. But the defect has been, and is increasingly being recognized. Influential forces are at work striving to develop a more sympathetic understanding between the two branches of the Canadian family. Their ambition is laudable and deserves the strongest possible support from every Canadian who is concerned that the progress of the Dominion shall be in harmony with the best and finest ideals of Christian civilization and citizenship.

Senator C. P. Baubien, a distinguished French compatriot, recently came to this remote district of Ontario to speak at the dedication of the cairn erected at Port Dover, in the adjacent county of Norfolk, to commemorate the wintering there in 1669-70 of the French Jesuit priests and explorers, Dollier and Galinee. That historic circumstance itself bears witness to the part played by intrepid Frenchmen of those distant days in the exploration of the then largely unknown Dominion of today. To these early French missionaries and travellers was mainly due the discovery of the natural wealth of what is now Ontario—it was reserved to a much later date, and to Scotsmen, the ancien intimes of the French people, to reveal the great west. This region of Ontario and the Upper Lake territory is rich in memories of the days when Frenchmen were dreaming of a vast American empire under the lilies of the old French monarchy. Fate willed it otherwise, but it also willed that the descendants of the one-time rivals should be left to work out their own salvation and their own destiny. By mutual understanding and harmonious cooperation the two peoples of Canada can achieve all, and more than all, that either alone could have accomplished, and by reacting on each other at once broaden and sharpen their intellectual activities.

Surveying the world from the side of mental advancement, one of the outstanding features is the presence side by side of two great literatures, with either of which none other is comparable. They are the heritage of the French and English-speaking peoples, and all down their thousand years of growth they have continually influenced and modified each other. They are separate and yet kin—their genius is different as their languages differ, and yet there have been great writers in both countries who have combined in more or less degree the qualities and the excellencies of each. To be completely in touch with the heart of humanity it is necessary to know both, and knowledge of the language is the key that unlocks these vast treasures of literary glory. Senator Beaubien called English and French the two greatest languages the world has ever known, and in pleading for a more general interest in the French tongue, he pointed to this as one effectual method of convincing our Quebec fellow-citizens that Canadians of British stock desire to know and understand the French mind. Possibly it is too much to expect that every Canadian shall be bilingual, however advantageous that may be. But at least we can all strive towards a better understanding and appreciation in order that joint effort may be more valuable and enduring.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

There seems to be as many groups developing in the plebiscite campaign as exist in the political arena. The Purity Defense League is the latest arrival in the field.

The score of the Orillia-Osler baseball game on Saturday reads like the returns of a straw vote on the O. T. A. plebiscite taken at a church social.

Fire Prevention Week in Peterborough should be made worth while by a general pledge of assistance to the city's fire fighters by a consistent elimination of fire hazards and the abolition of careless habits.

A correspondent to a London newspaper starts off his letter by declaring that he intends to vote "yes" on the first question and "no" on the second on October 23rd. All he'll get out of that will be a spoiled ballot.

It is just as well to emphasize that voters must only place a cross opposite one question or the other. Voting on both renders the ballot of no value.

The thing that strikes the youngsters most favourable in the school changes announced by Premier Ferguson is the cutting down of home work.

The British Labour Party has barred the doors against the Reds. The Communists are not making much progress.

About the only organization that hasn't publicly passed a resolution in regard to the Ontario Temperance Act is the bootleggers' association.

There may be a big silent vote when the plebiscite is taken, but at least the campaign cannot be characterized as a silent one.

Saturday's tag day results show that the people of Peterborough realize and appreciate the good work being done by the Children's Aid Society.

CLEVELAND, September 29 (Canadian Press). — With the recovery of wreckage from the whaleback freighter Clifton, and the sighting of more, efforts to-day were confined to the recovery of the bodies of the twenty-eight men, officers and crew of the ill-fated vessel.

The search is concentrated on the Canadian shore, where it is believed the bodies, none of which had been recovered early today, will be carried.

THE WEATHER

Our last rain has been a particularly heavy one, and now amounts to over 2½ inches, and still more appears to be due. September last year went out much the same way—heavy rain and thunder and lightning. For several years a man named Foster, whose weather predictions have appeared regularly in some of the American newspapers, has been predicting severe droughts over the North American continent for 1925 especially, and 1926 to a lesser degree. He has a large following of believers, but like our old friend, Ira Hicks, his prognostications are poohpoohed by the weather bureaus both of Washington and Canada. — W. P.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, September 30. — Heavy export cattle were lower yesterday from 10 to 20 cents a cwt. The top paid was $7.30 a cwt., and this was only two loads weighing 1,300 and 1,400 pounds respectively. Other loads were taken from $6.75 a cwt. up. For export heifers $6.25 was the average price and choice cows were bought for overseas at $5.25 a cwt. For stores the price range was $5.75 to $6.25 a cwt.

Butchers' cattle were easier, and good loads of handyweight steers sold at $7.75 a cwt. A load of 950-pound heifers brought $6.90 a cwt. One extra good steer, almost out of the baby class, sold at $8.00 a cwt.

There was a heavy run of cows and few of the good cows went as high as $4.00 a cwt. One bunch of heifery cows sold at $3.90 a cwt.

To-day's bulls were practically all bolognas and sold from $2.40 to $3.00 a cwt. Baby beeves sold from $7.75 to $9.00 a cwt. and a few choice handyweight butchers at $6.50. The market was slow at the easier prices and there will be a considerable carry-over to-day.

With over 4,000 sheep and lambs on sale, the market opened with the packers' buyers averse to setting a price on lambs. Sellers did not look for better than an 11-cent bid at the start, although their quoted asked price was 12 cents a pound.

Breeding sheep were moving without trouble at 7 cents a pound and up to 8 cents. One select bunch of lambs sold at 11 1-2 cents for the ewes, but medium lambs only brought 10 1-2 cents a pound.

Hogs were quite steady at $9.25 a cwt. big f.o.b., but the commission houses were generally asking 25 cents a cwt. higher. Packers state they are reducing their bid price to-day to $9.00 a cwt. f.o.b.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, September 30 (Canadian Press). — The export business in grain in Montreal yesterday showed no improvement, and the market was quiet, but firm. Sales of No. 1 Northern wheat were made at 91 1-2 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg option c.i.f. bay ports in the cash market.

Owing to the fact that foreign buyers were not disposed to follow the advance in prices asked for the spring wheat grades of flour, the trade in this direction yesterday was quiet. No change of any importance occurred in winter wheat flour.

A fair volume of business accompanied by a firm price trend tended to create an active atmosphere in the millfeed situation.

A steady demand was made for standard grades rolled oats, and the tone was strong.

The feature of the baled hay market was the increased demand for new crop No. 2 Timothy hay, and the sales were made for October, November and December delivery at $16.25 per ton ex-track.

A fairly large trade was done in eggs for local consumption, and the butter trade was quiet.

Prices of cheese advanced 1-8c to 1-2c per pound locally owing to the better demand from foreign buyers.

QUEBEC BUTTER.

MONTREAL, September 30 (Canadian Press). — At the Quebec Agricultural Co-operative Society auction sale held here yesterday there were 2,200 packages creamery butter offered, of which 600 packages No. 1 creamery sold at 35 3-4c per pound, while 35c per pound was bid for 1,600 packages No. 1 pasteurised creamery, with 36 3-8c per pound asked.

BELLEVILLE CHEESE.

MONTREAL, September 30 (Canadian Press). .... At the United Dairymen's Co-operative auction sale of Belleville cheese held here yesterday, the offerings were 1,467 boxes, of which 654 boxes No. 1 white sold at 17 1-4c per pound, 669 boxes No. 1 coloured at 17 5-16c per pound, and 82 boxes No. 2 coloured at 16 3-8c per pound, while 16 1-8c per pound was bid for 62 boxes No. 2 white, with 16 3-8c per pound asked.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, September 30 (Canadian Press). — Greatly enlarged foreign demand for breadstuffs resulted yesterday in an all-round advance of wheat and rye to the topmost prices yet this season.

The wheat market closed firm, 2 1-4 cents to 3 cents net higher, December 140 7-8 to 141 and May 146 1-2 to 146 5-8 with corn 5-8c to 1 3-8c down.

Oats were 1-4c to 3-8c to 1-2c off.

Provisions were unchanged to 10 cents up.

With export buying of wheat yesterday estimated as reaching the huge total of 2,500,000 bushels and with evidence plain that Europe was also purchasing future deliveries on a big scale, the wheat market showed a strong upward tendency from the outset. Advices were at hand telling of severe damage to trans-Atlantic grain crops and to potatoes as well.

Besides the Liverpool market was higher notwithstanding weakness on Saturday in the wheat market here.

The fact that the United States visible supply of wheat showed an increase of but 740,000 bushels yesterday was also construed as bullish factor. On the other hand, liberal selling here to realise profits acted as only a temporary check to the upward swing of the market.

Noticeable enlargement of the crop movement in the Canadian North-West was likewise virtually ignored.

A THOUGHT.

A GREAT HUMAN RESOURCE.

The value of Pluck is its courage to endure. Pluck never shirks but always works, and this is the sure and the secure way to win. When the chances are thin and the going slow, Pluck gets you to go.

When out of Luck, use your Pluck—when lame, be game. If success should swerve, keep your nerve. Conquer your cowardice with courage.

You say, all this sounds well, but will it work well? And my reply is: Let's turn these thoughts over and see what is on the other side.

Does determination to do come from a faint heart? Is the man who is always at play able to pay? Does a chance winning insure a permanent independence? When you stop trying, do you speed up anything but—failure?

When your Pluck oozes out, is the "time and the tide" of your affairs coming in? Without nerve, what good will happen when something wrong takes place? Is cowardice an asset, or is it a liability?

There is always another side to any subject, and sometimes the "other side" is not so poetical, but much more practical.

Some subjects are so true all the way through that they are all wool and three feet wide. It matters not which side is up on a subject that is true all the way through.

Pluck enlarges possibilities, cowardice diminishes probabilities. Pluck, that is the result of right reasoning, is one of man's greatest resources.

One day a little boy entered a fish-monger's shop.

"Please, sir, I want a haddock."

Fishmonger: "Do you want a Finnan, my boy?"

Little Boy: "No, sir, muvver says it must be a 'fick un'."

NEW ORGANIZATION HELP CANADIANS

Sons of Canada Club Will Assist Canadian Born Citizens.

TORONTO, Sept. 30.—(Canadian Press)—With the ambition of assisting Canadian born, and fostering belief in the Dominion, the "Sons of Canada," a new secret fraternal order has made application at Ottawa for a charter. A number of citizens prominent in civic and Provincial affairs are connected with the new organization.

Strong efforts will be made by the "Sons of Canada" to keep Canadians in their own country. Organizers point to the fact that there are "Sons of England," "Sons of Scotland," and organizations with still other filial attachments, but that there is no distinctively Canadian order.

No politics are to be admitted and the Order is to be non-sectarian. Only men born in this country will be admitted to membership. The society will isaugurate an insurance and sick benefit scheme.

To assist young Canadians to success, the organization will attempt a plan of assisted transportation throughout the Dominion, on the assurance that a position awaits the applicant for such transportation at the end of his journey.

PETERBORO'S GAIN.

Guelph Sorry To Lose Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Dickin.

Speaking of Mr. W. H. Dickin, Peterboro's latest acquisition to its business ranks, the Guelph Mercury says:

"Mr. W. H. Dickin, who has for nine years past been connected with the business of the G. B. Ryan stores in this city, is about to take up his residence in the City of Peterboro, where he is to manage the store of the English Clothiers, Limited, a new organization in Canada. Mrs. Dickin will accompany him to Peterboro, and Guelphites generally will regret to lose this very amiable couple, who have endeared themselves to a large number of citizens through their general good fellowship. Mr. Dickin will be much missed in social and fraternal circles. He has taken a prominent part in the activities of the Kiwanis Club here, is an active worker in St. Andrew's Church, was chairman of publicity of the Guelph Chamber of Commerce during the famous "Made in Guelph Week," and is at present an officer of Waverley Lodge, A. F. & A. M. A distinguishing mark of confidence was shown to Mr. Dickin's ability and qualifications by being named a director of the English Clothiers, Limited. His family will be leaving for their new home next week.

DEACONESSES BARRED.

Anglican Church In Canada Will Have No Lady Members of Synod.

LONDON, Ont., September 30.—In the decision at last night's session of the general synod, the members made it very plain that they wanted no intrusion by women belonging to the order of deaconesses in the affairs of the Church of England in Canada.

The Very Rev. Dean Tucker's resolution to admit women to the General synod on terms of equality with men, brought to the fore again after it had been twice postponed previously, and to restore "formally and canonically the order of deaconesses" was the beginnning of the most earnestly argued debate that the Lower House has listened to this session.

Canon F. G. Scott of Quebec defined woman's first and most honorable duty was bearing of children, and after that has been accomplished she should aid in bringing up other children. He characterized the proposal as worse than that of Dean Shreve, the venerable Nova Scotian, who sought, without success to have use of prayers of oblation in the holy communion service made permissive.

Canon Scott told the delegates that if the Synod passed the Tucker resolutions he would go home disgusted with the church.

STRIKING MATCHES

This was the Job One Man Held for Thirty-Six Years.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Tom Tuthill who worked for 36 years in a London match factory striking matches to test their quality, died recently from blood poisoning contracted while at work. His job, one of the queerest in King George's kingdom, was created for him after he had suffered from infantile paralysis, and needed an easy task.

All day long, day after day, year after year, Tuthill went on with his work, scratching all his matches by hand and passing judgment upon the quality of each fresh consignment from the workrooms. Some years ago he became eligible for a pension from his company but he liked his work and would not give it up.

AMBASSADOR RESIGNS.

No reason for the reported resignation had been given.

The Purity Defence League

Why did Mr. Dougherty, Deputy Attorney-General of the U.S., and the official in full charge of the enforcement of Prohibition in the U.S. tell the Women's Council in Toronto this summer that it is impossible to enforce Prohibition? It was a bold thing to tell people who had gathered for the purpose of hearing that Prohibition could be enforced. But facts, like truth, must come out in the end.

Why did General Williams, Chief of the Ontario Provincial Police, report to the Government that it is impossible to enforce Prohibition or the O.T.A.

Because when the law drives a lucrative business down into the underworld it is impossible to fight all the gangsters and their pals, male and female, short of civil war and wholesale murder on both sides. Keep the traffic where we can see it and control it.

MRS. DAVID DEYELL LEAVES MILLBROOK

Friends and Neighbrs Gathered Together to Give Highly Held Friend a Send-Off.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 30.—On Friday evening, September 19th, the friends and neighbors of Mrs. David Deyell gathered together to present her with a cabinet of silver, on the eve of her departure to make her home in Peterboro.

The following address was read by Mr. W. W. Brown and the presentation made by Reeve Anderson of South Monaghan. Miss Ruth Deyell being also gifted with a silver mug by Reeve Anderson.

Dear Mrs. Deyell,—

Your friends and neighbors have gathered to-night to express their appreciation of yourself and family and their feeling of loss at your going. It is not easy to transplant a young family from the country to the city. It is hard to tear up the roots of the old life and to break away from the old associations. Your family connections on both sides, go back to the old days of the pioneers. You are not unmindful of the days of old or of the tender ties of the past, so it must be hard for you to go. You have our sympathy.

But we believe you have made a wise choice in the interest of your young family, and we wish you God-speed in making the big change.

You will be missed in the community and in the church. We have admired the good fight you have made for independence in difficult circumstances. Your children, too, will be missed. They are a Crown of Glory to you. Such a family is a rare sight in these time. They have done their part in brightening the life of the community.

We wish you all, health and prosperity in your new home in Peterboro.

In token of our good wishes, we ask you, now, to accept these gifts. May they always remind you of loyal friends and true in the townships of Cavan and South Monaghan.

Mrs. Deyell replied in a few well chosen words. She feels keenly the loss of the dear old Centreville friends and eaving the old home, and will always have a warm welcome for any of the Cavan and South Monaghan friends when they come to Peterboro.

TRUE BILL OF MURDER

County Aroused.

The county was aroused by the crime committed on May 25 last, which gave occasion to the charge of murder against Frederick W. McGaughey. Beatrice Fee, 19, who was born in Omemee but had been living in Toronto where she was employed, had returned to her home for the holiday week-end. She was engaged to mary McGaughey, but postponed the wedding day, it is said, because of her fiance's addiction to drink. It had, however, been planned that the marriage should take place this fall, McGauhey promising to give up drinking.

On Sunday evening Miss Fee accompanied McGaughey on an automobile drive and he, crazed by jealousy, it is said, because of stories that his fiancee had paid attention to another man, drew a revolver and shot her four times. She died on Monday evening.

The jury enquiring into the death returned a verdict charging that McGauhey "shot and killed and murdered" Beatrice Fee. One June 2 Magistrate Jessie Bradford committed McGaughey to stand trial on the murder charge.

Forgave Her Lover.

"Please do not go to any trouble about it, Mother," were the last words of the dying girl. "I know he loved me." Miss Fee had previously stated that she believed McGaughey had acted in a drunken rage.

SERVICE AT MARMORA.

Harvest Thanksgiving At St. Paul's Church—Choir Augmented.

MARMORA, Sept. 29. — There was a large congregation at St. Paul's on Sunday morning on the occasion of the Harvest Thanksgiving service which was conducted by the rector, the Rev. P. Caiger-Watson. The church was very prettily adorned, reflecting labour of love upon the part of the decorators. The choir was augmented by members of Deloro choir and also Mr. F. S. Pearce, who ably filled the role of soloist for the first anthem. Messrs. S. B. Wright, W. L. Rigg and R. Hunter composed the orchestra, which rendered valuable assistance. The rector preached an appropriate sermon from Gen. 1.1 and Psalm 24.1. The loose collection was devoted to church expenses. Following is the form of service:

Instrumental — "In the Cloisters."

Processional, "Te Deum," W. Jackson.

Morning prayer to third collect.

Anthem, "Thou Visitest the Earth," Caleb Simper.

Morning prayer to conclusion.

Hymn, "The Sower Went Forth Sowing."

Sermon.

Anthem—"While the Earth Remaineth," J. H. Maunder.

Offertory.

Benediction.

Hymn —"Come Ye Thankful People, Come."

Instrumental, "Cornelius March," Mendelssohn.

The same service with only such alterations as became necessary, was repeated at Holy Trinity church in the afternoon. The same choir and orchestra took part. Here also the congregation was large and representative.

PIE SOCIAL OPENS SEASON AT APSLEY

Moving Picture Show and Dance In New Parish Room.

APSLEY, Sept. 30.—Social activities of the winter season opened on Friday at St. George's Institute and Parish Room with a very successful pie social and moving picture show. A prize was offered for the best pie, judged by the eye only. The judges, Rev. Mr. Ogden, Dr. J. T. Reynolds and Mrs. Buchanan, had a difficult task in deciding the question, but finally awarded the prize of Mrs. Howard Reid. The pies were sold by auction, and another prize for the highest priced pie went to Dr. Reynolds, who paid $3 for the pie made by Miss Marjorie Spence.

A short programme was given between the picture acts, the Rev. Ogden holding the interest of the audience with a splendid reading of two of Drummond's poems. Dr. Reynolds sang in fine voice, "The Bells of St. Mary's," and for an encore, "A Perfect Day." Miss M. Spence sang "Don't You Care" and her class of five violins played very creditably "Mickey."

Two hours were devoted to dancing, which ended a very enjoyable function. After deducting expenses the sum of $35 was realized towards meeting the insurance premium on the Parsonage and Parish Hall.

Pastor Holds Title.

Two lawn tennis championship games were played off on Thursday afternoon, when the holders of the mixed doubles, Rev. C. Spence and Miss M. Windsor, were challenged by Roy and Miss M. Spence. The holders managed to retain their title after a hard-fought three sets, resulting in the following score: 6-4, 2-6, 6-4. In singles, Rev. C. Spence, holder, also retains the title, his opponent, Roy Spence, going to pieces in the second set. He recovered form in the third, which proved very exciting and close. The scores were: 2-6, 6-0, 8-6.

Back From Fairs.

Vernal Windsor, who took his horses to Fenelon Falls and Bobcaygeon Fairs, returned home on Saturday well satisfied with results, winning second place at each. He had a big field to run against at Fenelon Falls, there being no less than nine starters to compete with.

St. George's Parsonage was a hive of industry on Friday and Saturday when a band of volunteers captained by Stanley Windsor took off the shingle roof and replaced it with a ready-made fireproof roofing. Mr. Spence appreciates very much this action of the men, not all of whom are members of St. George's Church. Their voluntary work was a saving of considerable expense.

The Harvest Thanksgiving at St. George's Church will be held on Wednesday, October 8, when the Rural Dean, Rev. T. J. O'Connor Fenton, of Norwood, will be the special preacher.

Harvest Is Good.

Threshing operations are expected to commence in about a week's time. The harvest, while very good, is late, some grain still being in the fields. There will be a tremendous crop of potatoes. The heavy frost of last Wednesday, when the thermometer registered six degrees of frost, made havoc of the garden stuff.

JAPAN'S OBJECTION

cide to follow the admonition of M. Loucheur that the hour is so fatal that the assembly must avoid haste which leads to tragedy and remain in Geneva long enough to deal calmly with the question from every standpoint.

M. Loucheur said "We are all assuming that this Japanese amendment is not aimed at America or the British dominions. If we thought so we would have voted against it immediately."

Dominions Opposed

In the meantime the British delegation did not have an easy day with the representatives of the British dominions. The dominion statesmen held four conferences and discussed the possible effect of the Japanese amendment to cancel the clause of the aggressor article in the protocol, which forbids nations from going to war in contempt of world court decisions. Their attitude was distinctly that of urging a stiff stand against the Japanese demand.

The last world last night was that the British and French viewpoints are absolutely in accord. One of their spokesmen said:—"There are one, two or three directions in which we can move and still satisfy everybody We have absolutely no intention of settling this by grouping powers against powers and bringing pressure to bear upon Japan. We must settle it in agreement with our friends the Japanese."

The swing to Japan has developed because statesmen are beginning to realize that the dividing wall between questions belonging to the internal jurisdiction of a state and questions which clearly are of international scope is exceedingly thin. One of the dominating features of last night's discussion was the insistence that the Japanese issue should be handled not as an issue between Japan and any particular state or group of states, but in the widest international sense.

International Effects

French delegates, who said they saw the justice of the Japanese claims, cited several instances where questions usually accepted as belonging exclusively to the internal jurisdiction of a state have in fact grave international bearing because they effect the rights of many other countries.

One case cited was that of Holland's control of quinine, which is produced practically exclusively by the Dutch East Indies. It was argued that if Holland suddenly placed a restrictive ban on all exportations of quinine the remainer of the world would be justly entitled to raise a clamor.

Another example cited was an assumed decision by England to prevent the exportation of coal to countries absolutely dependent on coal centres for the existence. Still another was American cotton. The United States in preventing the exportation of cotton, or so increasing the price as to render purchase impossible, would, it was argued be committing an act detrimental to international interests and would therefore give rise to a problem which, in equity at least, international and not domestic law should handle.

OPENING ADDRESS IN LINDSAY CASE GIVEN BY JUSTICE LOGIE

Fred McGaughey, Alleged Murderer of Beatrice Fee, Shows Signs of Prison Palor.

JURY SELECTED.

Prisoner Wore a Dejected Expression When He Stood To Be Arraigned.

(By a Staff Reporter)

LINDSAY, Ont. Sept. 30.—Before seven o'clock this morning the court room was filled with spectators to see Frederick McGaughey on trial for his life on a charge of murdering Beatrice Fee on May 25th last. Up until 9 o'clock when the court opened, there were hundreds turned away and about 150 awaited a chance to snatch one of the twelve seats vacated by the chosen jurors.

At five minutes to nine, McGaughey was led into the dock and sat with his head down. His hair had grown during his incarceration and fell over his eyes. Thinner than when he was committed to stand trial and showing a prison palor through the farmer's tan, that marked him as an out-of-doors man, the strain was clearly telling on the accused.

Promptly on the stroke of nine o'clock, Mr. Justic Logie entered the court and the roll of grand jurors and petit jurors, was called. In its presentment the grand jury reported favorably on the county jail, but regretted the two charges of murder to be heard. His Lordship said, Victoria County has a record as a crime free county. "There is always the element of violence in the north part of Ontario, and as long as human nature is human nature it will remain," he remarked. "Conditions are growing better through education and intercomunication that break the loneliness, and I trust that conditions will, in the measurable future be such that there will be no indictment to violence".

His Lordship expressed regret that the small court house necessitated excluding the public, only those who could obtain seats being admitted.

Prisoner Arraigned

When McGaughey stood up to be arraigned, he wore a dejected expression and showed no sign of interest in the charge that he unlawfully murdered Lillian Beatrice Fee. Leslie G. Frost pleaded for him "not guilty", and intimated that the defence would seek to show that McGaughey was insane at the time of the crime. It was not proposed to set up that the prisoner was unfit to stand trial," he said.

In selecing the jury, twenty-nine men were called, of whom the defence challenged eleven and the Crown challenged five,

The following were selected: William Stoke, Roy Sprole, William Golden, James Endicott, W. Hazelton, I. N. Campbell, W. Graham, Isaac Naylor, Joseph Short, Thomas Alsister, I. B. Roger, Jas. Robson.

Those challenged by the defence were: F. Garshaw, Richard Morton, Robert McKenzie, R. O'Neill, Fred Petchill, Lewis Tremeer, V: Alsopp, and L. H. Beecroft. The Crown rejected: Melville Irvine, W. E. Austin, J. A. Farley, H. W. Grant and W. J. Warren.

Opening Address

In his outline of the case to the jury, Peter White, K.C., Crown Prosecutor indicated feelingly the horror of the crime for which the jurors were summoned to try the prisoner. "Our manhood is to be measured by the extent to which we accept the responsibilities of life, and the most is demanded of you in your present capacity,' he said.

On May 24 last this young girl, 19 years of age, left Toronto with her bosom friend, to come to Omemee. They came by appointment with the accused. The accused and Beatrice Fee had been engaged to be married and for some reason there had been an estrangement. When the two young girls came to Miss Fee's father's home they had their noon day meal there and about 4 or 5 o'clock Beatrice Fee is said to have called McGaughey on the telephone and the conversation is said to have indicated that all was not well between them. However it was arranged that they should meet. McGaughey drove over that evening, arriving somewhat later than had been wished by Miss Fee. They had talked of going to Coronation Hall, but were late and came to Lindsay instead. They drove to a garage and he went in and returned to their car with what appeared to be the odour of liquor on him. He stopped the car by the roadside and refused to go on. After a considerable time he was induced to go on under threats that the girls would get out. He turned around and returned to Lindsay to the same place. He came out with two coca-Cola bottles which he put into the car.

They got home and he did not want Beatrice Fee to go into the house, but finally Helen Stuart is said to have threatened to call Beatrice Fee's father.

The Fatal Day.

On Sunday these two girls walked over to a relative of Beatrice Fee, and while they were there the accused, with his mother, drove up in a car and it was arranged that they, with Lawrence McGaughey, a brother of the accused, should go for a drive.

Miss Stuart and Lawrence McGaughey went together and Beatrice Fee and McGaughey in another car. The first two went to Omemee but could find no trace of the second car. Finally Miss Stuart and Lawrence McGaughey went to the house where the four were to have the evening meal and waited until after seven o'clock, without seeing the accused or Miss Fee. Supper was saved for the missing two. After eight o'clock Lawrence suggested that he should go with Miss Stuart to Fred's farm for some mail he expected. It was decided that Miss Stuart should not get out of the car.

As they drove into the lane they did not notice the car, but they did see a light.

On entering the front room Lawrence McGaughey found Dr. Rich, Fred McGaughey and Beatrice Fee. Miss Fee was lying on the bed and had obviously four bullet wounds in her body. Helen Stuart went into the house. Beatrice was calling for Helen, who disregarded the doctor's orders and went into the room.

There was a conversation then which cannot be tendered until His Lordship has decided upon whether there was the conviction of death on the girl that gave her words the same sanctity as though she were here present.

Dr. Rich was in his office when he received the call from McGaughey.

McGaughey met the doctor with the statement, "I'm afraid I've shot a girl."

The doctor will say that McGaughey displayed an extreme anxiety as to whether the girl would get well. When Dr. Rich said Miss Fee was seriously injured, McGaughey said, "Well, I might as well shoot myself."

He drew an automatic revolver, which was snatched away from him. Afterwards McGaughey tried to take paris green.

When McGaughey said he would tell the police the shooting took place in a hold-up, Helen Stuart said: "There's no use in your doing that. Beatrice told me every word of what happened.

Fred McGaughey replied: "Yes, and I'll choke every d——n word of it down your throat."

Witness will tell of hearing shots in the vicinity of a large rock which, the Crown Prosecutor said, will be one of the high spots in the trial. The stone was spattered with blood. An earring and a brooch were picked up there and will be identified.

From this chain of circumstances and statements the Crown will suggest that the only possible conclusion of twelve reasonable men can be that accused shot Beatrice Fee. The Crown will say that killing was murder. If McGaughey shot Beatrice Fee with that revolver, it is murder, unless the accused satisfies you he had an excuse. Not a silly, weak, sentimental, flabby, modern excuse but a reasonable excuse in law according to the Criminal Code.

The defence will rely upon the plea of insanity, that the accused was suffering from a natural imbecility or a disease of the mind to such an extent that he did not know the nature and quality of the act and that he did not know right from wrong. A mere explosion of pent up feelings; a mere outburst of venom because of denial of pent up desires will not suffice. The defence must show that the accused did not know what he was doing and that he did not know that it was wrong. If he knew either that it was wrong or the nature of the act, he can be as mad as a march hare, but he is guilty of murder.

Six weeks before this tragedy there had been a difference of opinion and they arranged they were not to meet each other until 24th May. Three weeks before that date the accused went to Toronto and at that time he had a gun with him.

There will be evidence of the accused's desire to marry Beatrice Fee and of his desire for her.

The Crown Prosecutor closed his address with an outline of the responsibilities of the several counsel. There is no room for reasonable doubt in this case, for by establishing the fact that this man shot the girl, the Crown has discharged the burden of proof resting upon it.

LEAGUE HAS RIGHT.

Conflicts Arising Between Nations Examined By Nations League.

GENEVA, Sept. 30. —(Canadian Press).— Complete accord was reached this morning by three statesmen entrusted with the task of solving the difficulty brought about by the presentation of Japanese of an amendment to protocol on arbitration and security and agreement reached, is satisfactory to the Japanese. This was divulged by M. Loucheur, French member of Committee at noon. Accord will be presented later in the day to sub committee of juridical commission.

The broad basis of solution is that the council of the League of Nations always will have the right to examine all conflicts arising between nations with the view to pacific settlement of such conflicts. Controlling idea behind to-day's agreement concerns the right of Nations involved in the dispute to appeal to council for amicable intervention looking towards the solution.

A GOLDEN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. John Butcher Celebrate Their Fiftieth Anniversary To-day.

In the house where Mrs. John Butcher was born, at 301 Burnham street, seventy years ago, and where she was married fifty years ago, she was preparing this morning to celebrate her golden wedding anniversary.

On September 30th, 1874, Margaret Ingram, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Absalom Ingram, pioneers of the early setlement of the little village of Ashburnham, was married to John Butcher. Mrs. Butcher's mother, born in Scotland, and her father, of English birth, came out to this country with the Rev. Mark Burnham, afterwards rector of St. John's Church. It was the Rev. Mr. Burnham who performed the marriage ceremony half a century ago, when their daughter was wedded to John Butcher, born in Warminster, Wiltshire, England, then 24 years old, while his bride was 20.

Mr. Butcher came to Peterboro in 1864, while the American war was raging, and has been a resident of the city continuously for the past sixty years. For twenty years, he and his wife lived on Rogers street, but for the past thirty years they have lived in the house on Burnham street, were Mrs. Butcher was born, and married.

In 1864, Peterboro, as recalled by Mr. Butcher, was vastly different to the thriving city it has grown to be. Five thousand people comprised the population at that time. George street, on the east side, was built up for only about two blocks, in a portion which commenced somewhere near Simcoe street, where the Dominion Bank now stands, and stopped a little above Hunter street.

Above where the Peterboro Music Company's store now stands there was a large gravel pit, with a pump in the centre, much used by thirsty citizens on hot days. The western side of the street was in better shape. Occupying the space now used by the Toronto Savings and Loan Company, was the Great North American Hotel, a large building, afterwards burned, its three storeys finished in rough casting, its high-placed verandah extending over the street, so that passers-by walked beneath the verandah flooring, with the large columns of the structure between them and the roadway.

For forty-three years Mr. Butcher has been one of the most familiar and best known members of St. John's church. During that time, he occupied the position of sexton, and the beautiful condition of the church grounds was owing to a great extent to his careful and expert attention.

Mr. Butcher still acts as bell ringer for St. John's church.

Another instance of his expertness in work of the sort that has made St. John's church grounds one of the show places of the city is evidenced in the splendid condition of the premises at his own home, 301 Burnham street, where a rank cedar patch and horse pasture of olden days was converted by him into lovely green lawns and pretty gardens.

Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Butcher, five of whom are living. There are three daughters and two sons: Mrs. John Scott, Patterson street; Mrs. A. J. Tovey, of Unity, Saskatchewan; Miss Mary at home; George at home; and Alexander, living on Burnham street. The children will all unite in the celebration which marks the golden wedding anniversary to-day. Of eight grandchildren, two will be present, the oldest and the youngest: Archie Scott, 27 years old, son of the eldest daughter, Mrs. John Scott, and tiny Shirley Butcher, aged two years and three months, little daughter of the youngest son, Alexander Butcher.

This will be the third golden wedding anniversary in the annals of the Butcher family. Mr. Butcher's father celebrated his golden wedding anniversary, also his diamond, or sixtieth anniversary, and his brother also had a golden wedding to celebrate. Mr. Butcher's father lived to be almost 95 years of age, his mother to 90 years.

This evening Mr. and Mrs. Butcher will be entertained by their family at an anniversary supper, after which they will be at home to their friends for the evening hours.

BUFFALO, Sept. 30.— (Canadian Press).— Opium estimated to be worth ten thousand dollars was seized here last night, and two men giving their names as Wesley Render and John Macdonald were arrested. Render told police that they had received the shipment from a man in Prescott, Ontario, who brought it across the St. Lawrence and delivered it at Ogdensburg, N.Y.

The capture was made by Rev. L. E. H. Smith, believed to be a member of the Ku Klux Klan, and his agents who are engaged in vice crusade.

The arrival of cooler weather is turning the attention of Alley Bowlers to their favorite game and it is expected that the season just opening will be the most successful on record. Several new leagues, both in ten pins and five pins are rumoured and there will be many more lady bowlers, the five pin game having attained great popularity among the fair sex. The Water St. Bowling alleys will open to-morrow a sign that the season is at hand.

What can be more discouraging to the young man who is considering his future course in life than the horrible fall-downs amongst ministers of the Gospel in the U.S. We speak of the U.S., because we have the statistics of that country and not of Canada. It is well known how the Protestant clergy of the U.S. have aspired to lead the people into that promised land of perfection which they themselves have reached (sic). It is an actual fact that delinquent ministers of the Gospel in the U.S. have this last few years headed the list of professional wrong-doers. Their peculiar line of misconduct has been murder. Murder arising out of illicit love has figured almost exclusively in their crimes. In one year no less than 37 of these gentry were involved in murder crimes, and as these crimes frequently involved the husband of the woman and the poor wife of the godly man himself in death by poison or other form of violence, these murderers have really been guilty of many more than 37 murders. No other profession and no other single class in the whole range of workers in any walk of life has furnished an equal list of murderers. And yet—and yet it is these infernal hypocrites who, all me with "holy" zeal and eager for the social, physical, and spiritual "welfare of the people" and who demand th. respectable people be "prohibited." It was they who stood in the forefront of the battle line of the Lord of Hosts crying out against those whose boots they were not fit to black or whose names to mention. It has proved discouraging, we say, to many a young man to find that so many of those who set themselves up and who led their people like flocks of sheep to do their bidding, are whited sepulchres. There was one satisfaction connected with it, however, and that was that they were all hanged or executed in the electric chair. Men may be bluffed and mocked, but God will not be. It is to be hoped that many of those of the same profession in that country will hide themselves at any rate for a time behind their sense of shame and ease up on that wonderful crusade which their "brothers in the Lord" waged to bend the necks of decent people under the yoke of their revolting hypocrisy. Which are we to prohibit—preachers or women or our own sins? Prohibition has fearful by-products.

The splendid galeasse was moored alongside and all about her there was great bustle of preparation for departure. Porters moved up and down the gangway that connected her with the shore, carrying bales of provisions, barre's of water, kegs of gunpowder, and other necessaries for the voyage and even Asad and his followers reached the head of that gangway four negroes were staggering down it under the load of a huge palmetto bale that was slung from staves yoked to their shoulders.

On the poop stood Sakr-el-Bahr with Othmani, Ali, Jasper-Reis, and some other officers. Up and down the gangway paced Larocque and Vigitello, two renegade boatswains, one French and the other Italian, who had sailed with him on every voyage for the past two years. Larocque was superintending the loading of the vessel, bawling his orders for the bestowal of provisions here, of water yonder, and of powder about the mainmast. Vigitello was making a final inspection of the slaves at the oars.

As the palmetto pannier was brought aboard, Larocque shouted to the negroes to set it down by the mainmast. But here Sakr-el-Bahr interfered, bidding them, instead, to bring it up to the stern and place it in the poop-house.

Asad had dismounted, and stood with Marzak at his side at the head of the gangway when the youth finally begged his father himself to take command of this expedition, allowing him to come as his lieutenant and so learn the ways of the sea.

Asad looked at him curiously but answered nothing. He went aboard, Marzak and the others following him. It was at this moment that Sakr-el-Bahr first became aware of the Basha's presence, and he came instantly forward to do the honors of his galley. If there was a sudden uneasiness in his heart his face was calm and his glance as arrogant and steady as ever.

"May the peace of Allah overshadow thee and thy house, O mighty Asad," was his greeting. "We are on the point of casting off, and I shall sail the more securely for thy blessing."

Asad considered him with eyes of wonder. So much effrontery, so much ease after their last scene together, seemed to the Basha a thing incredible, unless, indeed, it were accomplished by a conscience entirely at peace.

"It has been proposed to me that I shall do more than bless this expedition—that I shall command it," he answered, watching Sakr-el-Bahr closely.

He observed the sudden flicker of the corsair's eyes, the only outward sign of his inward dismay.

"Command it?" echoed Sakr-el-Bahr. "'Twas proposed to thee?"

And he laughed lightly as if to dismiss that suggestion.

That laugh was a tactical error. It spurred Asad. He advanced slowly along the vessel's waist-deck to the mainmast—for she was rigged with with main and foremasts. There he halted again to look into the face of Sakr-el-Bahr who stepped along beside him.

"Why didst thou laugh?" he questioned shortly.

"Why? At the folly of such a proposal," said Sakr-el-Bahr in haste, too much in haste to seek a diplomatic answer.

Darker grew the Basha's frown.

"Folly?" quoth he. "Wherein lies the folly?"

"In the suggestion that such poor quarry as waits us should be worthy thine endeavor, should warrant the Lion of the Faith to unsheathe his mighty claws. Thou," he continued with ringing scorn, "thou, the inspirer of a hundred glorious fights in which whole fleets have been engaged, to take the seas upon so trivial an errand—one galeasse to swoop upon a single galley of Spain! It were unworthy thy great name, beneath the dignity of thy valor!" and by a gesture he contemptuously dismissed the subject.

"Why, here's a change since yesterday!" he said.

"A change, my lord?"

"But yesterday, in the market-place, thyself didst urge me to join this expedition and to command it," Asad reminded him, speaking with deliberate emphasis. "Thyself invoked the memory of the days that are gone, when scimitar in hand we charged side by side aboard the infidel, and thou didst beseech me to engage again beside thee. And now——"

He spread his hands, anger gathered in his eyes.

"Whence this change?" he demanded sternly.

Sakr-el-Bahr hesitated, caught in his own toils. He looked away from Asad a moment; he had a glimpse of the handsome flushed face of Marzak at his father's elbow, of Biskaine Tsamanni, and the others, all staring at him in amazement, and even at some grimy sunburned faces from the rowers' bench on his left, that were looking on with dull curiosity.

He smiled, seeming outwardly to remain entirely unruffled.

"Why—it is that I have come to perceive thy reasons for refusing. For the rest, it is as I say—the quarry is not worthy of the hunter."

Marzak uttered a soft, sneering laugh, as if the true reason of the corsair's attitude were quite clear to him. He fancied, too, and he was right in this, that Sakr-el-Bahr's odd attitude had accomplished what persuasions addressed to Asad-ed-Din might to the end have failed to accomplish—had afforded him the sign he was come to seek. For it was in that moment that Asad determined to take command himself.

"It almost seems," he said slowly, smiling, "as if thou didst not want me. If so, it is unfortunate; for I have long neglected my duty to my son, and I am resolved at last to repair that error. We accompany thee upon this expedition, Sakr-el-Bahr. Myself, I will command it, and Marzak shall be my apprentice in the ways of the sea."

Sakr-el-Bahr said not another word in protest against that proclaimed resolve. He salaamed, and when he spoke there was almost a note of gladness in his voice.

"The praise to Allah then, since thou'rt determined. It is not for me the quarry since I am the gainer by

CHAPTER XXIII

THE VOYAGE

His resolve being taken, Asad drew Tsamanni aside and spent some moments in talk with him, giving him certain instructions for the conduct of affairs ashore during his absence. That done, and the wazeer dismissed, the Basha himself gave the order to cast off, an order which there was no reason to delay, since all was now in readiness.

The gangway was drawn ashore, the boatswain's whistle sounded, and the steersmen leaped to their niches in the stern, grasping the shafts of the great steering oars. A second blast rang out, and down the gangway-deck came Vigitello and two of his mates, all three armed with long whips of bullock-hide, shouting to the slaves to make ready. And then on the note of a third blast of Larocque's whistle, the fifty-four poised oars dipped to the water, two hundred and fifty bodies bent as one, and when they heaved themselves upright again the great galeasse shot forward and so set out upon her adventurous voyage. From her mainmast the red flag with its green crescent was unfurled to the breeze, and from the crowded mole, and the beach where a long line of spectators had gathered there burst a great cry of valediction.

That breeze, blowing stiffly from the desert, was Lionel's friend that day. Without it his career at the oar might have been short indeed. He was chained, like the rest, stark naked save for a loincloth in the place nearest the gangway on the first starboard bench abaft the narrow waist-deck, and ere the galeasse had made the short distance between the mole and the island at the end of it, the boatswain's whip had coiled itself about his white shoulders to urge him to better exertion than he was putting forth. He had screamed under the cruel cut, but none had heeded him.

HELPLESS AS A BABY THE JUDGE IS "FED UP" WITH GENERAL SYNOD

Chancellor Gisborne, Concurring, Says There Are Too Many Sermonettes.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 30.—The General Synod of the Anglican Church at Saturday's session discussed vigorously the problem of financing and the concurrent issues of readjusting the size of the membership to avoid both bureaucracy and extravagance.

Judge Woods of Qu'Appelle declared that this is his first and last General Synod; that he is no more useful in the deliberations than a baby, and that time and money are in need of some new system of economy.

Chancellor Gisborne, K.C., of Ottawa, concurred in a degree, expressing the view that there are too many sermonettes running through the business, and that most of the clergy are on a sort of sermon spree, while lay delegates are held for a longer period than is convenient. The matter will be gone into more thoroughly later, the Executive Committee welcoming any suggestions that will save time and expense, which amounts now to

MILLIONS WORTH TREASURE SAVED

New Process for, Salvaging Sand-Buried Treasure Has Been Found.

TERSCHELLING, Holland, Sept. 30.—A new process for salving sand-buried treasure of the gold cargo of the British frigate Lutine, which has baffled a century's efforts, has just been put into operation here with every promise of success.

The Lutine was wrecked on a sand-bank near this island during a violent gale on the night of October 9, 1799. Her crew of over 400 perished. Her cargo consisted of several million dollars worth of gold bars and specie

Fifty feet of sand covers the wreck and repeated efforts have resulted only in the recovery of about half a million dollars and the ship's bell now at Lloyds in London. At first divers were put to work, but later machinery was used to get at the wreck through the thick layer of sand by means of suction pumps.

Now a new apparatus invented by a Dutch engineering firm is being tried out. It does away with the suction process and substitutes hydraulic pressure. A tube is driven into the sand and steel grapplers at the bottom seize any objects beneath it. The machine can work in any weather that is not too rough for the salvage vessel to be out.

During three days that the new apparatus worked recently no gold bars were raised, but the indications are certain, according to the inventors that the rights pot has been struck, and hopes are entertained that the rest of the Lutine's precious cargo, estimated at between $5,000,000 and $10,000,000, soon will be wrested from Davy Jones' locker.

CANADIAN FARMERS BEAUTIFYING HOMES

INDIAN HEAD, Sask., Sept. 29.—That the farmers of Western Canada are now giving increasing attention to the improvements of their home surroundings is shown by the fact that they have not only planted 5,250,000 trees distributed from the Canadian Government forestry stations at Indian Head, and Sutherland, Sask., this year, and have also purchased large quantities from private nurseries.

GRATEFUL CHINESE

Statue in Memory of Captain Plant Has Been Completed.

HANKOW, China, Sept. 30.—An obelisk, 36 feet 6 inches high, of Changsha granite, has just been completed as a memorial to Captain Samuel Cornell Plant, the first man to command a merchant steamer on the upper Yangtsze, in 1900. Captain Plant was previously river inspector of the Chinese maritime customs. During his lifetime he did much for the furtherance of trade in the interior of China. He died at sea in 1921.

The monument, which has yet to be unveiled, stands on the left bank of the Yangtsze gorges at Hsin T'an rapids, thirty-five miles above Ichang. It was built by public subscription. Its total cost was $15,000 Chinese currency.

"Oh, for the wings of a dove," sighed the poet.

"Order what you like," rejoined the host, "but I should prefer the breast of a chicken."

PARISH SUPPER AT ALL SAINTS CHURCH

Social In Parish Hall Last Night Included Musical Programme.

A fitting climax to the Harvest Thanksgiving festivities at All Saints' church was the fowl supper and concert in the Parish Hall last night.

Promptly at six p.m. the first guests sat down to partake of the good things prepared by the ladies of the congregation and there was no let-up from then till eight, and over four hundred enjoyed the bountiful repast.

After all had been satisfied a short programme was given by members of the choir. Vocal solos by Miss Bates, Mrs. Trotter, Messrs. Cooper and Willis, a reading by Mrs. Connolly, a duet by Messrs. Cooper and Willis and a trombone solo by Mr. Gilbert were all well received.

During an interval in the programme the Rector, Rev. J. D. Paterson, in a short address, called the attention of the audience to the improvements that had been made since the last congregational social in April. He expressed his thanks to all those who had contributed either money or labour, to this necessary work. Mention was made of the organization of troops of Boy Scouts and Girl Guides, as well as a Men's Club so that the building might be used for more than one hour of a Sunday afternoon. The renovations had been completed and it was now up to the members of the church, both young and old to occupy the plant and produce the goods for which it was intended, that is to say, Christian citizens who would be a credit to their church and city. In conclusion he thanked the congregation for their loyal support in his first period of labor in the parish.

Another pleasing interlude in the musical programme was the auction of the surplus of pies and cakes. Mr. Edi Waudby acted as auctioneer and his ready wit kept the sale proceeding briskly until all was disposed of. The National Anthem then closed a very enjoyable evening's entertainment.

Heaviest Casualties Known To Modern Chinese Warfare.

(By D. C. Bess, United Staff Correspondent)

SHANGHAI, Sept. 30. — Four thousand Chinese soldiers have fallen in the fierce fighting raging at the Gates of Shanghai, — the heaviest casualties known to modern Chinese warfare.

Machine gun fire and artillery bombardments continued to-day, with both sides digging in along the railroad near Sungkiang.

Wounded soldiers of the Chekiang army are streaming into the city many of them seeking shelter in the foreign settlements, which are already crowded. To-day about 400 badly wounded arrived.

ITALIAN GIRL HAPPY

Queen Elena of Italy Has a Real Mother's Heart.

ROME, Sept. 30.—Queen Elena of Italy has a mother's heart, and an exceedingly sharp eye for anyone especially any child, who seems to be needy or in trouble. Recently when the Queen was motoring near San Rossore, the hunting lodge in Tuscany where the royal family spends the summer months, she saw a little girl of eight or ten years of age, barefoot and clothed only in a few rags.

Calling the child Queen Elena spoke kindly to her, asking her name and where she lived. The next day a grand footman brought little Beppina a parcel containing a pair of stockings, one of which was filled with sweets and cakes, while the other contained a purse with money to buy her a frock. A few days later the Queen received a letter, badly written and worse spelled, which said:

"Your Majesty,—

"Your munificient present has caused me the greatest joy. My father has taken the money; my brother the cakes; and my mother the stockings.

"Your most devoted,

"Beppina."

LEAGUE COMPROMISED.

Army of 25,000 Wahibis Troops Surround Holy City.

(By Henry Wood, United Press Staff Correspondent).

GENEVA, Sept. 30.—The League of Nations Council has compromised with Japan and saved the protocol of arbitration and security.

Although it remained for the Assembly to take definite action, League leaders indicated that a basis for ending the deadlock had been found in private conversations which were still in progress early to-day.

The issue—Japan's insistence that the League interfere in purely Domestic affairs, has been settled in favor of the Japanese. While the latest amendment to the protocol which is to be made the foundation for world peace and security was declared unacceptable, the Council was unerstood to have agree to accept Ambassador Adatis first amendment, offered last week.

This amendment provides that the League Council has the right to use conciliatory efforts, even after the Hague Court has decided that a question in dispute is a domestic affair.

FATAL FALL ENDS HUMAN FLY'S LIFE

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Sept. 28.—George Oakley, "human fly," of Pasadena, Cal., died here as the result of injuries he received in a fall from the fourth story of a bank building.

Oakley had climbed up the outside of the building, steadying himself by clinging with a cane to an automobile inner tube which his wife held down to him from the windows above. The tube broke and Oakley plunged to the sidewalk, narrowly missing spectators.

Progress or Reaction

Ontario Electors Must Choose

THE issue of the plebiscite of October 23 is: Shall the sale of intoxicating liquor as a beverage continue to be prohibited, or the traffic be re-established and conducted by the Government? ¶ Since September 16th, 1916, the legalized sale of liquor for beverage purposes has been prohibited. During eight years The Ontario Temperance Act has wrought a moral, social and economic transformation, gradual but real. ¶ A new generation knows nothing of the evils of the liquor traffic before the O.T.A. came into force. Older generations may have forgotten. ¶ Think of it! There is not a man or woman 29 years of age who has legally seen the inside of a bar-room or liquor shop in the Province of Ontario. ¶ Booze is banned! It is a discredited and dishonored outlaw. Now, it wants to come back. It seeks not only re-instatement, but that the Government itself shall be an active partner.

Do You Remember?

The old-time Bar-Room and Liquor Shop, with their disgusting sights and sounds and smells;

The staggering, cursing, drunken men who jostled us on the streets and on the cars—particularly on holidays or at public demonstrations—and who filled our jails;

The destitution, misery, wretchedness, squalor, filth and disorder in many hovels that might, and should, have been homes;

The vice, the immorality, the crime, the debauchery, incited by liquor, that appalled good citizens.

The O.T.A. Has Made Good

Contrast those conditions with the situation today. The Ontario Temperance Act has brought immeasurable improvement. Drunkenness has decreased. Crime has been lessened. Homes are happier. Children have been given a better chance. Savings Bank deposits have increased. All down the line, PROGRESS has been written into the history of Old Ontario!

Official records prove all this.

The following table shows that, in Ontario under the O.T.A., there has been a substantial decrease in the offences that are usually associated with drink:

	1914	1922
Assaults	1,627	756
Cruelty to Animals	1,172	256
Vagrancy	4,703	1,507
Keeping and Frequenting Bawdy Houses	802	352
Loose, Idle, Disorderly	6,411	1,736
Drunkenness	17,703	10,063

The number of cases of drunkenness and disorderly conduct in Ontario's three largest cities in 1914 and 1923 were as follows:

Year	Toronto	Hamilton	Ottawa	Total
1923	5,583	383	376	6,342

In Toronto, from 1914 to 1923, the increase in the average attendance of all city schools, public and high, per thousand of population, was 57 per cent. The effect of this upon higher citizenship and better condition of life is incalculable. Prohibition means better men and women, physically, mentally and morally.

Note the Opinion of our Manufacturers.

"Does Prohibition, under the O.T.A., result in more comfortable homes and better supplies of food and clothing for wives and children?"

When this question was asked of leading Ontario manufacturers by the Ontario Board of License Commissioners, 1,165, or 82 per cent., answered "Yes", while only 239, or 17 per cent., said "No".

A moment's reflection on the ever-increasing automobile traffic will convince any thoughtful man or woman that lives are safer under Prohibition. With booze back, our streets would be places of constant peril to life and limb.

All Systems of Government Sale Have Failed

So-called "Government Control" has proven a dismal failure wherever tried. Drinking, Drunkenness and bootlegging have reached appalling proportions. Every Canadian Province that has tried any form of "Government Sale" has already learned a hard lesson.

Take BRITISH COLUMBIA: Hon. H. H. Stevens, M.P., in a public address in Vancouver recently, declared:

"Never, in the history of the country, was bootlegging comparable in magnitude and murderous results to what it is today."

Or, MANITOBA: Figures furnished by the Chief of Police of Winnipeg show an increase of 45 per cent. in the number of drunk and disorderly cases in the first five months under Government Sale, as compared with the corresponding five months of the previous year under Prohibition.

Mayor Farmer recently declared to the Winnipeg "Tribune": "There is open violation of the New Government Sale Law in Winnipeg."

The Winnipeg "Free Press" says, editorially: "Winnipeg has bars keeping open in broad daylight in which beer and whiskey are sold. There is no pretence of secrecy about it."

And finally, QUEBEC: The following resolution was unanimously adopted by the Presbytery of Montreal, April 15th, 1924:

"That we regard it to be a patriotic duty to make it known that the drug traffic flourishes here as never before and is on the increase, bootlegging flourishes in and from this Province as never before, that drunkenness is on the increase and that the Quebec system of Government Control is socially injurious and not a success."

Ontario Must Hold the Line

Let Ontario citizens make no mistake about the inevitable result of their votes on October 23rd.

If a majority vote for "Continuance", it means that we will have a better law more effectively enforced, with correspondingly improved results. The Government, through the Prime Minister, has definitely pledged itself to "strengthen" the Act and "give it active and vigorous enforcement".

If a majority vote for "Sale", it means the re-establishment of the old discredited Liquor Traffic, in a guise of respectability under a system that makes the Government the bar-tender and every citizen a partner, acting as sale agent for the brewers and distillers and making profit for them out of the destruction of life and happiness.

The Ontario Plebiscite Committee, uniting the temperance forces of Ontario, calls upon all who love their Province and wish its continued and increasing prosperity and the happiness of its people to VOTE FOR THE LAW that has accomplished immeasurable good, and not for a return of the traffic that has wrought such havoc in the past, and would do it again.

1 Are you in favour of the continuance of The Ontario Temperance Act?	X
2 Are you in favour of the sale as a beverage of beer and spirituous liquor in sealed packages under Government control?

The Ontario Plebiscite Committee

WASHINGTON WIN THEIR FIRST PENNANT WITH YOUNGEST LEADER

Senators Step Into the Spotlight After Forty Years in American League.

JOHNSON'S TRIUMPH

Veteran Pitcher Shares Glory With Manager Harris—Play Giants Saturday.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(Canadian Press).—Washington yesterday clinched the first pennant it has had since breaking into big league baseball ,exactly forty years ago, and the flag-bearer of the American League, will fight it out with the New York Giants, four-time National League champions, in the world's series starting next Saturday at the capital city.

By defeating the Boston Red Sox yesterday afternoon the Senators brought to a climax one of the most spectacular diamond campaigns in the history of baseball and accomplished the downfall of the New York Yankees, once-proud world's champions who now repose irrevocably in second place, two and a half games behind the leaders.

The Yankees have two games to play with Philadelphia, today, while Washington has one more with the Red Sox but regardless of the outcome of these, Miller Huggins must step off the American League throne after a three year reign in favor of Stanley Harris—pilot of the Senators and the youngest manager who ever led a major league club to victory.

Dramatic Achievement.

Washington's rise this year under the aggressive leadership of the 28-year-old Harris, a major league only five years and experiencing his first managerial test, is one of the most dramatic achievements in baseball annals. This fighting youngster will meet one of the greatest strategists of the game when he takes the field against John McGraw, gray-haired "master mind" of the Giants.

Sharing the glory of Washington's triumph with Harris are Walter Johnson, one of the greatest pitchers of all time, and Clark Griffith, now president and former manager of the club. In his eighteenth season Johnson has been the mainstay of the team's twirling corps and will realize a lifelong ambition to pitch in a world's series. Griffith, the "old fox," is credited with being the man behind the gun in the Senators campaign and having had much to do with the club's successful strategy.

Up From the Ruck.

Washington climed slowly to the top. From seventh place after a month of campaigning in May, they rose to fourth position the middle of June and to second on July 19. Shortly afterward they had a brief experience at setting the pace, only to have the Yankees sweep back to second position until, August 28, when they dislodged the Yankees with a 11 to 6 victory of the hugmen. Thereafter Washington was never headed.

The last series with New York here, in which Washington took three out of four games, proved the turning point of the race. It gave the Senators the added bit of confidence they needed for the final dash and took something of the edge of Yankee hopes.

Hornsby Sets Up Two New Baseball Records

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 29.—Rogers Hornsby, Cardinal second baseman to-day took a place beside the greatest hitters in baseball history. In the season closed here yesterday. Hornsby established two new records one in batting average and the other in leading his league for fifth consecutive season. Hornsby finished with 227 hits in 142 games making a season's average of .42351, four points above George Sisler's mark of two years ago.

Hornsby failed in his effort to lead the league in runs scored. He tallied only once in the double header yesterday and thus raised his total to 121, which ties Frankie Frisch of the New York Giants.

EPINARD'S LOSS LAID TO HAYNES

Generally Believed That With Rider Like Sande the French Colt Would Have Won.

ONE MORE CHANCE.

NEW YORK, September 30. — What would have happened with Earl Sande up on Epinard? That was a question asked by many a keen follower of thorough bred racing after the dust of the second international special had well settled, and it was usually answered by the inquirer with the statement that Sande would have brought the French colt home a winner. Epinard has been unfortunate in the first two of his three contract races. In the first at Belmont Park over the six-furlong route, he was the victim of bad racing luck, although, in view of the ride he received at the hands of Haynes in the Aqueduct number, these questions naturally arise: If a Sande had had the mount in the first event would he have got into difficulties in the first place? And when he found himself there would he not have been able to get out in time to overcome that three-quarters of a length beating Epinard received at the hands of Wise Counsellor?

That Epinard was better than his opponent at Aqueduct hardly admits of argument. Haynes is not the peer of the leading American jockeys of to-day, nor did he rank as a first-class rider before he went to France. In the opinion of leading horsemen who witnessed the event it was Haynes' faulty ride in his great race in England last year that gave the filly Verdict a victory by a neck at the end of a mile and a furlong journey on Newmarket Heath. Racing luck did not figure in the Aqueduct race for Haynes could have sent Epinard on without taking him back. The colt still could have won had his jockey started his drive when he should have, for Epinard was running over the winner at a terrific clip at the wire.

Pierre Wertheimer has one more opportunity to vindicate his belief that he has a colt that is the master of any horse in America. Over the mile and a quarter racing luck should play a little part, and under a competent rider at Latonia a real test of thoroughbred quality may develop. All but Wise Counsellor, Ladkin and Zev, of those who opposed the French colt in the first two tests in the east, must be eliminated as contenders in the third and the Rancocas colt will have to improve a lot more to be dangerous. The test of Saturday would indicate Wise Counsellor is a sprinter, for he was stopping at the end. Colonel Matt Winn said at Aqueduct that he expected a field of ten, about evenly divided between the East and the West, to go to the post on October 11th against Epinard. That is too many in view of the results of the first two races, as only a few of the many eligibles are likely to have a chance to come home in the money.

BOSTON CHEERS NEW CHAMPIONS

FARCE AT CHICAGO.

BOSTON, Sept. 29.—Washington won its first American League pennant by defeating the Red Sox here to-day 4 to 2, and earned the right to meet the New York Giants in the world's series which is to open in Washington on Saturday. When the last Boston player was out in the ninth inning and the victory of the Senators was assured, a crowd of 15,000 Boston fans cheered the visiting team as it came from the field. Clark Griffith, the veteran owner, Stanley Harris, the "boy manager" and Walter Johnson, famous pitching ace who will take part in his first world's series after eighteen years in the big leagues were applauded in turn.

Fred Marberry, relief pitcher of the Senators, who held Boston score less for the last six innings to-day, will be named the hero of this deciding game. Score:

Washington	120	000	010—4 13 1
Boston	101	000	000—2 9 1

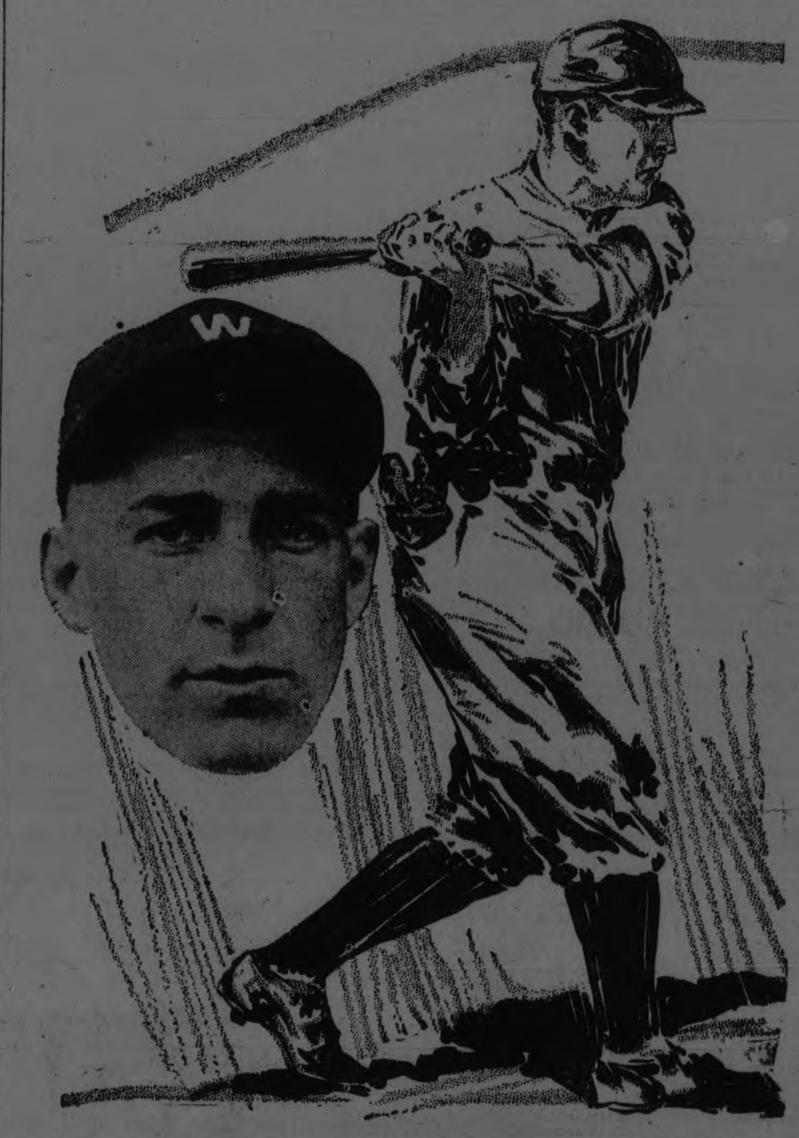
HARRIS AND BUSH DELIVER AS MANAGERS

Thrust Overnight Into Pilot's Jobs, They Make Good With Vengeance—Harris Has Been Outstanding Success as Senators' Leader—Directs Team To First Pennant.



"DONIE" BUSH AND STANLEY HARRIS, TWO GRIFFITHIAN MANAGERS WHO HAVE SCORED A SIGNAL SUCCESS.

BY BILLY EVANS

Baseball is crammed full of uncertainties.

Three years ago Stanley Harris was merely the second baseman of the Washington Nationals, "Donnie" Bush played utility roles for the same team.

Managerial aspirations were far removed from both. Harris yearned for the day when he would supplant Eddie Collins as premier second baseman of the American League. Bush was content to stick around through his ability to fill in at third, short or second.

Clyde Milan outfielder of the Washington club, managed the team that year. He met with indifferent success and at the close of the season was let out. He had succeeded George McBride, who for years starred at shortstop for the Nationals.

During the winter the air was filled with rumors. Griffith admitted dickering with Chicago for Eddie Collins. The White Sox insisted on getting Stanley Harris in the trade, so there was nothing doing.

Bush a Surprise.

The announcement that "Donie" Bush, just the utility man on the club, would manage Washington for 1923, was the biggest baseball surprise of the year. Bush hadn't been figured in the running.

In all probability Bush had as much success with the Washington club last season as any manager would have had. He finished in the first division, fourth. No one had really expected more of the club.

Then, for reasons that have never been divulged, Bush, who had been figured a success, was released. To succeed him Griffith named Stanley Harris, his youthful second sacker, still in the twenties.

The appointment of Harris caused as big a sensation as did the selection of Bush. Most of the experts looked for Peckinpaugh to get the job. Some figured the burden of managing the club might ruin the play of one of the game's leading second sackers.

Big things have happened in three years for both Harris and Bush.

Harris' Showing Great.

Harris has been a whale of a success at Washington. The great showing of his team stimulated new interest in the American League race.

Bush, desposed at Washington, was made manager of the Indianapolis team of the American Association. It was there that he first gained fame as a player that won for him a chance with the Detroit club, where he starred for years.

Taking a seventh-place club, Bush has been one, two, three since the start of the season and has a great chance to win a pennant with a club that was never considered in the running.

Looks as if Clarke Griffith knew something about the type of player suited for managing, in his selection of Bush and Harris. Both have made good with a vengeance.

SOCCER NOTES.

On Saturday afternoon the Quaker Oats and the Thistles meet in the Phelan Charity Cup final at King Edward Park. Kick-off at 3 o'clock. Referee, Jack Clark. Woollens and Vets have not a game.

Soccer fans regret the sudden death of Mr. James Sumner, who played with the Thistles last year and the Greybirds this season. He died from an accident while out hunting.

After many years of faithful work on behalf of soccer in local circles, Mr. Fred. Sutcliffe, member of the Senior Executive, has intimated that he will be leaving the city to take up residence in Toronto. He was the Secretary of the P. and D. F. A. when it was organized after the war, and has held the position of Ontario Football Councillor on behalf Peterborough association. There has not been a more faithful worker in the interest of the good old game. What is Peterborough's loss will be Toronto's gain.

FIRST GAME AT OTTAWA

White Sox and Giants Stop for Exhibition in Canada Oct. 12.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30. —Dick Kinsella, advance agent for the White Sox and New York players who are to tour Europe next month, announced that the first exhibition game would be staged Oct. 12 at Ottawa, Ont. Kinsella left for Scotland on the steamship Empress and promises no delays after the players sail from Quebec City, Oct. 15. Games will be played at Liverpool, London Paris, Berlin and many other points.

POSPONED GAMES

National League
Philadelphia at New York, rain. Only two games scheduled.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

Who will be selected as the most valuable player in the National League for 1924?

Now that Walter Johnson, famous star of the Washington club, has been voted that honor in the American League, fandom is busy doping out the National situation.

With the National League selection goes not only the honor but an additiional bonus of $1,000. This makes it more interesting from the players' angle.

There are many who believe that "Dazzy" Vance Brooklyn's pitching ace, will be accorded the honor in the National League.

Vance is having the greatest year of his career. His brilliant work has made the Brooklyn team a pennant contender. His pitching has held the club up at all times.

The fact that Johnson, star pitcher, was picked as the most valuable player in the American League, may help the case of Vance in the National League.

It is the history of every pennant winner that one member of the pitching staff stands out. Johnson has played that part for Washington, Vance for Brooklyn.

There are many things to recommend Vance as the most likely choice for the most valuable player in the National League.

He has made a pennant contender out of Brooklyn, given little or no consideration by the experts. He has the record for the most consecutive games won among the pitchers. He has inspired the Brooklyn club from the start of the season.

It is hard to see how Vance can be stopped by any other player in the National League, although Cuyler of Pittsburgh, Yde of the same team and many others have performed valiantly.

What a card it would be if Brooklyn, like Washington had won the pennant, to have Walter Johnson, most valuable player in the American League, in the opening game of the world series.

NURSE DROPS ACTION

Miss Irene McEwen Must Pay Costs to Woodstock Hospital.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Sept. 30.—The two actions brought by Miss Irene McEwen, former nurse-in-training at the Woodstock general hospital, one against the hospital trust and superintendent for wrongful dismissal and the other against Henry A. Little for alleged libel, were dismissed by Justice Riddell in supreme court Monday when the plaintiff refused to go on with the trial.

The wrongful dismissal case was called first and Justice Riddell announced that he would try this without a jury. H. B. Neely, counsel for the plaintiff, at once objected, but the judge was firm in his ruling. Mr. Neely then intimated that the plaintiff did not propose to go on with trial, and the action was declared dismissed, with costs payable by the plaintiff to the defendant.

NEWS BAILIEBORO

BAILIEBORO, Sept. 30.—Mr. John Nile of Calgary is visiting friends at Bailieboro. Mr. Nile resided here from his childhood until he became a young man when he went west to farm in the new farming country. He has not been back to his old home for over twenty years, and states that he can notice a vast improvement in Ontario since he visited it last.

Mrs. David Deyell and family have moved from the farm to their new home in Peterboro, after having sold their farm to W. W. Brown of Centreville, and disposed of their farm stock and implements by public auction Friday afternoon. Everything sold well at the sale and the proceeds amounted to somewhere in the neighborhood of two thousand dollars. Jas. Roddy acted as auctioneer.

CALL 125 WITNESSES FOR DELORME TRIAL

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—There will be a host of witnesses called for the third trial of Abbe Adelard Delorme, on the accusation of murdering his half-brother, Raoul Delorme judging by the subpenas that were issued Monday.

Detective Lajoie, who took a prominent part in the case, started to-day to serve 125 witnesses with subpenas to appear at the trial, which starts in a week's time. A curious situation will arise at the opening of the trial, for while counsel for the curator of the accused's estate will seek to convince the judge that Father Delorme is entitled to another sanity trial and that he is insane and unfit to stand trial, counsel for Father Delorme himself will oppose this and will insist that the trial proceed on its merits.

The Abbe persists he is a sane man and will strenuously oppose any attempt to have another jury sanity trial.

M'CORMICKS TO MEET LAKEVIEWS HERE SATURDAY

Crack Junior Teams Will Clash In Second Game Of Final Series.

SHOULD BE A CROWD.

Toronto Papers Enthusiastic Over Saturday's Spectacular Game.

The Toronto papers are unanimous in pronouncing last Saturday's game between Lakeviews and McCormicks the best minor league game ever staged in Toronto. The Star declares that it was the smartest game played in Ontario on Saturday and The Telegram states that it was such a brilliant battle that many Toronto fans are going to make the journey to Peterborough on Saturday to see the second clash between the two clubs.

The largest crowd that ever saw a junior game here should be at Riverside Park Saturday, when Whitehouse and Rasson resume their pitching duel after seventeen innings with honours even. McCormicks are a smart ball club, and the Lakeviews will have to be at the top of their form to get the verdict over the Toronto champs. However, the local crew are full of fight and are determined to bring the Ontario junior championship to Peterborough for the second year in succession.

The Lakeviews have been under heavy expense all season and a big gate on Saturday is their last home game of the year is very badly needed. In view of the remarkable game of last Saturday and the Lakeviews' fine showing all year, the stands should be crowded for the big game.

NORTHERN ONTARIO HAS GREAT FUTURE

Hon. Charles McCrea Says Canada's Greatest Asset Is Her Minerals.

HAMILTON, September 30.—Hon Charles McCrea, Provincial Minister of Mines, addressed the Canadian Club last night on the future of Northern Ontario.

Northern Ontario, he ventured, is Canada's greatest asset, and will be for many years to come. No man living, he said, could predict the future of mineral wealth there. No part of Canada offered such advantages to youth bent on accomplishing great things. There was room enough for fifty Donald Smiths, he said.

Its present production of mineral wealth was between seventy-five and eighty million dollars a year. Of this sum sixty millions was distributed in wages and purchases of supplies.

Two factors necessary in the development of the north were that the world should know more about this part of Canada, and that capital should flow in abundantly.

The Minister said that his recent mission to England had been successful.

He was proud to say that the British capitalists had been favorably impressed. Soon he believed millions of British capital would flow into Northern Ontario.

THEATRES

"THE TEN COMMANDMENTS."

In the gallery of theatrical and motion picture notables appearing in "The Ten Commandments," to be presented at the Grand Opera House to-day and to-morrow, Theodore Roberts for many reasons stands out. He is America's most experienced portrayer of "character." The De Mille production fitly rounds out his long and successful career by giving him opportunity to delineate one of the half-score greatest characters of history, the Hebrew prophet Moses. Though it may sound queer to say it, the movie Moses of Roberts may impress itself on after generations a good deal more than the "still" Moses of Michael Angelo.

Telling of his experience in the movie-making, Mr. Roberts recently said:

"We worked in a desert region the counterpart of that section of Egypt traversed by the Children of Israel in their flight. Alongside a vast reproduction of one of the cities mentioned in the Exodus, there was Tent City housing a personnel and equipment five times as big as 'the world's greatest show,' Ringling's or others. Transportation was wholly by sand sled, and it will give you some idea of our commissary when I state that 7,000 sandwiches and 3,500 pieces of cake were required for the daily 'location' lunch.

"After standing on the Rock of Moses all day facing the sea, I was so benumbed by cold that my next role was the actual one of patient in the camp hospital. The drapes of Moses were—er—exceedingly airy. Another difficult matter was the long white hair and beard, gummed on most laboriously, then kited by the west wind.

"But there were compensations. The mechanical devices employed in picturing the rolling back of the waters of the Red Sea, so that the Children of Israel can cross on dry land, were the most marvelous things I ever saw in all my years in the movies. And the work of my colleagues, the 250 Yemenite Jews from Palestine, surpassed acting—it was Nature and truth itself."

ROBERT B. MANTELL.

At the Grand Opera House, on Friday and Saturday, October 3 and 4, what promises to prove a most notable engagement will take place, for America's favorite tragic actor, Robert B. Mantell, supported by that charming and talented leading woman, Miss Genevieve Hamper, and a capable cast, will appear in an impressive series of the world's matchless plays—Friday night, "Richelieu"; Saturday matinee, "As You Like It"; Saturday night, Shakespeare's thrilling historical tragedy, "Richard III." With the exception of "Richelieu," the plays are by the immortal Shakespeare, of whom Robert Mantell has been a devoted student and follower for over thirty years. The appearances of this distinguished tragedian become more important as the stage turns farther away from the standard of the classic acting which he represents, and there can hardly be any question of his right to be called the most important figure now to be seen in that field of drama which has produced the greatest names in stage history. "GINGHAM GIRL" CHARMS AUDIENCE

DANCERS ARE GOOD.

"The Gingham Girl," a clever musical comedy, reminiscent of Gilbert and Sullivan, charmed a packed audience of first-nighters at the Grand Theatre last night.

As a musical comedy classic, "The Gingham Girl" deserves to be rated with "Sally," "Little Nellie Kelly" and other noted productions that made the 1923-24 season one of rare distinction.

Daniel Kusell, the producer, has achieved many beautiful and striking effects in the three acts and four scenes which constitute the play. The drops and costumes used in the second act are elaborate and splendid in contrast with the pretty and quaint setting of the first.

To Madelein McMahon, as Mildred Ripley, "The Gingham Girl," credit for much of the audience's unceasing enjoyment is due. Her demure manner is appealing, and she fits with grace into the part of an innocent, serious country girl, whose one ambition in life is realized through determination.

Eddie Fetherstone plays with her, supplying much of the comedy of the show. He, too, is a country boy, fresh and buoyant, supplying laughter with every move and gesture. But he demonstrated that his range of ability was not confined to comedy by any means. In more serious moments of the play he was as good as in the lighter parts.

Lillian Young and Jack Waldron in their eccentric songs and dances were exceptionally clever. Miss Young attracted by her personality. The charm of this young actress is irresistible.

"The Gingham Girl," which played in London last night, contained half of the original company which played with great success for months in New York. Martnez and Sanai in three specialty dances were probably the most polished stars in the company. They were brought from France in 1922 to play in the Zeigfeld Follies. Two dances particularly, the famous Apache and dance eccentrique, they execute with skill worthy of the best on Broadway.

There is little or no plot to "The Gingham Girl." It is in the lines, the songs and the dances that the show appeals. An atmosphere of freshness and vim and vigor on the part of the chorus girls is maintained throughout.

Undoubtedly "The Gingham Girl" will be one of the best musical comedies that will be in London this year. Better can hardly be expected, for better is difficult to find. Upon the success this comedy meets during its three days' stay in London will depend whether or not more plays of this calibre will be presented here this year.

"The Gingham Girl" has hardly a flaw. It "caught" last night's audience, and should prove one of the most popular shows of the season.—London "Advertiser."

AT THE CAPITOL.

"THE FEMALE."

"The Female," starring Betty Compson and adapted from the popular magazine serial, "Dalla, the Lion Cub," by Cynthia Stockley, opens tomorrow at the Capitol Theatre.

Miss Compson in the title role is known as "the lion cub" because in infancy she was lost in the jungle of South Africa and mothered by a lioness until rescued by her guardian. She meets Colonel Valentia, a young Englishman, at a dress ball in the Grand Hotel at Johannesburg, and falls in love with him. He is attracted to her, but their friendship is rudely broken when she hears a malicious conversation engineered by an English woman who is in love with Valentia.

Noah Beery, as Dalla's guardian who is in love with her, proposes that she marry him and promises that she need not be his wife until after she has spent three years in England learning to "be like the Englishers." She accepts, and in three years returns as a beautiful, cultured, perfectly gowned woman of fashion.

Dalla continues to forestall De Beer's (Berry's) advances and goes on a lion hunt engineered by Valentia. They have plunged far into the veldt and have established a camp when De Beer suddenly appears with his native bearers and his faithful old servant. The men come face to face. De Beer is suspicious, furious. Valentia has tried to smother his love for Dalla and has ignored her shy advances. But De Beer does not know this.

The scenes that follow take place in the African veldt, its mystery and lurking danger on every hand. The entire production builds up to a smashing climax, a fitting closing for one of the finest adventure-dramas you've ever seen in your life.

Warner Baxter has the role of Colonel Valentia. Others in the cast are Dorothy Cumming, Freeman Wood, Helen Butler, Pauline French, Edgar Norton and Florence Wix.

The Chinese, who use signs to express ideas in their written language have a hieroglyphic for the word "trouble", which, when deciphered, resolves itself into figures which meant "two women under one roof." That was the situation which confronted John Emerson, the rather supine hero of "Why Men Leave Home", when he found himself quartined in a house of sickness, companioned by the wife who had just divorced him and the woman he had just married that morning.

"Why Men Leave Home" is ultra-modern. It is amusing enough, but just a little bit tiresome. The real lesson of the picture meanders aimlessly about, trying to find a place to raise its head, and finally gives up in despair, engulfed in a sea of sentimentality.

The picture, filmed at a tempo that makes it easy and pleasant to follow, with no dragging moments, opens with the well-known illustrations of a man relaxing his vigilance when he has reached the street-car he has been chasing madly. Applied to married life, the same thing happens to John and Irene Emerson. Although the picture aims to present a sympathetic attitude toward the lady in the case, the audience can't help but have a good deal of sympathy for the unfortunate husband, a tired business man whose wife persists in maintaining a honeymoon basis for married life, and who goes off on continual trips when he refuses to take her to shows and dances.

The Great American Husband is not presented in a very favorable light in this picture. An unbiased estimate of the worth of John Emerson is that of his second wife, the stenographer who planned so carefully to "get" him, and did it, and who characterized him as a "poor fish" thereafter. The only "real" person in the entire production is the old lady, wise and far-seeing, stepping in to make things right for the foolish modern husband and his equally foolish wife. Helene Chadwick and Lewis Stone have the stellar roles as Irene and John Emerson, while Alma Bennett plays the part of the beguiling "stenog".

A comedy that is a real comedy, one of the sort that evokes spontaneous outbursts of tickled mirth from an interested audience, accompanies the short reels that preface the feature production.

AT THE REGENT.

HOOT GIBSON'S LATEST IS BASEBALL STORY, "HIT AND RUN," AT ROYAL THURSDAY.

Hoot Gibson makes his bow as the Babe Ruth of the cattle country in his latest Universal starring vehicle, "Hit and Run," which comes next Thursday to the Royal Theatre. He is introduced as a cowboy in an afternoon ball game. He hits 'em so far the outfielders have to ride horseback, to field the drives. He is given a chance in a major league and his adventures are both comic and thrilling. The picture is one of Gibson's funniest, directed by Edward Sedgwick, who also wrote the story with Raymond L. Schrock.

"BREAD" PROVES SPLENDID PICTURE.

Among other striking situations developed in "Bread," the new Metro-Goldwyn film shown at the Regent Theatre yesterday, occurs a sequence in which a woman surprises her husband robbing her own household of its savings. This startling scene is a turning point in the famous Charles D. Norris novel, about which so much discussion raged a year ago. It tells the story of a woman's struggles as breadwinner, and reveals the inside story of an unhappy marriage.

Jeanette, a spirited, proud and impetuous girl, finds the poverty in which she lives unendurable when her shabby clothes become the occasion of a public humiliation at a dance. After seeing her sister Alice sink still further into poverty by marrying a poor youth by the name of Roy Beardsley, Jeanette turns her back on marriage and goes into business.

Success In Business.

At the business of breadwinning she finds herself successful. She becomes private secretary to Mr. Corey, her wealthy employer, and, after reaching this point of vantage, is forced to relinquish it by the ill-founded jealousy of Mr. Corey's wife. In a moment of depression she marries Martin Devlin, a spendthrift salesman, and finds herself drifting back into poverty.

At this point occurs the intolerable discovery of the theft. The young wife, heart-broken, leaves her husband, and goes back into business. Mrs. Corey learns that her jealousy was unfounded and Jeanette is reinstated as Mr. Corey's secretary. She devotes her entire energy to success, and within three years has become an important member of the firm.

AT THE ROYAL.

"RENO," RUPERT HUGHES' STORY, LOOKS LIKE LOCAL HIT.

Here's the inside story of divorce for the first time on the screen, all the drama, the revelations, the frank exposition of this notorious divorce evil. Do not think that there is not plenty of comedy in it, for there is also many breath-taking truths. We miss our guess if the Royal is not crowded for the balance of this picture's run here.

The action of the unusual story centres around two young couples who hoped to end their matrimonial troubles through the divorce courts. A prim maiden aunt, some children with four sets of fathers and mothers, and complications which resulted when the laws began to conflict, carry the action of the story into a romantic cross-country chase that runs the gamut from grim drama to hilarity.

Rupert Hughes himself wrote the brilliant, epigrammatic titles which spice the picture, and directed the story which he wrote in his best romantic vein.

The parts are played by some of Greenland's most popular favorites, including Helene Chadwick, George Walsh, Lew Cedy and Carmel Myers.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR.

The man of error says man does not die, that his body only dies, and some inexplicable part he calls the soul does not die. The Scriptures say: "The soul that sinneth shall die." Error says man has a soul; Scriptures say: "Man is a living soul." Error says all men are on probation here for life; Scriptures say that independent of character, that all men in or through Christ shall be made alive. Error says that when man dies, he does not die, and if righteous goes to heaven, if unrighteous into endless torment. Scriptures say "no man hath ascended into heaven save he who came down from heaven," and further that the dead know not anything, that they have perished. Error says man's destiny is fixed at death. Scriptures say that after man is resurrected will be the time of trial or judgment, when it shall be discerned who shall be worthy of eternal life. Error deals the second death, which is endless. Scriptures say the wicked shall be turned back into death, which is the second death. Error says if Jesus was not Almighty God, He could not have redeemed man. Scriptures say "As by man came death so by man came life." Error says: God died, which is absurd. Scriptures say Jesus was dead, but is alive for vermore, who became dead and lived again. Error ignores the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Scriptures say: "As many as are led by the Spirit they are the children of God. —M. T. Butcher. 1d

Police Garrisons In Munich Are Being Held in Readiness.

(By Carl D. Groat—United Press Staff Correspondent).

BERLIN, Sept. 30.—After nearly a year of peace, the foreign collapse of the Hitler-Ludendorff beer cellar putsch, Bavaria to-day was alive with rumors of a monarchist uprising.

Police garrisons in Munich were held in readiness for the alarm, and Fascisti everywhere were placed under surveillance. Bavarian police to-day broke up a Fascist demonstration near Munich, and arrested 13 demonstrators.

The agitation coincides with the date, October 1st, originally set for the release of the notorious agitator, Wolf Hitler, from jail. If he is released, the authorities fear a demonstration and possible attempt at a coup.

"HE TRIED TO FORCE WHISKEY DOWN MY THROAT AND TO ASSAULT ME," BEATRICE FEE'S SHOCKING INDICTMENT OF MAN SHE LOVED RETOLD BY CHUM

Helen Stewart, of Toronto, Close Friend of Murdered Girl, Discloses Details Of Shooting.

STARTLING STORY OF FIENDISH ATTACK

"He Stood Over Me For Hours Trying To Fix His Gun That Had Jammed."

BEGGED FOR DOCTOR.

"He Chased Me All Over the House"—Miss Stewart's Evidence Startled Court.

(By Staff Reporter.)

LINDSAY, Ont., October 1st. — The most thrilling hour in the trial of Frederick McGaughey for the murder of Beatrice Fee came during the late sitting last night when Helen Stewart told of Miss Fee's dying statement to her. It is doubtful whether the pathos of the story told by the beautiful seventeen-year-old girl can be surpassed. In a sweet voice that just reached the jurors and the front benches of the public section, she recounted the events of the fateful day, and sadly repeated her friend's story of the tragedy that charges McGaughey with attempting an assault: trying to force her to drink liquor, and standing over her as she lay bleeding while he was striving to fix his jammed automatic. Complete as a history of the crime, the story still leaves much to the imagination. The girl's agony as she was chased around the lonely house by the drunken, lust crazed man, her suffering as she struggled with him after he had fired four bullets into her body, and her wild apprehension as he stood over her toying with the automatic after dragging her over the rough yard to his bed. These are known only to the girl who has taken her fears and her suffering with her to the grave.

The fortitude of the heroic girl who gave her life to save her honor is summed up in her dying statement when she said, "God won't let me live to suffer any longer. If I had been a bad girl I would never have been shot."

In a fruitless attempt to break down Miss Stewart's testimony, Leslie M. Frost, counsel for the accused, pressed her to the limit. She re-affirmed her oath and declared positively that Beatrice Fee said Fred. McGaughey tried to assault her. The court-room was again crowded last night. There were 29 women in the audience and men were ranged three deep along the back of the gallery.

Fred. McGaughey continued his sphinx-like attitude throughout, with never a move to show that he comprehended the significance of the drama of which he is now the centre. The police say his attitude is a poise, he having been bright in jail, where he smoked and read and even laughed. Three superintendents of hospitals for the insane will testify in his behalf, and others will tell of treating members of his family for insanity.

Dr. Rich, who was the first physician called to attend Miss Fee, said his impression of the accused on the night of the tragedy was that of a "sane drunk man."

McGaughey has the reputation of being a shrewd, industrious farmer, getting good returns from his 50-acre farm, and having amassed considerable wealth. He had just purchased a new car, and it was in this that the shooting is said to have taken place.

The Star Witness.

Helen Stewart, a good looking girl of 17, Beatrice Fee's friend in Toronto, said she had known Beatrice about eighteen months. "She was my dearest friend," Miss Stewart declared. "We spent most every Sunday together, and I saw her every day while we were working in the same department at the store." Miss Stewart learned of Miss Fee's engagement shortly after becoming acquainted. She met McGaughey and Albert Fee in the mail order department of the store when they came to visit Beatrice in Toronto.

Madill Recalled.

Miss Stewart was released from the box while Lawrence Madill was recalled. On a Sunday drive in Toronto, Fred McGaughey, a good driver, was sober. He drove with one hand while the other was around Miss Fee.

On getting out of the car Madill heard McGaughey say he had a gun, but it was broken and he was getting it fixed. It was a small gun and nearly all handle.

The revolver entered as the one that was used by McGaughey to shoot Beatrice Fee was very like the one the accused had in Toronto.

Cross-examined, Madill said McGaughey had not been drinking, but had liquor on his person.

Miss Stewart Resumes.

Miss Stewart saw McGaughey on his trips to Toronto six weeks before the tragedy and again on the trip to Oakville. He drove very well and there was no fear while riding with him.

On the occasion Beatrice Fee and McGaughey were very friendly.

The girls came to Omemee on May 24 and were met by Victor Fee, Beatrice's brother. Beatrice telephoned Fred and the conversation was not very pleasant. On that night Fred was late in arriving at the house and Beatrice quarrelled with him. He was sober, the witness thought. The three went in the car to Lindsay. Beatrice wanted to go to Coronation Hall, but the others prevailed. In Lindsay, with the three in the front seat, McGaughey showed the visitors the sights, including the hospital and the cemetery. Miss Stewart wished to see where McGaughey lived, but Miss Fee wanted to go home. Fred stopped the car near the Miss Stewart thought was a garage while the girls walked along the street. On their return Miss Stewart smelled liquor.

He stopped the car by the roadside and Beatrice seemed nervous. "She put her hand in his pocket and found a compact and a pair of pearl earrings, and he told her they were mine. She threw the earrings out of the car, but gave him back the compact. She threatened she would get out of the car and walk." After that McGaughey went back to Lindsay, where he brought two bottles into the car. He drove well on the way home. At Beatrice's home Miss Stewart got out of the car and Beatrice called, "Don't go away and leave me." She asked Fred to let her go and he wouldn't. Miss Stewart had hold of one of her arms and McGaughey had the other. Finally McGaughey gave way and the girls went in the house.

On Sunday the four young people, Beatrice Fee, Helen Stewart, Fred McGaughey and Lawrence McGaughey set out to go for a drive. Lawrence wanted to get gas. Beatrice Fee and Fred McGaughey were going to Beatrice's aunt's home for supper and the others were to meet them there. Miss Stewart and Lawrence McGaughey went all over the family connection looking for the others, but could not find them.

Later Lawrence wanted to go to Fred's home to get mail and Miss Stewart went along with him, on promising Mrs. Samuel Fee she would not get out of the car.

There was a light in the window as they approached McGaughey's home. Lawrence got out and entered the house. He came back in five or ten minutes and Miss Stewart jumped from the car and ran into the house. "I heard Beatrice calling me," she said.

On entering the house she saw Fred McGaughey and asked him what he had done. "I don't know," he replied. "I was crazy." I found Beatrice lying on the bed saturated with blood. She said: "Oh Helen I hate to see you under these circumstances, but thank God you have come. I have been lying here for hours praying that you would come." Beatrice drew Miss Stewart

Dismissal Of Jury Has Precedent In Victoria

LINDSAY, Oct. 1—(Canadian Press).—Justice Logie's dismissal of the jury in the McGaughey murder trial yesterday, when he learned that the Constable had allowed two jurymen to become separated from the rest during lunch hour, was unprecedented in the history of criminal courts in Victoria County. Twenty years ago, however, in a civil court case, a jury was dismissed for a similar breech of the rules and the court was adjourned till the following Assizes.

Strange to relate, however, Justice Logie had a similar experience at Owen Sound recently.

HAMILTON ASKS CIVIC INQUIRY

HEADS MAY FALL.

HAMILTON, Oct. 1 —Complete judicial investigation into all civic departments was demanded by the Board of Control yesterday. This action is the result of a series of sensations recently sprung in civic matters embracing one disappearance of a trusted city officer, charged with embezzling $32,000 and the arrest of three clerks and the summonsing of fifteen citizens alleged implicated in plots to defraud the city of tax monies. Several department heads, it is freely prophesied about the City Hall will fall in the pending judicial probe basket.

Officials are so agitated since the revelations of wrongdoing that little civic business of routine order is possible. One department head whose skirts are believed in no wise effected by the investigation, is said to have become so obsessed with the idea that he is incriminated, that escort has been provided unknown to himself for his own protection.

RETURNED TRUE BILL.

Evangelical Musicians Are Charged With Breaking Into Church.

SARNIA, Sept. 30. — (Canadian Press).—The grand jury late yesterday afternoon in Fall Assizes here, returned a true bill against George Garner and Roma C. Garner, United States citizens, and evangelical musicians, who are charged with breaking and entering St. Joseph's Catholic church at Sarnia and taking therefrom sacred hosts.

It is expected that the hearing of the case will proceed to-day before Mr. Justice Rose.

Beatrice Fee's Letter Arranging Love Tryst

In Beatrice Fee's coat, found in the car, was a letter addressed to McGaughey, postmarked at Toronto and dated May 21, 1924. It was signed by Beatrice Fee and read in part:

"Dear Freddie: — I received your letter a week ago and am glad to know you are getting your spring work done as it sure is one cold backward Spring. Why don't you go in for duck raising as the weather is so suitable? Everything remains much the same in this old burg.

"Regarding the 24th, Helen is coming with me and owing to her having to work on Friday we won't be able to make it before Saturday. I wrote and told them to meet me at Omemee as I wanted to get home as soon as possible I will 'phone you at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. We want to have the afternoon absolutely to ourselves, Hope this will be satisfactory to you.

Wait for me to 'phone you and if you are not in I can tell your mother.

I remain, with love till we meet

BEATRICE."

DELEGATES ARE SATISFIED BY PEACE FORMULA

Amendments To Protocol Remove Japan's Objections—Geneva Is Happy.

DEFINE AGGRESSOR.

No Country Outlawed If Dispute Is First Referred to the League.

GENEVA, Oct. 1. — (Canadian Press).—With Japan satisfied and the British Dominions seemingly content, the delegates to the League of Nations Assembly were last night congratulating themselves upon the successful completion of the stupendous task of drafting the protocol of arbitration and security, which, when ratified by a sufficient number of states, will be followed next June by a general world conference for disarmament. It was generally expected last night that the assembly will approve the text and vote for the transmission of the protocol to the home governments and parliaments for ratification.

In the discussion yesterday prominent delegates took pains to emphasize that the solution of the Japanese difficulty through the revision of the protocol strikes no blow at the sovereign rights of states.

Japanese Solution.

Concretely the Japanese solution was found by making two amendments to the protocol. By the first it is provided that when a question in dispute is held by the world court or the League Council to be a matter solely within the democratic jurisdiction of a state, this decision shall not prevent consideration of the situation by the council or by the assembly, under Article XI. of the League covenant.

The other amendment provides that a country shall not be presumed to be an aggressor if a juridical sentence has been pronounced against her unless she fails to submit the juestion to the council or the assembly under Article XI. of the covenant.

Under the original text, to which Japan took exception, when hostilities break out, a country which has disregarded a juridicial sentence declaring that the matter is of purely internal jurisdiction would be presumed to be an aggressor. By reason of the amendment this presumption does not hold good if the state again submits the matter to the council.

Concern of Whole League.

Everything therefore goes back to Article XI. of the covenant, which declares that any war or threats of war is a matter of concern to the entire League, and the League may take any action it may deem wise and effectual to safeguard the peace of nations. Jurists explained last night that Japan or any other disappointed nation merely gets the right of an additional hearing after its case has been thrown out of court but that the council has no right whatsoever to impose or even suggest any decision.

The jurists consider this amendment valuable for the peace of the world, because they believe that a state whose case has been thrown out of court would come before the council in a humbler mood and be less likely to resort to war over a question previously judged to be a purely democratic matter.

It is clear, however, that the revised protocol permits new discussion of democratic problems and those of a political character.

In his speech Tuesday, M. Politis of Greece explained that by the new arrangement it would no longer be sufficient for a country to be considered an aggressor, no longer sufficient to affirm that a country did not submit to the court's decision, no longer sufficient to claim that the state had recourse to hostilities—it would have to be proved, in addition, against the state that it had not accepted the procedure provided for in Article XI. of the covenant.

"It is only when all these conditions have not been fulfilled," asserted M. Politis, "that an aggressor and subject to sanctions."

BRITISH LABOR RATIO RAISED

Australia and New Zealand Governments Make Change Under Preference.

APPLIES TO GOODS.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Sept. 30.— (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters.)—H. E. Pratten, minister of trade and customs for Australia, announced in the house of representatives to-day that the commonwealth government had decided to raise the proportion of British labor and materials in imported goods under the British preferential tariff from 25 per cent. to 75 per cent.

A cable from Sydney over two months ago stated that the commonwealth government was consulting all the dominions with regard to competition of goods classed as British which enjoyed the preference although containing only a 25 per cent. proportion of British labor and materials. The commonwealth was strongly urging that there should be a 75 per cent. proportion of British labor and materials to enable goods to qualify for the preferential duties.

NEW ZEALAND, TOO.

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Sept. 30.—(Canadan Press Cable via Reuters).— The New Zealand government has decided to increase from one-fourth to three-fourths the proportion of British material or British workmanship in goods qualifying for the preferential tariff.

MECCA AROUSED.

British Government Received Appeal From King Hussein.

LONDON, Oct. 1. — (Canadian Press). — The British Government has received an appeal from King Hussein at Mecca, in which the King stresses imminent danger to the Holy City because of the nearness of the opposing forces of Wahabis.

King Hussein points out that the presence of six airplanes at Jeddah would have a deterrent effect on the advancing tribesmen.

Aged Kinm Hussein intends to remain at his palace in Mecca and die at the hands of the advancing Wahabi tribesmen, if the sacred city falls, he insists to-day.

Mecca still stands, but its defence forces are inadequate protection against the Wahabis. Hussein scorns to flee and there seems to be no possibility of aid reaching him.

INTERNATIONAL RUM SMUGGLER PLEADS ALIBI TO PIRACY CHARGE

Max Phaff, of New York, in French Marine Court Declared 20,000 Cases of Whiskey Were Pirated By a "High-Jacker" Now in Montreal Jail—Had Ample Funds In Canadian Bank To Pay For Liquor.

COURT WILL INVESTIGATE ALIBI.

BREST, Oct. 1. — (Canadian Press).—Charged with piracy on the high seas, for which the penalty is death, Max Jerome Phaff, a German-American who gives his address as 219 East 196th Street, New York, last evening emerged smiling from a nine-hour encounter with French maritime justice.

Phaff was yesterday given his first official examination before Commandant Fournier of the French Navy. The piracy charge is in connection with the boarding of the French steamer Mulhouse off the Canadian coast last July when, it is alleged, 36,000 cases of whiskey were removed by armed raiders to schooners which stood by.

Phaff pleaded not guilty, and in his examination declared he could prove an alibi. He also invoked the argument that it was not necessary for him to commit a piracy because he had unlimited credit with a big Canadian bank, which enabled him to purchase contraband whiskey without the use of "Captain Kidd" methods. He said he was prepared to produce documents which would show that on three different occasions the Canadian bank supplied him with letters of credit for £25,000, the object being to buy whiskey in England for smuggling into the United States.

"What whiskey houses in London were supplying you?" asked Commandant Fournier.

"I am saving that for another day," responded Phaff.

Just "High Jacking."

That a man now in jail in Montreal awaiting trial on a charge of rum-running or piracy — Phaff wasn't quite clear which—was the prime mover in his arrest, was the burden of the defendant's plea. He declared that the man in jail "pirated my boat, the Lutzen, with 20,000 cases of whiskey aboard." He told the Commandant that "this was just a little matter between rum-runners and I don't see why French justice should bother about it."

As to being an instigator of the alleged piracy, even though he were not actually present, Phaff told the court: "You will know all about the instigators before this case is finished. I am not going to be made the goat."

The interpreter had some difficulty in translating "goat" to Commandant Fournier. The latter told the defendant he was anxious to have the entire truth brought out and would send a commission to Canada to obtain affidavits of persons whom Phaff said saw him in Halifax on the day the Mulhouse was looted.

Repudiates Confession.

During the examination it developed that the case against Phaff is especially based on an alleged confession made by him on a train between Southampton and London early last month. Although Phaff repudiates this "confession," three affidavits were filed with Commandant Fournier purporting to be reports of conversations Phaff had with special detectives who were said to have trailed him since his departure from America. The defendant, in repudiating the alleged confession, declared that he knew no more about the Mulhouse piracy than "any smuggler of contraband liquor into America from Halifax to Hatteras."

The defence, in inorder to expedite the investigation and prevent Phaff's lengthy sojourn in jail, announced that it would commission a firm of New York lawyers to obtain affidavits at Halifax to prove his alibi.

Plebiscite Bulletin

Oct. 1, 1924 PETERBOROUGH No. 10

Tourists Prefer Dry Ontario

Tourists each year visit Ontario—under the O.T.A.—in vastly greater numbers than visit Quebec and British Columbia, where they have, so-called, Government control of the liquor traffic. While with us they spend millions of dollars.

SOME IMPRESSIVE FIGURES.

Last year 617,000 automobiles from the United States passed the Canadian Customs. Of these, the number that entered the three Provinces mentioned was as follows:

British Columbia (Government Control)..... 26,000
Quebec (Government Control) 43,000
Ontario (O.T.A.).....537,000

WHY ONTARIO ATTRACTS TOURISTS

Tourists prefer Ontario under the O.T.A. to other Provinces, where liquor is sold openly by the Government, for the following among other reasons:

1—Their lives will not be endangered by meeting drunken automobilists on the public highway.

2—When camping at nights "along the way," their nights will not be disturbed and spoiled by rows among drunken tourists in the various camps.

3—When they put up at hotels they know that the hotels will be quiet and well conducted and free from the carouses that are so frequent when liquor is sold openly and can be carried easily, in large quantities, into hotel rooms.

DRUNKEN AUTOMOBILISTS A GREAT MENACE.

In Edmonton and Calgary, under Government control, drunken automobilists on the streets are becoming common. Arrests for being drunk and disorderly and for being drunk while driving automobiles increased during June and July this year under Government control, in Calgary by 52 per cent. and in Edmonton by 111 per cent. In Ontario under the O.T.A. they have decreased.

WHAT HENRY FORD SAYS.

Henry Ford says. "If the people ever repeal Prohibition, there should be enacted the next day, in the interests of public safty, a law prohibiting the use of gasoline vehicles upon the public highways."

If you want tourists to continue to visit and to spend their millions of dollars in Ontario,

If you desire to be able to drive your family with safety on the public highways—

MASONIC LODGE HOLDS RE-UNION

Old Members Will Be Here From All Parts of the Universe.

Friday of this week, October 3rd, promises to be a day and a night of large interest to local members of the Masonic order, and especially to those of Peterboro Lodge, No. 155. For there will be a general homecoming of members of the lodge who have moved away, and being domiciled in other parts, have been asked to come back, even for one day and night only, and fraternize with those they know, and all who will be most pleased to greet them.

It is the first home-coming to the Mother lodge, that Peterboro Lodge has celebrated since its organization and institution in the year 1863. Not so old as its sister lodge, Corinthian Lodge, by some fifteen years, but old enough to have suffered an almost entire change in personnel during the 61 years that have elapsed. In fact only a very few of the members of the later sixties, and even the following seventies, survive. Among the oldest, in membership, will be Bro. William Menzies, of the Examiner staff, who came to town from Hamilton, where he had been in membership, during the middle sixties, and came into Peterboro Lodge as an affiliated member. Then there is Right Wor. Bro. Harry Rush, probably the dean of the craft in the city, and Right Wor. Bro. Benj. Shortly, all of whom outdistance most members in length of Masonic Service. Wor. Bro. James Alexander, now of Uxbridge, Ont., is a member of ancient extraction, and his one-time partner in business, Bro. Thomas Munro of Philadelphia, Pa., is another, or rather both are anothers. These and numbers of brethren, from all over the continent, have assured the local fraternity that they will be on hand. In Toronto alone, are over thirty members of the Home Lodge, and these may have a special car on the train to accommodate them.

The home-coming has been in arrangement for the past two months, and as the day drew near, those here feared that, including those in the city, the lodge rooms would not accommodate the crowd, especially when all sit down to supper. Several places in which to gather for the banquet were considered, and then Peterboro Lodge of Oddfellows kindly offered the use of their capacious and well-appointed dining hall, and all anxiety was abated.

It is arranged that the work, and greetings, and hand-shakings will be held and given in the lodge proper (Bank of Commerce building), and then adjournment to the dining hall for further enjoyment.

The Most Worshipful, the Grand Master, W. J. Drope, of Grimsby, himself a member of Peterboro Lodge, will preside, and the gathering will be sprinkled with lesser, but ever important lights of the craft, in addition. As the lodge membeship is nearly four hundred it may turn out that standing room will be at a premium. For men who have not been within the doors of the Mother Lodge for twenty years, have cheerfully consented to come along, and see how the old folks look, act and remember. Everybody will be on the best terms with everybody else, and heartiness, good feeling and fraternal greetings will be flowing all over the lodge and rooms.

There will not be a public display, such not being favored. But people about town may find on the streets faces and forms that have escaped recollection during the last few years of high cost of living. Men who taught our children, courted our girls and, faith, married many of them, which is decidedly better; wrangled in our town and city councils, took hard knocks on the lacrosse field in the days when the game was at par; curled up and down in the curling rink, preached in our churches, and some of them, got indifferent results owing to the perversity of human nature; taught in our Sunday schools, put out our fires, and camped along the river and on the lakes. Men who were good citizens, beyond question, and who adorn and are prominent in the places where they have made their homes. These are coming back to see how the Old Folks at Home look, and to view, mind you, the Hunter street bridge, of which many have heard, and heard of its cost. Absolutely their verdict will be that all and everything looks good. Peterboro, while noted for what it does, also prides itself on what it isn't. But in Masonry it has and ever will excel.

TAKE MIDDLE GROUND.

Hon. Arthur Meighen Defines Position of Great Bulk of Canadians.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press.)—Declaring that there are extremists who seem to favor everything that tends to a complete autonomy which amounts to independence or separation from the Mother Country, and others who are raging, rampant Imperialists, great bulk of Canadian people take the middle ground, Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the Conservative Opposition in the House of Commons, addressing Winnipeg Commonwealth Club on the subject of "Empire Relations," at a banquet here last night. Mr. Meighen claimed that indefinable relations which in the past had made for strength of the British Empire should be allowed to continue, and argued that though direct representation in peace conference and league of nations had been obtained by the Dominion, these occasions were in distinct category, and that for ordinary Empire treaty making purposes Canada and the other Dominions should be content with representation on British panel leaving direct instructions to British authorities.

(By Staff Reporter.)

LINDSAY, October 1. — Mr. Justice Logie threw a bombshell into the court room at the reception yesterday afternoon of the trial of Fred McGaughey, on a charge of killing Beatrice Fee, when he announced the discharge of the jury that had sat on the case all morning.

Two of the jurors, due to a stupid mistake by the constable, His Lordship said, had strayed away from the other ten at the luncheon recess.

They were found later by the Crown counsel wandering about the corridors of the court house. They were immediately placed in charge of a constable, and taken to where the other jurors were at lunch, but it was too late.

Mr. Justice Logie announced that there had been a breach of the code, and, as much as he regreted it, it would be necessary for him to discharge the jury, empanel a new one, and repeat the evidence of the morning session in full. The constable who failed to count the jurors when they withdrew for lunch was severely reprimanded.

A new jury was accordingly empaneled and the four witnesses of the morning were all re-examined. The personnel of the new jury was exactly the same as the original, but having been formally discharged, and resworn, they constituted a new jury in the eyes of the law.

At the adjournment of the court for lunch those among the spectators who had seats refused to risk losing them by leaving; many had lunches with them which they ate in the court room, and scores arrived after noon to line the corridors and the stairs.

Although the doors to the court were closed, women stood on the outside with their ears close to the panels to catch snatches of the story being unfolded within.

Throughout the four hours McGaughey never moved. Sitting in a bent posture, his hands clasped on his knees, his eyes were fixed on the floor a few feet from the bars of the prisoner's dock.

Three eminent psychiatrists are present for the defence, and will endeavor, it is expected, to prove dementia praecox, disease of adolescense."

Throughout the second session of yesterday's hearing McGaughey maintained his glassy stare at the floor, only his eyelids moving, and an occasional stealthy movement of a hand or foot showing the result of a cramp. The evidence to all appearances did not penetrate his intelligence.

Leslie G. Frost applied for permission to call eight expert witnesses to testify to the insanity, ancestry and life of the accused.

The application was allowed on condition of the the defence counsel's statement that there would be no repetition in the evidence.

Told Doctor No Hope.

Dr. W. T. Rich was the first witness for the Crown. He had known Fred McGaughey about a year, and knew his voice. On May 25th he received a message by telephone from McGaughey to come at once, as he (McGaughey) was sick. The call was repeated in a few minutes, McGaughey adding, "It is very serious." On arriving at the house Dr. Rich entered the summer kitchen. He met Fred McGaughey there, and the accused said: "Doctor, I believe I have shot a girl." He pointed to where she was and he led me to the room in the north east corner of the house," said Dr. Rich.

There was a hall and the bedroom was on the north side. The bed was in the north west corner with the head towards the south. The room was untidy and looked like a man's room.

The only light was in the bedroom, and there he found Beatrice Fee. He noticed blood stains on the front of her clothes. Her outer wrap coat was thrown back, as was the blouse. There were four bullet wounds in her chest with a black circle around each, indicating the bullets were fired at close range.

Miss Fee said: "I don't think it worth while doing anything for me. I don't think I'll get better."

He thought the condition was serious, and Miss Fee would probably die,but he dressed the wounds and advised her to keep quiet.

McGaughey was crying, walking around the room, and continually asking if she would recover. Dr. Rich told him the case was very serious, and then went to telephone for the ambulance, which arrived in half an hour.

Tried to Suicide.

Lawrence McGaughey entered while the doctor was dressing Fred's hand. On being told of the shooting, Lawrence went into the room where Miss Fee was lying. Later, with the four persons in the room, Fred asked what hope there was for Miss Fee. On being told of the seriousness of the case, he said, "Then I may as well shoot myself," and whipped a revolver out of his pocket. Lawrence wrestled with him and took the gun away to the wood-shed. "I believe in safety first and got out of the way," the witness said.

Fred. McGaughey was staggering drunk from liquor, Dr. Rich said.

Beatrice Fee was bleeding internally, and her pulse was very weak, about 120. The normal is 72.

Miss Helen Stewart was down on her knees beside the bed with her head close to Beatrice Fee's so that Dr. Rich could not hear what was said.

Dr. Rich told Lawrence to 'phone for the police, and he agreed to do so.

Miss Fee was removed to Ross Memorial Hospital in Lindsay, and Dr. Logan of Lindsay and Dr. Moir of Peterboro attended her until her death on Monday evening.

McGaughey gave no excuse for the shooting or explanation of it. He appeared perfectly sane. He was drunk, but he seemed perfectly aware he had done something wrong. His speech was thick but coherent.

Statement Before Death.

Cross-examined by Leslie G. Frost, Dr. Rich said while attending Miss Fee on the Monday following the tragedy, he examined her about 1.30 and found her sinking. The Crown Attorney was notified and came to the hospital. Dr. Moir and Miss Read were present. Dr. Rich asked Miss Fee whether she thought she would recover. She said, "No, I don't think I'll recover." The Crown Attorney immediately proceeded to take the statement in writing, and Miss Fee signed it.

After the Crown Attorney left the room Dr. Moir asked, "Did Fred. McGaughey wrong you in any way? Did he take any advantage of you?" Miss Fee answered, "Nothing of the kind ever happened."

The question and answer were repeated positively.

Just previous to this the Crown Attorney made a mistake in writing Miss Fee's name, and she corrected him, Dr. Rich said.

Later she asked, "Am I not going to get better?" the witness volunteered, as showing the brightness of intellect of the dying girl.

Dr. Rich said McGaughey's voice sounded natural on the telephone, but at the house he appeared drunk, attempted to commit suicide, and made no attempt to escape.

Dr. Rich said he gathered from the man's actions that he was extremely sorry for what he had done. Notwithstanding the doctor's efforts to cheer up Miss Fee, she told him she did not think she would recover. That seemed to be her settled impression.

In re-examination Dr. Rich said he personally lit the second lamp before Lawrence came to the house.

Threatened Arrest.

As Dr. C. V. Mulligan was called to testify regarding the post-mortem examination a hubbub in the Court attracted the attention of His Lordship. Threats to have the sheriff make arrests unless the noise subsided had the desired effect.

Dr. Mulligan said he performed an autopsy on the body of Beatrice Fee on 26th May. He described the wounds found on the body, including the bullet wounds, bruises on the girl's knee, side and hands. Death resulted from hemorrhage caused by the bullet wounds.

Under cross-examination by Leslie Frost, Dr. Mulligan said there was no indication of attempt to have carnal knowledge of the girl. There was evidence of a struggle.

Bolton Stewart, photographer, identified photographs of the scene of the tragedy.

Provincial Constable Hayston Storey told of receiving a telephone message at 10.30 on the Sunday night of the shooting. On arrival at the McGaughey house he found Fred and Lawrence McGaughey and Miss Stewart.

Fred McGaughey said there had been a hold-up. Later he said, "I shot the girl." The gun was brought by Lawrence McGaughey from where he had hidden it on the wood pile. The revolver, an automatic, as identified in Court.

The car had curtains all around. There were bloodstains inside and empty cartridge shells and spent bullets on the floor. Another bullet was on the left foot board, with the cap indented by the firing pin, and with bloodstains on it. There were five shells in the clip and one in the barrel. The latter had been struck but not exploded. Two bullets in the clip were bloodstained. A lady's hat was found in the rear seat. The hat and the blood-stained front seat from the car were produced as exhibits.

Tried to Take Poison.

On the way to the constable's car, the accused had his hand in his inside breast pocket. He struggled, but Storey found a tube and took it from him. The tube, containing paris green, was produced in Court. The accused shouted, "Let me die; I want to die."

On the way to jail the accused shouted, "I'm crazy. I've always been crazy, and no one seems to notice me."

At the jail Constable Storey placed McGaughey under arrest and gave him the customary warning. In his pocket were found 4 bullet and a six-ounce bottle, which the constable took to contain liquor. The prisoner said, "I want Frost to defend me."

From the car to the bed where Miss Fee was found was 71 feet 2 inches. Bloodstains led from the car to the bed. A telephone book bearing bloodstains at Dr. Rich's telephone number was produced in the Court. A cartridge box found in the drawer of a dresser in a bedroom was produced, bearing in Belgian the notation that identified the shells as suitable for the revolver found on McGaughey. There were bloodstains on the box and on some cartridges in the revolver.

Garments Shown.

The garments worn by Beatrice Fee were shown to the jury, as were McGaughey's. Near the scene of the tragedy, Storey said, he found signs of a struggle where the automobile tracks indicated a car had passed off the travelled part of the road. The tire tracks matched the tires on McGaughey's car. A part of a lady's carring and a brooch were found on the road near a large stone that was spattered with blood. A pearl button found by Mr. Waldron and handed to Constable Storey matched the buttons on Beatrice Fee's waist.

A car, believed to be the one that stopped at the rock, turned about 200 yards south and proceeded back along the road.

Under cross-examination, Constable Storey said the McGaughey home is a mile from the Lindsay-Peterborough road, and the road where the stone is situated is the shortest road by measurement to Omemee.

On his arrival at the house, Storey found McGaughey in a nervous, excitable condition, he said. He was not very nervous. He was slightly under the influence of liquor, but staggered several times. Personally, the constable did not blame all the staggering on liquor. McGaughey hesitated in answers to questions, but did not stutter. Constable Storey found a carbolic acid bottle at the farm.

Leslie Frost suggested that if a man with a bleeding hand was driving a car the blood would drop on his knee in a place to correspond with stains on McGaughey's trousers and underwear.

Heard the Shots.

Thomas H. Waldron is next neighbour to McGaughey on the north. On the Sunday evening of the tragedy he heart shots while he was pumping water about 8 o'clock. Next morning he went to Mr. Curran's and later to Mr. Parrington's. He saw blood on the stone of which a photograph was shown him. Nearby was an earring, broken. A button picked up by Parrington was thrown away again, and later retrieved and given with the earring to the Provincial Constable.

Joseph Parrington said he heard two shots on Sunday, 25th May, and found an earring and button.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE.

Roof of House Caught Fire But Buildings Were Saved.

ROSENEATH, Oct. 1.—Mr. Chas. Grigg's house had a very narrow escape from fire on Friday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Grigg were at Mr. Albert Haldstead's threshing and the only one at the house was Mr. Bert Hogg, the hired man, who was in the field sowing grain about a quarter of a mile away when he saw flames shooting from the chimney. He jumped on the seeder and ran the horses to the house, and on arriving there found the roof afire, caught from a spark from the chimney. He rushed upstairs and reached the roof from the verandah, and having lots of water handy, he succeeded in putting it out. Mr. Grigg was 'phoned to, and he and all the men from the threshing went in cars at a record pace, but the hired man and his wife had the fire under hand, but not before a hole had been burnt through the roof.

Had the house burnt the barn would have gone, too, as an east wind was blowing and the barn is situated about 150 feet directly west of the house.

Mr. Grigg has a 300-acre farm, bordering on the shores of Rice Lake, near Margaret's Island, with a large brick house and one of the most up-to-date barns and stables in the district. His crop was all in the barn, and his loss would have been very extensive.

LONDON, Oct. 1. — (Canadian Press). — The Dutch boy of story books who saved a dyke by holding his hand over a leak, now has a rival in real life. He is M. The plane, which was twin engineed, left in the afternoon with eight passengers, three of whom were women. A short time later the pilot discovered the starboard engine was not functioning, and the mechanic crawled out along the wing of the plane to investigate. He found the pipe leading from the gasoline tank to the carburator was broken. He was unable to mend the leak, so until the machine neared the spot where an emergency landing was possible, Richard, in full view of the passengers in the cabin, clung to the wing with one hand, while holding the broken ends of the pipe together with the other. The plane landed at Lympne Airdrome on the coast, where repairs were made.

The Dying Girl's Story

"She said: "Helen I'm going to die. I'm going to tell you what happened because I know I won't live long enough to tell it to anyone else. God won't let me live to suffer any longer, if I had been a bad girl I would never have been shot". "Fred came into the room then," Miss Stewart said, "and asked 'What have I done to you, Beatrice?' She pulled back the bandages and said 'You shot me'. He cried 'Oh, my God, and ran out of the room. Beatrice began to pray and asked me to pray too. Then she told me Fred had turned the car and had gone back to his home. "He had been drinking nearly all the way and tried to force the whiskey down my throat. He stopped the car by the roadside and tried to assault me, Then he took me to his home and went just wild. He chased me all over the house and then put me in the car again. Then without warning he pulled out the gun and shot me four times. I took the gun and shot off his fingers. Then when I was running away he fired another bullet into me, he put me in the car and drove to his house, and stood over me for hours, trying to fix his gun that had jammed. I begged and begged him to get the doctor and at last he did."

"After she told me she was going to die, she gave me her wrist watch and I said I would get it fixed for her, she said no, Helen, I'll never wear it again: I'll not live."

Lawrence 'phoned his place and Fred ran around the kitchen and dropped some dishes in the floor. He said, "I'm going to tell them it was a hold up". "I said he needn't bother for Beatrice had told me all about it. He said he would choke the words down my throat."

After a row in the house, during which I hid in the garage, Fred cried "Fix my hand, she shot my hand." Mr. Storey came and Fred showed him in the car. They went away in Mr. Storey's car.

Next day Miss Stewart saw Beatrice Fee in the hospital in Lindsay. She was conscious before she died. Miss Stewart showed her the two return tickets to Toronto and Beatrice said: " Iwill not need mine, I'm not going to live'."

After Miss Stewart had emphatically refused to retract her evidence when pressed by Mr Frost, she broke down as she left the court, and fainted. Her story, told without a faltering note except when it touched her love for her friend, made a profound impression on the silnt courtroom.

A FACER FOR THE COUNCIL.

The latest phase of the battle between the Town Council of Port Hope on one hand and Chief of Police John Brown, formerly of the Peterborough Police Department, on the other is the taking of a straw vote by the Port Hope Times, which entirely vindicates Brown.

The Times printed a ballot asking the question, "Do you agree with the action of the Town Council in dismissing the Chief of Police?" and requested its readers to express their opinion.

Of the 613 people who marked a ballot, 605 disapproved of the action of the Council, five spoiled their ballots and only three agreed with the dismissal of the Chief.

About half the number of people on the voters' lists having gone on record as condemning the Councillors for dispensing with the services of the Police Chief, the Council finds itself in a decidedly embarrassing position.

Evidently public opinion is strongly behind Chief Brown, whose dismissal was explained by the Council as due to petty charges after the Chief had tried for weeks to have the complaints against him properly investigated.

The Council was elected to carry out the will of the people, and when only three voters out of a total of 613 who made use of the newspaper's ballot, the members should do some quiet and earnest thinking.

WHERE THE SHOE PINCHES.

The greatest obstacle to the success of any such propaganda as Fire Prevention Week, which will be observed next week, is the difficulty of getting the average citizen to see that his own interests are vitally concerned.

Fire prevention should appeal to the common sense of citizens as a matter of dollars and cents.

Your neighbor has a fire and you sympathize with him, of course.

But you don't stop to realize that you are paying your share of the loss.

You are paying it every time you buy a hat or a pair of shoes or a suit of clothes, or any other necessary.

The insurance companies are the agencies that collect and distribute the fire tax, and in the price of every article you buy is a percentage to cover the cost of insurance.

Of course, you pay, and the greater the fire hazard and the less adequate the fire protection facilities in any particular community the more you have to contribute.

It is good business then to be actively interested in fire prevention.

A low fire loss and lower fire insurance would have a very appreciable effect upon the cost of living.

And since experts declare that 87 per cent. of all fires are the result of carelessness, there is a splendid opportunity to reduce the annual waste from this cause.

Fire Prevention Week in Peterborough should mean a great improvement in conditions in this city, so far as the elimination of fire risks is concerned.

SAFETY INSTRUCTION.

Still another coroner's jury in Toronto, investigating the death of a child as the result of an automobile accident, has urged that steps be taken to have children given safety instruction in the schools in order to check the toll of young lives.

It should be possible to find time for a short talk two or three times a week as to the danger of playing on the streets or of carelessly running across a roadway.

Parents, too, should lose no opportunity of impressing their children with the need of being careful in these respects.

At the same time the increasing number of such accidents should cause every motorist to remember that in driving on city streets there is the ever-present danger that a youngster will suddenly dart out into the road.

The careful driver will always have that contingency in mind, and he will have his car under such control that he will have a fair chance at least of averting an accident, even when the carelessness of a pedestrian renders one likely.

Children must be taught the danger that exists in the streets, adults must exercise care in crossing roadways, and motorists must exercise every precaution in the handling of their machines if the death list from traffic accidents is to be reduced.

The motor car has created new conditions, and they must be realized and dealt with by new methods, in which safety first instruction in the schools could play a very valuable part.

GOLD SPOONS FOR MUSH.

Ninety-five out of every 100 children in American public schools will have to work with their hands for a living after they leave school and strike out for themselves.

Ninety-five per cent. will work with their hands. Yet about 95 per cent. of their education is brain training rather than hand training. Providing gold spoons for eating mush.

The man who makes his living with his hands certainly needs all the brain training he can get. With his brain developed and alert, he will advance more quickly. It is brain power, not muscles, that makes an occasional iron puddler rise to be head of a big steel company. It was brain training that made Abe Lincoln the rail-splitter into President Lincoln.

Yes, the man who makes his living with his hands needs all the brain training he can get.

He needs it not only in his work, but for individual improvement in spare time. With a trained brain he will not submit ignorantly to industrial slavery. And he will recognize the wisdom of giving his children "a better start in life."

Despite all this, our educational system spends too much time developing the brain and too little time training "the hands." Theoretically, the boy gets his brain educated in school, will have plenty of time to learn how to make money with his hands after he leaves school.

But the seemingly perpetual tendency of educators at large is to cram brains with as much impractical knowledge as possible. By impractical knowledge, we mean knowledge that can never be converted into cash.

All this is idealistic, and we have to have idealism in life, but the world is very matter-of-fact, after all. Children would be a lot better off, for instance, if they got less history or botany and more of the fundamentals of economics—reasons why cost of living is so high and hard to meet—reasons why 95 per cent. of children have to work with their hands after they leave school.

If we used more tin spoons instead of gold, there figuratively would be less mush and more ice cream to be eaten.

Practical training first; impractical knowledge second! At least, until we catch up with and solve some of the economic problems created by too much teaching of the useless.

OUR STRENGTH IN MONEY.

The successful flotation of a Dominion bond issue for $175,000,000 of which $50,000,000 has been taken by a Canadian syndicate, gives emphasis of several facts of general concern. In the first place, this financing has been done without adding to the liabilities of the country; and secondly, the domestic market has been counted upon to absorb as large a volume as $85,000,000. New York has taken $90,000,000. It may help us to appreciate our rising resources in money for investment to take a quick glance backward.

In 1913 the funded debt of the Dominion had a total of $483,232,555, practically every penny of which had been borrowed abroad. London had been the chief market. During the war, however, it became necessary to appeal to the people of Canada, and the response was astounding. Thus it came about that, at the close of the fiscal year 1923, our liabilities on account of outstanding bonds stood as follows:

Payable in Canada	$1,938,877,054
Payable in London	336,001,470
Payable in New York	210,933,000

It will be seen that nearly 80 per cent. of our entire national debt is now held at home, notwithstanding the rather staggering total. It is impossible to contemplate a fact of such significance without identifying in it the proof of our monetary strength. The appeal to patriotism, at a time of infinite stress, taught us that truth. There may have been some measure of sacrifice involved in the purchase of bonds to that colossal amount; but the fact which stands out boldly is that we had the money. We certainly had not up to that time suspected our resources in cash to be so large.

There is, of course, the further view, that money invested in Government bonds is not available for productive enterprises, and that may be a serious matter.

It is, however, the interest charges on our debt which immediately concern us, and in that relation there is room for sobering thought. For the fiscal year ended March 31, 1923, the amount was $137,892,735, which was a larger sum than the total revenue of the Dominion in 1912. To meet such a heavy liability it became necessary to impose special taxes, and last year those taxes aggregated $181,634,875. There again there was a withdrawal from available capital, since taxes are paid out of the savings of the people. It is impossible to grasp such a fact without feeling that the situation is a challenge to our sagacity and constructive prudence.

Nor can any forward-looking man take cognizance of another fact without realizing that we are making mistakes in this matter of national liabilities. For one thing, we have fallen into the vicious habit of keeping our books in an unsound way. If anyone will turn to the Public Accounts, he will find that guarantees amounting to $512,243,855 are not identified with the public debt, although they are a direct charge on the public revenue; so that our interest account last year was really about $28,000,000 more than the official figures. Since these guarantees apply wholly to railway securities, they are as much a liability as any Dominion bond included in the public debt.

We gain nothing by deceiving ourselves. When Government announced a few months ago that the public debt had been reduced, it based the statement on its unsound bookkeeping; for it had increased the amount of outstanding guarantees by something like $70,000,000 during the preceding year. A bond issued in the name of the Canadian Northern Railway, and endorsed by Government, is as essentially a part of the national debt as is any Dominion bond. Such methods are not creditable. They merely serve to mislead the people.

Canada is in a position to carry a heavy liability; but we should have no illusions as to what a burden of that nature means. It means that Government is compelled to levy on the savings of the people to carry it, and to that extent cramp their enterprises. Moreover, when we observe other countries making successful headway in the reduction of their war debts, it is depressing to see our own debt rising in volume. It is not suggested that this last loan involves an addition to the popular load, since it is almost wholly for refunding and the funding of floating liability; but it would be tremendously stimulating if we could feel that something was being done to reduce the weight of taxation made necessary by interest charges.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It is nice to read that it is fine and warm in the Western Provinces, any way.

Ontario has been having one kind of wetness that Prohibitionists and Moderation League would both like to ban.

There is nothing new, as the Mail and Empire points out, in an automobile being used as a weapon of murder. The novelty will only emerge in a hanging.

CITIZENS NOT BEHIND COUNCIL OF PORT HOPE.

PORT HOPE, September 30. — At a town council meeting held recently a motion was passed requesting the resignation of Chief John Brown from the local police force.

No particular reasons were advanced for his dismissal, and the Chief refused to resign, claiming that he as an experienced officer should be given the reasons why they should require his resignation. A few petty reasons were advanced and the position was declared open and applications were eligible to be received by the town clerk.

In the meantime a local newspaper carried on a non-compulsory voting campaign, and the ballot read as follows: "Do you agree with the action of the town council in dismissing the Chief of Police?" The ballots were counted here to-day and an overwhelming vote was registered. Six hundred and thirteen votes were polled, 605 being against the council's action, and only 3 in favor of it, and with 5 spoiled ballots.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, October 1. — Choice butchers 'cattle have declined with the exports and Charles Lunness secured two loads of 1,200-pound steers for Arnold Bros. at $5.85 and $6.25 a cwt. This means a decline of 25c to 30c a cwt.

Nice loads of handyweight butchers' heifers sold yesterday at $5.25 a cwt. and good heavy steers, though a little coarse, at $6.00. The exporters took a load of choice steers at $7.00 and heifers at $6.25. For three choice baby beeves the U.F.O. got $10.00 to $11.00 a cwt. The market faced another heavy carryover yesterday.

A scarcity of good veal calves is keeping the prices of these quite steady. The Buffalo market holds firm and Alex. Furlong is buying for that market. Choice calves are 10 1-2 to 11 cents o pound. Heavy calves are a poor sale at about 6 cents a pound.

Lambs are steadied for the time being at 111-2 to 12 cents a pound for the ewes. Receipts yesterday morning were not heavy, and Monday's closing prices were maintained with an addition of 25 to 35 cents a cwt. One choice bunch sold yesterday morning at 12 cents a pound and other good lambs at $11.60 a cwt. for ewes.

Packers are still talking lower prices for hogs but the supply is too light to give them a lever. The market yesterday was still $9.25 a cwt.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, October 1 (Canadian Press). — Smashing of season top records made fresh progress yesterday and took in all deliveries of wheat and rye. Much of the new buying which was in evidence appeared to result from a United States Department of Agriculture estimate that the world's exportable surplus of wheat this season would be around 685,000,000 bushels against trade figures indicating that world import needs would total 750,000,000 to 800,000,000 bushels.

The wheat market closed unsettled, 1-2c to 2 1-2c net higher, December $1.41 5-8 to $1.41 3-4 and May $1.47 1-8 to $1.47 1-4.

Corn finished at half lower to a three-quarter gain.

It was estimated that 1,250,000 bushels of wheat and 750,000 bushels of rye were bought yesterday for export to Europe. Foreign buying of future deliveries of wheat here was also apparent, and there were signs, too, that transatlantic demand for flour was active as well as the demand for wheat and rye.

Put a Duofold on the Home Desk

You need not fear its use by different hands

For Here's a Point No Style of Writing Can Distort—Jewel-Smooth—Guaranteed 25 Years

INSTEAD of a fountain pen, it has hitherto been the custom to use an ordinary pen and inkwell on the home writing desk in spite of the perils to furniture and rugs. For the point of the usual fountain pen would soon turn awry if entrusted to the variable writing of various hands.

But Parker Duofold has now made a Family Fountain Pen practicable. For its Press-Button Filler is capped inside the barrel—out of sight—out of harm's way. Then, too, the double sleeve of Duo-Sleeve Cap makes an Ink-Tight seal. And no variation in hands or handwriting can alter the jewel-smooth Duofold point. A point that's guaranteed, if not mistreated, for 25 years' WEAR.

These advancements are making Duofold a new member of the Desk Accessories—one all the family can freely turn to for social correspondence, household accounting, or the young folks for their school work. And this black-tipped lacquer-red beauty adds new charm and color to the desk.

It's a Fine Old Custom

It's a custom that brings inner cleanliness, which is just as important from the standpoint of health, as outward cleanliness. Gently, effectively, ENO's "Fruit Salt" eliminates the poisons that clog the system and give rise to constipation, depression, liver trouble and rheumatic conditions.

But be sure it is ENO's you take each morning — the world-famed effervescent saline containing no harsh or drastic mineral salts. ENO's possesses the beneficial and refreshing qualities of fruit in concentrated and convenient form. A dash of ENO's each morning is a pleasant premium to pay for bounding health and mental vigor that it gives.

PARLIAMENT TO HANDLE NUMBER HARD PROBLEMS

Highly Controversial Subjects Might Easily Result in Downfall of MacDonald.

ULSTER DISPUTE

Unemployment Will Raise Many Troubles for MacDonald Ministry.

LONDON, October 1 — (United Press). — Parliament reconvened after the summer vacation, and legislators plunged immediately into a number of highly controversial subjects, any one of which might easily cause the downfall of the MacDonald Labor Government. It being merely the resumption of a session, there was no formal opening by the King or speech from the Throne, but the rush of legislators for seats was as big as on a normal State opening day.

The four major subjects for discussion are:

The Ulster boundary dispute,
The Anglo-Russian treaty,
Unemployment, and
The Dawes plan and the German loan.

The Ulster question is down for tackling first, and so bitter will be the fight over this, that the other questions may never be reached, in the life of the present Government.

It was owing to the acuteness of the Irish dispute that Parliament had to be content with a bare seven weeks' recess instead of resuming the session end of October or November—and the curtailment of their normal vacation, needed for consolidation of their position in their own constituencies, has not improved the tempers of legislators.

President Cosgrave, however, had intimated very definitely that he could not answer for developments in the Irish Free State if the boundary dispute was allowed to drag over the Irish elections and the British Government decided to tackle the question at once.

The Ulster Dispute.

The present Ulster dispute rages around the interpretation of Article 12 of the treaty signed November, 1921, by Lloyd George, and other coalition leaders, and Michael Collins and the Irish plenipotentiaries. This article provided for the setting up of a boundary commission to delimit the borders of the Free State and Ulster, which was to be composed of one representative each from the Free State and Ulster, with an independent chairman appointed by the British Government.

The MacDonald Government appointed Justice Feetham, a distinguished South African judge, as chairman and the Free State appointed its representative, but Ulster flatly declined to take any step in the matter at all, or to recognize the findings of the Commission.

The Contention.

Ulster's contention was that she was not a party to the 1921 Treaty, and that as her borders were delimited by the Act of Parliament, passed 12 months previously, conferring self-government on the six-country area now known as the Government of Northern Ireland, nothing could be done without her consent. Premier Sir James Craig, after conferences with the late President Arthur Griffith, the late Michael Collins, and President Cosgrave, intimated that Ulster would not oppose minor, technical, boundary rectifications, but that he gathered from utterances of Southern Irish leaders that the Free Staters expected to obtain the city of Londonderry and three of Ulster's six counties, out of the boundary commission.

To such a claim he gave a flat "Nothing doing," and declined to appoint an Ulster representative on the Commission, as Ulster—and the British Conservative signatories to the 1921 Treaty insisted that only minor, administrative and geographical boundary rectifications were contemplated by the clause.

The Free State View.

The Free State leaders took the view that failure to set up the Boundary Commission would be a flagrant breach of the Treaty and pressed for action, wherefore, just before Parliament adjourned for the summer recess, Colonial Secretary J. H. Thomas introduced a government bill authorizing the British Government to appoint the third Commissioner and to get the Boundary Commission started.

This was read a first time, and the second reading is scheduled for this week, and it will be opposed tooth and nail by the Government Party, and it is believed, by some Liberals. Lloyd George, as author of the Irish Treaty, promised Premier MacDonald Liberal support to pass the bill, but it has since become clear that he cannot carry all British Liberals with him. Men like Sir Alfred Mond, formerly regarded as Lloyd George's chief lieutenant, Ian Macpherson, former Liberal Secretary for Ireland—who was in charge of the bill granting Ulster self-government in 1920—have said plainly that they will not support the measure if the Free State expects to dismember Ulster. They say that the British signatories only intended minor border rectifications, and that an official acceptance of this view by the Free State leaders alone will remove their opposition. The Conservatives, who always hated the Treaty, and in fact deposed Austen Chamberlain, the Earl of Birkenhead, and others from the party leadership, for signing it, naturally strenuously oppose any suggestion of handing over large tracts of Ulster to the Free State. They contend that Ulster's borders were fixed by a previous law, and nothing more than minor rectifications can be permitted, and then only with Ulster's consent.

Lords Would Reject.

Until the dissentient Liberals cast their vote it is impossible to say whether the MacDonald Government can pass the bill through Commons, but if it goes through the lower House, it is practically certain to be rejected by the House of Lords.

Anglo-Russian Treaty.

An equally serious snag is the Anglo-Russian treaty, signed the day after Parliament rose, but which must lay on the table of the House of Commons for 21 days—and come up for serious debate—before it is ratified. Only a vote of Parliament can ratify the treaty, because, for some extraordinary reason—much criticized by its opponents—the name of the King is not mentioned in the document, so King George cannot be called upon to ratify it over Parliament's head.

The Treaty which promises government support for a Russian loan, is so vague and suggests such little corresponding advantage to Britain that it was vehemently opposed by men of all parties. Practically only the extremists in the Labor ranks support the measure and according to reliable observers, there is scarcely a chance in the world that Parliament will pass it. Rejection of the Russian Treaty would be such a blow to MacDonald's prestige that he could hardly do anything but resign, according to parliamentary experts, but the Premier might perhaps decide that fighting an election on the Russian question would not be good tactics, and so postpone the fatal step. However, he could not very well delay resignation on such a major defeat.

Unemployment.

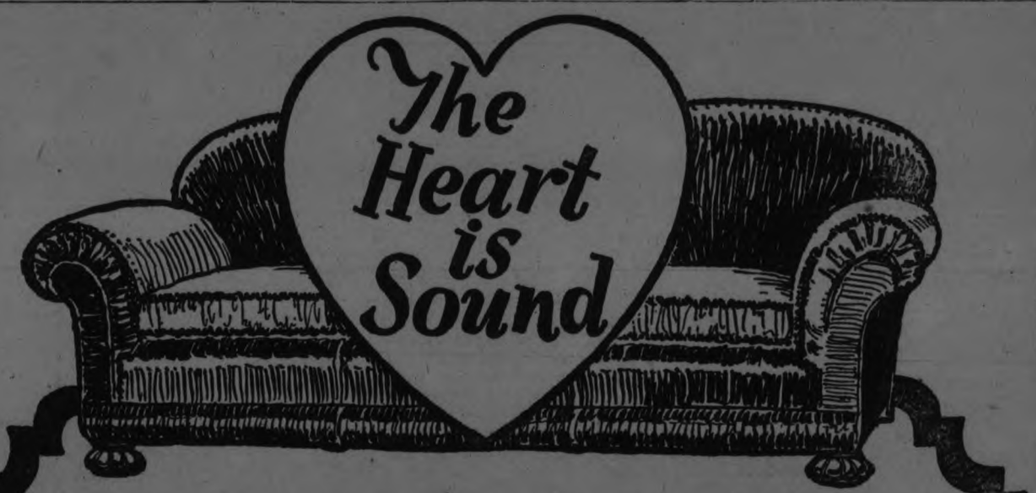
Unemployment will raise many troubles for the MacDonald Ministry, and failing drastic steps—which would doubtless be rejected by the combined oppositions—the Government might well be thrown out by its own supporters.

The Dawes loan is another serious snag, for most of the opposition to it comes from the ranks of Labor itself. Trade union leaders have made it clear that they regard the Dawes plan as a surrender to the capitalists, and with the Anti-German Conservatives gleefully assisting in this opposition—from entirely different motives—defeat stares MacDonald in the face, although the Dawes plan and London agreement does not need Parliamentary sanction.

OYSTER EATER FOOLED

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Because H. R. Shook of Toronto preferred his oysters fried rather than raw he is poorer by $300. While eating oysters at a local cafe seven beautiful pearls rolled into his mouth. Mr. Shook thought for a while that fortune was smiling upon him, but disappointment awaited him.

On finishing his dinner he took them to a jeweller to discover their value. The jeweller declared that while they were real pearls of excellent quality, they had lost all their value by because they had been subjected to heat. If they had not been fried they would have been worth at least $300.



A Chesterfield That is Strictly Mothproof and Strongly Built

SNYDER'S Sani-Bilt Living Room Furniture, guaranteed mothproof, is built to endure. We take special care to build chesterfields and chairs that preserve their shape.

Four rows of springs in the seat, instead of three as in ordinary chesterfields, make Sani-Bilt Chesterfields extraordinarily resilient and firm. All these springs are cross-tied into place with heavy cord. Then a steel wire stretched from arm to arm along the front of the seat helps to keep the edge from slackening down. The Scotch webbing under the springs of a Snyder's Sani-Bilt is anchored to stay, this material being specially made for us and practically unstretchable.

Sani-Bilt frames, whether on chesterfields or chairs, are heavy and strong, being built of solid Canadian hardwoods. The joints are "corner-blocked," glued and screwed, making a rigid, permanent job. We take a pride in building our frames as firm as good workmanship can make them.

The rigidity of the frame is due to the corner blocks being glued and screwed.

Note the thorough method of interlacing the webbing.

Moths Cannot Harm Sani-Bilt Furniture

Snyder's Sani-Bilt Furniture is guaranteed absolutely mothproof. No moths will harm it in the slightest degree. The Sani-Bilt process is unique. No other manufacturer of upholstered furniture in Canada has this process. It is based on a secret formula, perfected by a group of famous chemists from whom we hold the Canadian rights for upholstered furniture.

The Sani-Bilt guarantee also covers construction and fillings. If faults or flaws of construction are discovered, we will make them good. Do not accept any alternative to Sani-Bilt. Furniture that is said to be "just as good," is not as good.

Lest the punishment should be repeated, he had thrown all his weight into the next strokes of the oar, until by the time the Penon was reached the sweat was running down his body and his heart was thudding against his ribs. It was not possible that it could have lasted, and his main agony lay in that he realized it, and saw himself face to face with horrors inconceivable of his strength. He was not naturally robust, and he had led a soft and pampered life that was very far from equipping him for such a test as this.

But as they reached the Penon and felt the full vigor of that warm breeze, Sakr-el-Bahr, who by Asad's command remained in charge of the navigation, ordered the unfurling of the enormous lateen sails on main and foremasts. They ballooned out, swelling to the wind, and the galeasse surged forward at a speed that was more than doubled. The order to cease rowing followed, and the slaves were left to return thanks to Heaven for their respite, and to rest in their chains until such time as their sinews should be required again.

The vessel's vast prow, which ended in a steel ram and was armed with a culverin on either quarter, was crowded with lounging corsairs, who took their ease there until the time to engage should be upon them. They leaned on the high bulwarks or squatted in groups talking, laughing, some of them tailoring and repairing garments, others burnishing their weapons or their armor, and one swarthy youth there was who thrummed a gimri and sang a melancholy Shilha love-song to the delight of a score or so of blood-thirsty ruffians squatting about him in a ring of variegated color.

The gorgeous poop was fitted with a spacious cabin, to which admission was gained by two archways curtained with stout silken tapestries upon whose deep red ground the crescent was wrought in brilliant green. Above the cabin stood the three crescents of stern-lamps, great structures of gilded iron surmounted each by the orb and crescent. As if to continue the cabin forward and increase its size, a green awning was erected from it to shade almost half the poop-deck. Here cushions were thrown, and upon these squatted now Asad-ed-Din with Marzak, whilst Biskaine and some three or four other officers who had escorted him aboard and whom he had retained beside him for that voyage, were lounging upon the gilded balustrade at the poop's forward end, immediately above the rower's benches.

Sakr-el-Bahr alone, a solitary figure, resplendent in caftan and turban that were of cloth of silver, leaned upon the bulwarks of the larboard quarter of the poop-deck, and looked moodily back upon the receding city of Algiers which by now was no more than an agglomeration of white cubes piled up the hillside in the morning sunshine.

Asad watched him silently a while from under his beetling brows, then summoned him. He came at once, and stood respectfully before his prince.

"Think not, Sakr-el-Bahr," he said at length, "that I bear thee resentment for what befell thee resentment for what befell last night or that that happening is the sole cause of my present determination. I had a duty—a long-neglected duty—to Marzak, which at last I have undertaken to perform."

He seemed to excuse himself almost, and Marzak misliked both words and tone. Why, he wondered, must this fierce old man who had made his name a terror throughout Christendom be ever so soft and yielding where that stalwart and arrogant infidel was concerned?

Sakr-el-Bahr bowed solemnly.

"My lord," he said, "it is not for me to question thy resolves or the thoughts that may have led to them. If suffices me to know thy wishes; they are my law."

"Are they so?" said Asad tartly. "Thy deeds will scarce bear out thy protestations."

He sighed.

"Sorely was I wounded yesternight when thy marriage thwarted me and placed that Frankish maid beyond my reach. Yet I respect this marriage of thine, as all Moslems must—for all that in itself it was unlawful. But there!" He ended with a shrug. "We sail together once again to crush the Spaniard. Let no ill-will on either side o'ercloud the splendor of our task."

"Amen to that, my lord," said Sakr-el-Bahr devoutly. "I almost feared—"

"No more!" the Basha interrupted him. "Thou wert never a man to fear anything, which is why I have loved thee as a son."

But it suited Marzak not at all that the matter should be thus dismissed, that it should conclude upon a note of weakening from his father, upon what indeed amounted to a speech of reconciliation. Before Sakr-el-Bahr could make answer he had cut in to set him a question laden with wicked intent.

"How will thy bride beguile the season of thine absence, O Sakr-el-Bahr?"

"I have lived too little with women to be able to give thee an answer," said the corsair.

Marzak winced before a reply that seemed to reflect upon himself. But he returned to the attack.

"I compassionate thee that art the slave of duty, driven so soon to abandon the delight of her soft arms. Where hast thou bestowed her, O captain?"

"Where should a Moslem bestow his wife but according to the biddings of the Prophet—in the house?"

Marzak sneered.

"Verily, I marvel at thy fortitude in quitting her so soon"

"What cause is there to marvel in that a true Moslem should sacrifice his inclinations to the service of the Faith?"

"Place no excess of faith in appearances, O my father" he said.

"No more" growled the Basha. "Peace to thy tongue, Marzak, and may Allah the All-knowing smile upon our expedition, lending strength to our arms to smite the infidel to whom the fragrance of the garden is forbidden."

To this again Sakr-el-Bahr replied "Amen," but an uneasiness abode in his heart summoned thither by the questions Marzak had set him. Were they idle words calculated to do more than plague him, and to keep fresh in Asad's mind the memory of Rosamund, or were they based upon some actual knowledge?

Mrs Buckler spoke of the benefits to be derived from the O.T.A., from the economic, social, moral and spiritual standpoints, and of the distress and poverty in homes realized from free liquor traffic.

Afternoon Session

The afternoon session opened with words of welcome by Mrs. (Rev). Richardson, responded to by Mrs. A. F. Lane of Trinity church.

Devotional exercises were led by Mesdames R. Bamforth and Batten. Greetings from sister societies were given.

Addresses by several ladies followed. Mrs. Grant of Lakefield spoke on "The Call to Service" Citing the example of Joan of Arc as an outstanding illustration of the qualities necessary for real service, Mrs. Grant said that" all service is divine. The call to work unselfishly in any sphere of life is the call of God."

Mrs. Grant dwelt particularly on the type of service in which the church is most interested, and described the call to this work as a "heart call," inspired by unselfishness, and by the desire to do as God wishes, to meet a deep need in humanity, and take to the people sitting in darkness the lesson of Christ's love and sacrifice. The call to such service may come to the humblest as well as to the highest; it is a persistent call, and it is a call to certain victory

Mission Bands

An address on Mission Band work was given by Mrs. R. J. Kidd, of Trinity church, Prefacing her talk with an allusion to the influence of a mother on her growing child, and the obligation resting on parents to train up future workers for His vineyard, Mrs. Kidd said: "Are the women of the Missionary Societies doing their full duty to their children in the homes and in the churches? Do they say; the children have too much to do already, and they have no time for Mission Bands, along with their school lessons, their music and dancing, and gymnasium classes. Millions of little girls in India and Burma and China are calling to the happy children of America for help."

A recipe for a Band leader given by the speaked called for eighty parts of willingness to work anywhere for God, mixed thoroughly with humility, and five parts each of faith, determination and perseverance, four parts of desire for knowledge, and only one part of what the world calls ability ,all to be mixed with the leaven of prayer and baked in the warm rays of God's love.

Christian Stewardship

Mrs. James Seymour of Fairmount speaking in Christian Stewardship, read from a paper prepared by a friends, Mrs. Reid.

Christian Stewardship was defined by the author as having three component parts, the stewardship of possessions, powers and personality In the first place, all possessions come from God and are held under God, to be accounted for to Him finally. He has set the rate for us, and demanded that we give a tithe of all we possess for His work. Of the remainder of our possessions, whatever is spent lawfully on those things that are necessary and right, ish spent better than if it were devoted to missions, but whatever is spent over and above that on ourselves that might better be devoted to God's work, "is a clear case of embezzlement. The purpose of the tithe is not to make us exact dividers, but generous sons of God."

In the stewardship of powers, the greatest of these is prayer, which has been given us also as a trust from God, and of which we must render an account to Him. "In the early church, prayer was regarded as the Christian's first and most important work. Prayer is a great living reality among the working forces of Christian leadership. It is inconceivable that God should ask us to "continue steadfast in prayer" and "pray without ceasing", if there were no reality in prayer.

Stewardship of personality means that "we must give ourselves in every act of good that we do. Christ always gave generously, of Himself. His every act was clothed with His own personality."

Address on Japanese Work

Miss Luella Rork, a missionary home on furlough from Japanese mission fields, gave a very interesting talk on the work of the Methodist missionaries in the Flowery Kingdom. Miss Rork especially emphasized the work among the young people, and of the way people, and of the way in which in which the Buddhist workers were imitating the work of the Christian missionaries. The Japanese, she declared, as a race, were not strong on convention, but very quick at imitation of the foreigner and the adaptation of his methods to their own use.

Accompanying Miss Rork was small Mabel Bettes of Mark street church congregation, dressed as a little Japanese maiden, and singing in Japanese, "Jesus Loves Me."

Concluding Business.

A few moments of silent prayer for the district superintendent, Mrs. J. K. Moore, and for her daughter, Mrs. T. N. D. Kelly, recently bereaved by death, were offered by the meeting.

The invitation of the George street church to hold next year's district convention there was accepted.

The Courtesy committee extended the thanks of the delegates to the church trustees, the ladies of the church, the soloists, and the pianist, Mrs. T. Cruikshank, who officiated for the musical programme, which included at the afternoon session vocal numbers by Mrs. H. Doig and Ashton Fife, and a vocal uet by Mrs G. H. King and Mrs. E. Kitney.

A quiet hour of prayer closed the meeting, conducted by Rev Mr. Richardson, with prayer by Rev. Mr. Rork and benediction by Rev. T. Greatrix.

HIGHT CAN'T HIRE LAWYER.

Wife Poisoner to Ask Court to Appoint Defence Counsel.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Oct. 1.—Lawrence M. Hight, former clergyman, confessed poisoner of his wife and accomplice in the poisoning of Wilford Sweetin by his wife, told officers at the Jefferson County Jail here he planned to ask the court to appoint a lawyer to defend him, as he was nearly penniless.

Meanwhile Mrs. Elsie Sweetin, who confessed she poisoned her husband, is making plans for her defence. She had a conference at the Salem Jail with two Mount Vernon attorneys, who said they had not been retained, but they might take the case.

State's Attorney Thompson has received letters from several persons offering to adopt one or more of the three children of Mrs. Sweetin.

WIFE PLEADS GUILTY TO TARRING HER RIVAL

Nineteen Alleged Male Accomplices in Maryland Case Will Be Called To Trial.

FREDERICK, Md., October 1.—Mrs. Mary Shank pleaded guilty before Chief Judge Urner and Associate Judge Peter, in the Circuit Court yesterday to an indictment charging her with tarring and feathering Dorothy Grandon, a young Martinsburg, Va., girl, at Myersville, near here, last July.

Called as the first of twenty cases, Mrs. Shank entered a demurrer and after the Court had overruled it a general plea of guilty was offered.

Mrs. Shank had admitted applying the tar and feathers to Miss Grandon, who, she alleged, had been tampering with the affections of her husband, Lloyd Shank.

Evidence in the remaining nineteen cases will be heard before the woman is sentenced.

Harry Leatherman, whose case was next called, asked trial by jury. Only four jurymen were secured from the regular panel and a number of additional talesmen were summoned

Miss Grandon identified Leatherman as one of the men who surrounded her when the tar and feathers were applied. The attack was made along the State highway, and Miss Grandon testified that it was Leatherman who flashed a light on her and directed passing automobilists to "look at our job."

HEAVY-HANDED DINERS

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The average daily crowd of 70,000 people eating in the numerous restaurants at the Wembley Exhibition are responsible for the smashing of 30,000 pieces of crockery every six days. In an average week the breakages are 761 dozen cups, 345 dozen sauces, 472 dozen plates and 774 dozen miscellaneous pieces, according to the firm which has the contract for feeding the visitors.

These figures do not include glasses broken in the drinking saloons, and it is stated that it is no uncommon thing in a busy week for one bar to smash 1,500 glasses. As there are some 54 bars in the exhibition it is apparent that the number of glasses smashed since the exhibition opened in April must be about 700,000.

Hundreds of Salmon Are Counted in Alaska Each Year.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Oct. 1.—For the fourth consecutive year hundreds of thousands of red salmon have been stopped and counted as they made their spawning "run" from the Karluk river into Karluk Lake on Kodiak Island. The work was under the direction of C. H. Gilbert, fisheries expert of Stanford University

Professor Gilbert points out that if the number of fish that return at maturity to he spawning ground in a certain year can be ascertained, there will be definite information as to the number to be saved each year for reporduction. The count also will determinate the maximum of the salon run. Tabulation for the fourth consecutive year will enable the packers to ascertain the number of four, five, six and seven-year salmon.

Dr. Robt. G. Jackson, of Toronto, "Youth at 65" won the annual $1,000 first prize offered by Physical Culture Magazine for the best story of health restoration through natural means.

Dr. Jackson is rated as 98% perfect physically, a perfection that athletes rarely attain at any age, yet at 55 he was a physical nonentity—a wreck.

Authorities have claimed that a man cannot develop muscles after 45, yet Dr. Jackson, between 55 and 65, has developed muscles and a general physique that any youth would be proud of, and such as not one youth in 5,000 possesses at any age.

Dr. Jackson says:

"Any man can do what I have done if he eats the proper body-building foods."

Dr. Jackson says

it was Roman Meal and milk, lots of both, that built him to his physically perfect state, and it will do as much for any man or woman who will use it consistently through a period of months or years, "if there is no malignant or advanced organic disease."

Roman Meal is whole wheat, whole rye, flaxin and bran, a food supplying every element needed by the body and nothing at all not needed by the body.

Dr. Jackson proved its unequalled food value by beating a man of 35 in a 1300 mile bicycle contest in April and May, 1924. Dr. Jackson at 65, though living almost entirely upon Roman Meal and milk during the entire 19 days, simply ran away from his young challenger.

GAVE A CONCERT.

Name-day of Bishop O'Brien Honored Last Evening.

A concert, attended by an audience that taxed the limits of the seating capacity of the big hall at St.Alphonsus'Lyceum,was held Monday evening in honor of the Name-day of His Lordship Bishop D'Brien given by the children of St. Mary's Convent and St. Peter's School, under the direction of several of the Sisters of St. Joseph. A pleasant programme of musical and elocutionary numbers was much enjoyed by those present.

The programme opened with a chorus, "Festal Greetings," by children of the Convent School, followed by a piano trio, "Dutch Kiddies," played by Veronica Scollard, Helen Archambault and Hilda Sullivan. A song and drill, by tiny tots dressed in white, with wreaths and hoops of blossoms, was entitled "Flowery Garlands," and was followed by the Tower Scene from "King John," in which the four actors did excellently. The part of Hubert, the jailer, was taken by Gilbert Kay, that of the little Prince Arthur by Eugene Snider, and the two Guards were portrayed by Charles Pennefather and Jack Mulvihill.

Miss Martha Baumer gave an instrumental solo, Beethoven's "Sonata Pathetique," and a number of small girls presented a dainty little operetta, 'The Shepherdess' Dream' in two scenes. This portrays in fantastic fashion the dream of a small shepherdess, in which small fairies and a magic packet of fairy gold figure prominently. A pretty song occurs in the operetta, rendered by the Peddler and the Fairy Weaver,played by Genevieve O'Brien and Gladys Brault. The shepherdesses were: Marie Doris (leader), Isabel Pennefather, Maggaret Hurley, Margaret Schooley, Madeline Doherty, Marjorie Miller, Madeline Wolff, Phyllis Cowie, Bernadette Galvin and Geraldine Kelly. The fairies: Anna Donoghue, Madeline LaPointe, Anna Swisteinikoff, Florence O'Toole, Marie O'Donnell, Thelma O'Donnelly, Eleanor Pope, Dorothy Young, Mary Deforge, Jeannette Boland and Roseline Clancy.

A violin duett, "Irish Airs," by Gerald Hutchinson and Joseph Nolan, was followed by a reading, Tennyson's "The Holy Grail," by Agnes McCarthy, and a chorus by boys, "The Miller of the Dee," in which Herman Halsted played the role, in costume, of a hale and hearty miller.

A piano duo, Mendelssohn's "Concerta, Opus 25," was played by Mildred Greene and Isobel McKee, and the musical programme concluded with a vocal rendition of "Ave Maris Stella," by a Convent girls' chorus.

The presentation of a large bouquet of roses was made to the Bishop who addressed the children and the audience briefly. Monsignor McColl also accompanied the Bishop, with several other members of the clergy of the city.

Elementary piano (first class honors), John Burke; (pass), Dorothy Young. Preparatory piano (honors), Vincent Collins, Anna Donoghue, Bernadette Guerin. Primary piano (honors), Evelyn Emery, Marcelle Tobin, Monica Goodwin, (pass), Agnes LaPointe, Marion Fitzpatrick, Johanna Perry. Junior piano, Hilda Sullivan. Progressive piano, Margaret Carroll. Piano harmony, (honors), Isobel McKee, (pass), Martha Baumer. Progressive history and form (honors) Martha Baumer, Isobel McKee. Progressive harmony, Martha Baumer. Junior theory (1st class honors), Alma Archambault. Primary theory (1st class honors), Agnes LaPointe. Elementary theory, (1st class honors) Johanna Perry, Marion Fitzpatrick, (pass) Marcelle Tobin.

AUNT OF BEATRICE FEE REFERRED TO QUARRELS BETWEEN THE COUPLE

Murdered Girl Lived With Witness In Toronto and McGaughey Was a Frequent Visitor — A Death Bed Confession.

PRISONER DRANK.

Was Put on a Six Weeks' Probationary Period By the Girl—McGaughey's Habits Changed.

LINDSAY, Oct. 1.—At the trial of Fred. McGaughey here, Margaret Madill, of 130 Bleecker Street, aunt of the late Beatrice Fee, said she was born in Peterboro and spent her school-days in Emily Township. Beatrice Fee lived with the witness in Toronto. Mrs. Madill is a trained nurse, having studied in Rochester and practiced six years. She identified the letter addressed to McGaughey as Miss Fee's handwriting. Miss Fee would have been 19 this October.

Mrs. Madill had known Fred. McGaughey about two years. Miss Fee had an engagement ring over a year. McGaughey went to visit Beatrice at the home of the witness in Toronto, and corresponded with her a great deal.

Mrs. Madill learned that there was a disagreement between the young couple shortly after Christmas. Letters from McGaughey to Beatrice Fee indicated the trouble. McGaughey visited in Toronto about five times in the spring this year, one time being seven weeks before May 24. On that occasion he remained one week. He was not the same as when she first met him; he had lost taste about his dress, and he had liquor on several occasions. He quarreled with Beatrice about the liquor, she wanting him to give it up. Mrs. Madill heard conversations between the two that indicated the cause of the quarrels. Only on one night was there friendship between them. They made an agreement that Miss Fee would go down in six weeks, and if he wasn't drinking things would remain as they stood then. He was quite satisfied and left next day.

Three weeks later Fred. McGaughey re-appeared in Toronto and called on the telephone. Later he went to the house. He appeared well-groomed, and wore a new navy blue serge suit. He drove a new car, and took a party out for a dance. At 11 o'clock that night he was bright and cheerful. Never with very much to say, he was nevertheless very friendly.

To Mr. Frost, in cross-examination, Mrs. Madill said McGaughey appeared to lose interest in his personal appearance, and Miss Fee was in the habit of fixing his tie and straightening him up. McGaughey took it as a joke, and laughed about it.

Beatrice Fee had part of her trousseau ready and was buying part of her wedding clothes from time to time. She was to have been married in October. She had not bought furniture for the house, and had only acquired small things.

The six week's probation was over the question of drinking and his forever tormenting her to leave the city. It was quite understood that she would not be married until her 20th birthday and he wanted her to leave the city and go to the country.

Didn't Like the City

Lawrence Madill said he had known the accused four years. He remembered when McGaughey stayed at the Mossop Hotel, when the accused told him, girls coming from small towns unconsciously get into city ways and he thought Beatrice was following along the lines other girls were teaching her.

McGaughey asked if anything was known of Beatrice going to the United States and said if she was going to waste two years time running around before she could decide he would stop her from going. He would not wait. If she could not grasp that the life on the farm was better than the city life, he would have to persuade her.

The dangers of girls in the big cities were discussed by the two young men and McGaughey asked what Madill would do if his girl had turned against him in that way.

Madill replied that he would give her time.

McGaughey said he would stop Miss Fee; he would not let her go on. He was afraid the attractions of the city would wean her from the country life to which he wanted to take her.

Under cross-examination the witness said the parties had one drink each Fred had the liquor

A DYING STATEMENT

Beatrice Fee's dying statement taken down in writing by the Crown Attorney on the day of her death and signed by her was entered just before Court closed its morning sitting to-day.

It read as follows:

"I, Beatrice Fee living in the Township of Emily, declare that I do not expect to recover and in expectation of immediate death make this declaration. I was out driving with Frederick W. McGaughey last night in his car. Frederick William McGaughey shot me. He wanted me to be married and not go back to the city I refused. He said I had broken his heart and I would not break anybody else's. We were both in the front seat when he shot me."

NEW CONSERVATIVE AMENDMENTS READY

Government's Project For Arranging Ulster's Boundaries Would Have Clear Sailing.

(By Lloyd Allen, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON, October 1. — Three Conservative amendments were prepared for introduction during the second reading of the Irish Bill today. The indications were, however, that the government's project for arranging Ulster's boundaries would have a comparatively clear sailing.

With the Liberals supporting the bill and the Conservative opposition bent on embarrassing Prime Minister MacDonald rather than blocking the measure, there is little likelihood of its failing.

The real trouble for the government will come at the end of the month, when parliament takes up its regular fall session. The difficulties of the Irish situation will become critical when an attempt is made to enforce the boundaries measure.

The three Conservative amendments provided:

2nd: Any party aggrieved by the decisions of the Boundary commission which the bill establishes, can appeal to the Crown.

3rd: The commissioner appointed in place of an Ulsterite shall be considered a commissioner only so long as the boundary is merely rectified, and no territory transferred. Ulster having refused to participate in the work of the commission the government will appoint a representative for the north of Ireland.

Unionists from Ulster may attempt to force a division tonight on a motion which they introduced yesterday, providing for the rejection of the entire bill. It is practically certain that this motion would fail.

FRENCH TAX LEGAL.

Herriott Told Germany That French Way of Taxing Was Legal.

PARIS, Oct. 1. — (Canadian Press).—Premier Herriot, in a formal note despatched to Germany today, replying to the German protest against France's imposition of a 26 per cent. import tax on all goods from Germany, makes virtually the same explanation as he gave to the German Charge d'Affairs when he protested last week—namely, that this way of collecting reparations is entirely legal and according to established precedent.

A DOUBLE MURDER.

Man Lacked Nerve To End His Own Life and Gave Himself Up.

OTTAWA, October 1 (Canadian Press). — John Buchanan Pirie, bookkeeper for the Ottawa Electric and Gas Company, walked into the Ottawa Police Station shortly before nine o'clock this morning and calmly informed the sergeant in charge that he had murdered his wife and two children, and that he would have ended his own life, but did not have nerve.

Pirie was detained ,and the police immediately went to the house at 32 Grove Avenue, where Pirie had been rooming with his family and found Mrs. Pirie and two children dead in their beds.

DAIRY COMMISSIONER.

Former Peterboro Man Made Good In the Dairy Industry In Saskatchewan.

A recent issue of The Morning Leader, published in Regina, Saskatchewan, contains an article, recording the appointment of P. Clifton Kidd, formerly assistant to the Provincial Dairy Commissioner, as Dairy Commissioner of the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture. Mr. Kidd is a former resident of Peterboro, and nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Kennedy, 600 Water Street. He took up commercial dairying after a few years' office experience and received his first training as a butter-maker at Olds, Alberta. He left Regina with the first contingent in August, 1914, and served with the 5th Battalion during the war. On his return, he joined the staff of the dairy and cold storage branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, for whom he was an inspector of dairy products until he joined the dairy branch of the Provincial Department in 1921.

GRAND TRIES TO PLEASE EVERYONE

This Week's Programme Is a Particularly Good One.

The management of the Grand Opera House, in bringing a number of diversified theatrical attractions to the city, is endeavouring to meet the wishes and satisfy the tastes of all classes in the community.

Their programme for this week's entertainment is particularly good. To-morrow evening "The Gingham Girl" will be presented to Opera House patrons, and on Friday and Saturday the world-famous actor, Robert B. Mantell, appears in classic repertoire.

To bring attractions such as these to any city requires a large outlay on the part of the company and the theatre management both, and it is necessary that the patronage be sufficient to reimburse them for the expenses entailed. The management, therefore, asks the support of the community, that productions such as these may continue to visit Peterborough, and give genuine theatre-lovers an opportunity of seeing plays such as are presented in the larger centres.

HERO IN THE COOP.

That Is One Reason Why Monarchist Demonstration Failed To-day.

BERLIN, October 1 (United Press). — October 1, the day the Fascisti expects to find their hero, Lieut. Hitler, free, found the notorious agitator still a prisoner in the Landsbourf Amlech.

An eleventh hour move by the States Attorney apparently prevented the release of Hitler, who was imprisoned for his part in the beer cellar putsch farce this year.

A fresh putsch had been planned for to-day—as was freely rumoured throughout Germany yesterday.

The ringleaders were awed by the imposing military preparations, and failed to act.

Berlin and Munich were quiet.

WAR PRESCRIBED BY THE PROTOCOL

Arbitration Security and Disarmament Presented To The Assembly.

By Henry Wood
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

GENEVA, Oct. 1.—All war, unless ordered by the League of Nations, is prescribed by the protocol and covenant of arbitration security and disarmament which was presented to the Assembly for final discussion to-day.

With representatives of fifty-five nations present, the Assembly convened to hear the reports of the commissions which have been working on various phases of the ambitious project to bring about universal and permanent peace.

M. Politis, of Greece, presented the arbitration clauses in which war is prescirbed and all signatories accepted obligatory arbitration or conciliation, while Premier Benes, of Czecho-Slovakia presented those clauses of the project dealing with mutual guarantees of national security and disarmament.

The furore and alarm stirred up by the Japanese delegations amendment has died down. The delegates gathered and an atmosphere of peace hovered over Geneva. League leaders were jubilant over the successful solution of the Japanese crisis.

While the Assembly was talking peace, the League Council heard charges of activity resembling war, the charges were brought against England by Fethi Bey, Turkish observer.

Fethi Bey delivered a list of five English airplane raids in the Mosul region occurring between September 17th and 22nd, in which, he alleged, many Turks had been killed and wounded. The Turks also suffered heavy losses in live stock, he said. The latest English raid, Fethi Bey charged, was directed against a convey of camels belonging to private parties. Two camel drivers were wounded, twenty camels killed and forty wounded.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Dear Sir,—Last night I dreamed a dream, and in my dream, I stood in a large hall or assembly room, in which a conference of some sort appeared to be in progress.

Upon a raised platform sat a being clothed in shining raiment, like an angel of light, and upon his head was a helmet of brass with an inscription upon it, "Defender of the Pure." Around him were gathered a crowd of his supporters, each with some badge or motto denoting their position, as captain of the moderate party, president of the real temperance society, etc., etc. They were all clothed in white raiment and in the dim light in the hall I thought I must have been carried to some celestial conference, when suddenly a bright light flooded the hall, and I noticed that each person assembled had cloven feet, and horns upon their heads, and I heard a voice saying, Beware, beware, things are not always what they seem, for Satan oftentimes appears as an angel of light. This sentence was repeated three times; with that I awoke.

While pondering on what this vision could mean, I happened to take up the Evening Examiner, and on glancing over its pages I came across two advertisements under the heading, "The Purity Defence League," on reading which I found they were inserted by the advocates of more liquor. I was much puzzled, sir. Liquor defending purity was too funny for words, when again I seemed to hear the words, Beware, beware, things are not always what they seem, and as I gazed at those advertisements I seemed to see again those cloven feet and those horns.

Yours faithfully,
GEO. LEADER.

A PROTEST.

Sir,—The Purity Defence League hereby enters a protest against the manner in which the Plebiscite Bulletin is edited. Attempts are apparently being very deliberately made by the prohibitionist daily sheet to mislead the unthinking public. The protest is this: Statistics are quoted to show a decreased output from breweries and distilleries in Ontario. This fact is quoted as if it proved that under the O. T. A. there has been a great improvement and lessening of consumption. Why are not the statistics of outside distilleries and breweries quoted? Their output has so increased as to astonish the whole civilized world. This illicit output of outside distilleries, etc., is what the bootleggers pour into Ontario. Of course there are no statistics concerning this consumption, but the army of officials trying to head it off in Canada and the U. S. shows how great it is. Possibly the Bulletin errs from ignorance; if so, it can explain.

CROP REPORTS

ALBERTA CROPS YIELD WELL ON SUMMER FALLOW

Stubbled-in Grain Giving No Return This Year.

METHODS COUNT.

Alfalfa Crop Is One of Best In Years—Average Wheat.

LETHBRIDGE, Alta, Oct. 1.—Threshing has been general throughout Southern Alberta, and reports bear out early estimates of a good yield on all summer fallowed land. One farmer in the Raymond district threshed 40 bushels to the acre, while twelve miles farther west, in the Magrath district, Henry Hillier beat him by two bushels to the acre, a field of good summerfallow, 20 acres in area, giving him a return of 1,000 bushels of No. 1 wheat. These are two outstanding yields to date. Wheat threshed in the better sections of the country is averaging around 30 bushels to the acre. As the crop line moves east, the yield grows less. Stirling, which ordinarily raises a good crop, will not thresh more than 15 bushels to the acre on an average. The crop is difficult to estimate, but it is believed that this rail division will market upwards of 20,000,000 bushels, slightly more than half the amount handled last year, the year of the bumper crop. Drought in a number of heavy wheat-producing sections is responsible for this drop. Belated rains in other parts are given as a reason also, the grain failing to fill out properly.

Methods counted for much this year. Never have good summerfallow methods been so strongly upheld as this year. In instance after instance it is a matter of success and failure, for stubbled-in crops for the most part will give no return. Irrigated crops are now being threshed, fields treated to two and three applications of water averaging between 30 and 40 bushels to the acre.

The alfalfa crop is one of the best in years, also the alfalfa seed crop. Baling outfits are busy and orders are not lacking. British Columbia dealers are buying freely, the drought in Washington, Oregon and Montana cutting off importations from these states to a large extent. The hay crop of Southern Alberta will be handled through a "pool" this fall for the first time. The Pincher Creek co-operative society, and that of the hay growers of the Lethbridge district, have combined in a joint selling organization which will be incorporated. This really is the Alberta Hay Pool. Practically all the hay growers are members of it. Alfalfa is now bringing the grower from $10 to $13 a ton. Under the conditions of the "pool" all hay must be carefully graded and prepared for market. It is believed that these regulations will do much to improve the reputation of the Southern Alberta product.

The potato crop will not be large this season, but the quality of the tubers is good. Careful selection of seed has steadily improved the potato crop in these parts, the Potato Growers' Association having done much effective missionary work among the growers. Truck gardeners are busy disposing of their cabbage, much of the local crop going to B. C., although the coal strike is affecting that market.

COBOURG AND THE DISTRICT

Farmers Look For a Late Season This Year—Pears Good Crop.

COBOURG, September 27. (Special.) — "It will be a late session all through," said a farmer to-day, who had only completed harvesting operations this week. "The harvest was late, and the root crop and the corn is late, and now the plowing will be late" he said.

"If we have any kind of an open fall it will even up matters," he conceded, "but the present outlook is for farmers being far behind with their work this fall."

Pears are Good Crop.

Pears of almost all varieties are an immense crop in this district. In urban gardens were there is a tree or two, there is such a plentitude that the neighbors are sharing them and in the orchard the crop is heavy also.

The fruit is accordingly a glut on the market and hard to dispose of.

STARCH IN FERNS.

As long as Hawaii grows tree ferns, it need never suffer for lack of starch. The tree fern has large starchy core that many generations ago the natives discovered was good to eat, and could be used in place o the taro and the sweet potato, their favourite and staple crops.

BINDER TWINE FOM HOLLAND

REGINA, Sask., Oct. 1.—Large quantities of binder twine for Western Canada will be shipped from Holland next year, according to the plans of the United Rope Wrks of Holland. Some shipments of twine from Holland have already been made this year, but it is expected to largely increase these next year. Shipments will be made to Vancouver by way f the Panama canal.

ALFALFA IN GONABEE.

William Brown, of Gonabee, had a good crop this year. From five acres he cut 15 tons of alfalfa, with a good third crop in prospect. He also had one and a half acres of corn which measured, on the average, 10 feet.

Meat Packing For Export Dying Out in United States.

By GEORGE BRITT

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—The range-riding cowboy has passed out of the western picture, and the force responsible is the rising value of land.

Eventually, the cow may follow the cowboy, and America may have either to import its beef or face a famine.

The latter possibility, however, will not be reached for years to come, in the opinion of Dr. Tage Ellinger, assistant director of the livestock bureau of Armour & Co. So far, the American output of beef has remained undiminished, the sole change being in the system of production.

"During the last ten years the method of conditioning cattle for market has been revolutionized," says Dr. Ellinger.

"There is very little cattle-raising on the big ranges, with great drives to market across such states as Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas. It takes too many acres to feed a steer. Land is worth too much. The cowboy finds himself out of a job.

"The system to-day is based largely on the 'baby beef.' Farmers in the western states raise cattle only until they are about seven to ten months old. And instead of mongrel range cattle they breed them carefully from the best beef-producing stock.

"A calf eats little grass during the first seven months, and the farmer can produce them with fair economy of land, leaving plenty of acreage for cotton, corn or wheat. Then the breeder sells his calves as 'feeder cattle' or 'baby beeves' to be fattened in the corn belt.

"The corn belt farmer keeps them from three to six months, putting them through the 'polishing up' process, after which they are ready to go on the market to bring the highest return in proportion to the investment. The second farmer buys his stock either directly from the breeder, or through a commission merchant or at auctions held throughout the corn belt. Corn is raised just to fatten cattle.

To prove that turning the western ranges into crop lands has not injured cattle production, Dr. Ellinger quoted Department of Agriculture figures showing the number of all cattle on the farms increased from something more than 56,000,000 in 1913 to more than 66,000,000 in 1923. And only 4,000,000 of the increase was in milk cows.

The change wrought by the baby beef in the final product at the packing house is shown by the reduction in average weight of all cattle slaughtered in the United States from 1053 pounds in 1893 to 996 pounds in 1923.

Baby beef are the most economical of cattle from the viewpoint of meat production. Of the total weight of a baby beef on the hoof, says Dr. Ellinger, 57 per cent. is saleable meat, while on the range steer only 42 per cent. is meat.

"Meat packing for export undoubtedly is slipping, in fact has almost died, in the United States," Dr. Ellinger says. "Europe is getting its meat from Canada, South America, South Africa and Australasia. But by means of the baby beef system we can produce enough for domestic consumption for years to come."

KEEPING CORN WITHOUT SILO

Farmers Have Good Results From Stacking and Rot Is Small.

BUILD CAREFULLY.

This advice is furnished by Andrew Boss, who has made stack silage for four seasons and recommends it in place of bundle fodder corn.

He makes the stack about 20 feet in diameter and 20 feet high, keeping the centre lower than the outside until the top is reached, when it is filled full. The bundles must be distributed evenly over the surface with the butts facing out.

During the winter the top of the stack is kept covered with a foot o two of wild hay which can be thrown back as the silage is taken off. To prevent extreme freezing this covering should be replaced after the day's feed has been thrown down.

Corn preserved in this way will rot in for about eight inches on the outside of the stack, but as the butts of the stacks only are affected the loss is not serious.

Gases From Silage Are Menace To Farmer's Life

Circulation of air is necessary to keep the partially filled silo free of these gases, especially from fresh cut silage. They form over night especially, making entrance into the silo the next morning dangerous.

To avert this danger, silage cutter may be run for a few minutes before entering. The air stirred up by the blower will dilute the gases and blow them out.

MARMORA YIELD GOOD.

James McAvoy and George Bedore Each Thresh 1,400 Bushels.

MARMORA, Sept. 30.—Frequency of rain still being the rule, harvesting was very late in this part of Hastings County. Threshing results continue to show good figures. James McAvoy and George Bedore have both obtained approximately 1,400 bushels of grain.

Concerning fruit, it may be said that whilst it has been a poor year for plums, pears show up well with apples for plentitude.

EQUAL TO QUART.

Treat Fall Wheat Seed At Time of Planting

Much money can be saved by treating wheat seed before sowing. There is little danger of wheat infection from other sources, if the seed is treated for smut before planting.

In the treatment the seed is thoroughly cleaned by running through a fanning mill. The grain is then soaked or sprinkled with a formaldehyde solution of one pint to 40 gallons of water. Or a dry mixture may be made with copper carbonate at any rate of two ounces to a bushel of wheat.

FARMERS FEAR HEAVY FROSTS

Canneries Would Be Short If Corn Touched—Crop Is Late.

LITTLE LAST YEAR.

COBOURG, Oct. 1.—Farmers and the managers of the county canning factories also, are very desirous that the heavy frosts keep off for a week or two longer or until the sweet corn has reached such a state of maturity that it can be cut. Corn is very late this year, but it is expected, by some late front farmers at least, that it will be ready to be cut this week if the frost keeps off. As canneries ran short on the amount of corn canned last year a good output this season is greatly desired.

CANADA AND EUROPE.

Comparison of Farms Shows Dominion Outyields Old Land.

The difference between farm production in Europe and Canada is one of intensity, as against extensive practice. The European farms few acres, devotes more human labor on each acre and secures nearly double the yield per acre of the Canadian farmer. On the other hand, the Canadian farms more acres and from this larger acreage he outyields the European farmer. In Europe there is larger acre production, but at greater cost in labor and materials.

When the times comes for heavier acre yields, our farms will no doubt b eequal to the requirements. When economic conditions justify the necessary increased cost of production, the experts say that it will be possible to increase the output per acre of 10 important crops by something over 45 per cent. One can understand what this means through better fertilization alone.

DAIRY PRODUCTS SHOW INCREASE

AVERAGE PRICE 34.

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 1.—Dairy production in Canada increased in value more than $15,000,000 last year, compared with the previous year's output, according to a bulletin issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

The total output of creameries, cheese factories and condenseries in 1923 was valued at $120,110,562, the report shows. This included butter, cheese, condensed products, ice cream, cream, buttermilk and casein.

The quantity of creamery butter made in Canada last year was 164,456,759 pounds. This was the largest production ever recorded in a single year, and had a value of $56,894,008, said the report. The average price a pound realized by producers during the year was 34 cents. Quebec was the leader with 60,179,616 pounds.

HARVEST COMPLETED.

Warsaw Crops Are Nearly All In Barns—Yield Good.

WARSAW, Sept. 30.—At last the summer harvest is about all in. Some oats were hauled in Monday and Tuesday that were ready to bring in two weeks ago but for the rains.

On the whole, all grains but peas and early barley have done well; even where the growth was discouragingly little in the early summer. The grain has turned out well for the straw, and it is generally very heavy. Most early barley was frost injured.

Much of the pea crop was ploughed under; some was harvested but not threshed, and what is threshed was poor. One farmer had a large field and had seventeen bushels of peas.

The marsh-hay harvest is going on.

There has been frost enough in some parts to wilt some of the tenderest plants, and odd trees are colored.

Berries in Mid-September.

Omemee Man Has Fresh Berries and Cream For Supper.

OMEMEE, Sept. 30.—A resident was fortunate in having barrie and cream for supper recently the 15th inst., having piel bushes sufficient berries for three fruit dishes full.

Late raspberries were selling on the Peterboro market this week at 35c

BEARS BLAMED FOR RUMORS OF POOR HARVESTS

QUALITY BETTER.

Value of Wheat This Year Is $70,000,000 More Than Last.

TORONTO, Oct. 1.—The improvement which has taken place in the crop outlook throughout Canada during the past month is most reassuring. Only now is final proof becoming available to confirm the suspicion that bearish crop reports were being broadcast earlier in the year by grain speculators for their own ends. Then, again, ideal growing weather during early September, and perfect harvest conditions, have added many millions to the indicated value of the grain crops. Inspection reports coming in daily emphasize the large amount of wheat that is grading No. 1. One report states that one day's volume of No. 1 Hard wheat was greater than last year's total. At anyrate, the quality of the wheat this year will far surpass that of recent years. A current estimate places the value of the wheat yield alone at $380,000,000, as against $316,000,000 for last year, and the present price trend lends support to an estimate far above the figure for last year. The value of the wheat yields since 1918 were as follows:

In Ontario and Quebec, crop returns have greatly surpassed expectations and prices are remaining relatively firm. As a result, the buying power of this section of Canada is gradually being enhanced. Actual retail buying continues to expand moderately, the greatest improvement taking place naturally in the agricultural areas. It is beginning to be reported that this increased buying is extending to the medium-sized cities, and that the wholesale houses are feeling the effect of increased demand. In the manufacturing industries there is not yet much actual change, although the ordinary fall business is providing for a certain increase in orders. The foreign trade position continues to improve, and this should be more marked during the next three months. Collections have definitely improved. Only a small number of centres still report collections to be unsatisfactory. As a result of the grain movement, car loadings of revenue freight have turned definitely upward, an improvement being in evidence in both the eastern and the western districts.

A Tale for the Children

(By Margaret A. Bartlett.)

"What becomes of all these leaves, Auntie?" asked Elizabeth, as she and her playmates scuffled through the leaves piled knee-deep on either side of the old wood road.

"I know they fall from the trees every year, but somehow they never seem to get much deeper in the woods. Why don't they get piled up so high you can't wade through them?"

"Do you remember when we came to the woods last fall?" Aunt Mae asked.

"Say, we had a great time playing in the leaves, didn't we, girls?" shouted the Little-Boy-Next-Door. "Remember the houses and forts we made, Miss Harris?"

"I certainly do." Miss Harris smiled at the happy recollection. "Were the leaves the same then as they are now?"

"Oh, no," answered Edith. "They were light coloured and dry then, and were scattered all over the ground. Why, Auntie!" Edith stared in surprise at the ground beneath the trees, green-carpeted now with ferns and plants, "why, Aunt Mae, what has become of all the leaves that came off those trees last fall?"

"The wind blew them into the hollows, didn't it, Miss Harris?" asked one little lass.

"Not all of them, dear. Come, let us see what has happened to them. Pick a few of those ferns and notice what is at the roots."

"Old wet leaves as black as dirt." It didn't take the children long to discover that.

"Yes, those are last year's leaves. But where do you suppose the leaves that fell the year before are?"

"Oh, underneath!" came the ready response.

"Dig down and see."

Six pairs of little hands quickly dug into the cool damp earth.

"This dirt's nothing but leaves, Auntie." Edith was the first to announce her discovery. "There are big leaves on the top, but underneath the leaves are broken and pressed down ever so firmly."

"And deeper down the leaves are all in little bits of pieces so they hardly look like leaves at all," added Elizabeth.

"Just look at the hole I've dug, Miss Harris," the Little-Boy-Next-Door broke in, "I've dug down to ——"

"Real dirt?" questioned Aunt Mae. Then, noting the look on Miss Harris' face, "Oh, I know what you mean. It's all rotten, decayed leaves, just like that other dirt was all old rocks and stones, isn't it?"

"Yes. That is exactly right. You have dug deep enough to see the leaves in all stages of their decay, from the whole leaf to the moist black soil. What is it, Edith?" seeing a puzzled look on the little girl's face. "Don't you understand?"

"I undersand about the leaves here in the woods, Auntie; but I was wondering about the leaves down in the village. Do they change into soil, too? And how about the plants and flowers that the frost kills, and old apples and fruit that are left to rot on the ground? Before the snow comes in the fall, there seem to be dead leaves and plants and flowers everywhere, but in the spring when the snow melts and everything gets green, I can't see those old brown, dead things anywhere. Have they turned into soil?"

"Perhaps not all in one winter. But eventually they will. The snow and rain help to rot them, and the wind carries the particles from place to place, or else they get buried in the ground, where they gradually rot and help another year to provide the nourishment for new ferns, flowers and plants."

"I'm awfully glad you've told us what happens to the leaves and the flowers, Auntie," burst out tender-hearted Elizabeth. "for now I'll never feel bad again when the frost comes. I always thought that was the end of the pretty things."

"I know how you feel," said Aunt Mae. "I always felt the same way when I was a little girl. Come, let us pick a pretty bouquet of ferns and flowers to take home, and we'll see who can tell the best story about them to Mother."

SWEET CLOVER GOOD IN DOURO

Richard Sheehan, Jr., Threshes 225 Bushels From 20 Acres.

GROUND IS DRY.

Mr. Richard Sheehan, Jr., threshed from 225 to 250 bushels of sweet clover from twenty acres, which is an excellent yield. The seed is a splendid sample. Mr. Sheehan's clover should prove an exceptionally profitable crop.

Corn cutting is in full swing and the yield is splendid.

In many cases, farmers are finding the ground very dry for ploughing.

ACQUIRE PLANTS FROM FAR CHINA

United States To Be Enriched Through Work of Explorers.

WHEAT AND BARLEY.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The United States may be enriched by the acquisition of new plants from China after a three-year exploration trip undertaken for the government by P. H. Dorsett, for 25 years with the office of foreign seed and plant introduction of the Department of Agriculture, and his son, J. H. Dorsett.

The Dorsetts sailed recently for China, where they will search particularly for hardy plants for cultivation in our northern great plains region. Many interesting strains of wheat, barley and other cereals, known to exist in Manchuria and northern China, may prove of great value in this country.

Besides these plants, the Dorsetts will bring back for propagation in the department gardens here roots, cuttings and seeds of such plants as the hardy Chinese bush cherries which preliminary investigations have shown to be adapted as far north as Mandan, North Dakota, and whose fruit is much like the domestic sour cherry.

Besides these there will be collections of hardy shade and windbreak trees, Japanese persimmons, Chinese jujubes, peaches, pears, apricots, plums and many other Chinese carieties of fruit and other crops.

MANGE MITES COSTLY.

Heavy losses of pork products due to mange mites of hogs have been reported lately to the Department of Agriculture by its inspectors in the middle west. Mange mites cause meat losses running into hundreds of thousands of dollars annually, according to recent information.

According to a recent Government bulletin, an enlarged acreage is likely to be sown in fall wheat this season, the good harvest giving encouragement in this direction. About one-third more ground will be devoted to this crop if present indications are to be relied upon, and the ground was never in better condition for plowing and cultivating, so that a good seed bed is to be counted upon.

DAIRY MEN IN SASKATCHEWAN MAKE PROGRESS

Two Million Mark Passed In Butter Output During July.

PASTURES GOOD.

Three New Cheese Factories Opened This Season—Two Creameries.

REGINA, Sask., Oct. 1.—"The truth of the old adage 'better late than never' has surely been borne out in connection with this season's belated rains in their effect on dairy production," states Mr. P. C. Kidd, dairy commissioner for Saskatchewan. "The pastures in many districts are still in excellent condition, and it is very gratifying to be able to report that the August output again exceeded the two-million mark and was in fact, not far behind the high water mark set in July. The output in August, 1924, was 2,106,369 pounds of butter, as against 1,765,930 pounds in August, 1923, an increase of 19.3 per cent., while up to the end of August the total output for the year 1924 was 9,502,159, compared with 8,083, 30 pounds in the same period of 1923.

Conditions in connection with dairy production in the province at the present are encouraging. Either the usual slump in cream receipts consequent on harvesting operations has been greatly delayed this year, or is not going to develop to the usual degree. When harvesting operations get into full swing it not only results in a drop in receipts, but also in irregular delivery, and it behooves cream graders and buttermakers alike to pay particularly careful attention to quality at this time, as, in many instances, more butter is being churned on the farm, resulting in small and delayed deliveries of cream at the creameries.

New Manufacturing Plants.

Three new cheese factories have been started in Saskatchewan during the current season, located respectively at Prudhomme, Duck Lake and Debden. A plant was started at Foam Lake last year, while another factory has been running at Albertville for some five years past, making a total of five factories operating in the province. The total output of these is not large, though the make for the province this year will be considerably in excess of 1923.

Two new creameries were also started this year. The Central Creameries, Calgary, opened a branch a few weeks ago at Alsask, while McIntosh & Sons, of Tofield, Alberta, have opened a branch at Biggar.

CANNING PROBLEMS OF FARMER'S WIFE

Why Tomatoes Spoil. Tomatoes are one of the easiest products to can because they contain a high per cent. of acid. Carelessness in grading, blanching and properly sterilizing are probably the cause of spoilage. There are times when the bacteria which cause the spoilage are particularly virulent. To prevent their action the greatest care must be exercised with either the open kettle or the cold pack.

How Full a Jar Should Be For Processing: This depends upon the product. If it is rich in starch like corn, one-half inch from the top. Otherwise one-fourth inch.

Result if Cans Are Filled Too Full: The liquid will be forced out during processing so that the cans will not be full. Rubber rings may be pushed out of position or covers sprung.

Amount of Water For Processing: Water should come 1 1-2 to 2 inches above the tops of the jars. To keep the product, the whole jar from top to bottom inside must be sterilized. If the water covers the entire jar you are sure of results. If the boiler has a tight fitting cover, a blanket of hot steam would probably surround the jar tops even if the water came only to the neck of the jar and sterilize the product as well as the hot water. One or the other condition must exist.

Temperature of Water When Jars Are placed in the Water: Water should be hot so the sterilization will start immediately. The time of waiting for the finished product is lessened because the water can be heating during the preparation of the products. There is no harm done in placing the jars in cold water and waiting for the water to boil before counting time.

When to Begin to Count Time in Processing Fruits and Vegetables: (a) When the water begins to boil—water bath. (b) When the desired pressure has been obtained—steam pressure cooker.

Results if Jar is Not Full When Removed From Sterilizer: The product will not spoil. The whole area inside the jar has been sterilized if the work was done properly. If the product spoils in a partially filled jar it is due to some leakage. The work was not done right.

WASHINGTON'S SUCCESS CREATES ENTHUSIASM FOR WORLD'S SERIES

GIANTS LIKELY TO SHOW STRENGTH

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Washington's sensational victory in the American League has stirred baseball fandom to unprecedented enthusiasm as the Senators start for the world's championship with the New York Giants next Saturday in the capital.

Officials of both contending clubs, after a long conference Tuesday with Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis, disclosed that they were being flooded with requests for reservations from all parts of the country. The Commissioner, who conferred with President Chas. A. Stoneham of the Giants, and Secretary E. B. Eynon of the Senators, to perfect arrangements for the series, also voiced his opinion that "unparalleled interest is being shown."

Only the fact that Washington's American League park is unable to match the capacity of the Yankee stadium will prevent the shattering of the records for attendance and receipts, established in the million-dollar series of 1923, officials declared.

Evan Money Offered.

Wall Street's interest in the forthcoming baseball classic was shown yesterday in reports of wagering on the outcome, with even money generally prevailing. Several wagers were reported, however, with the Senators as slight favorites, in one instance $1,800 to $1,500 being offered and quickly covered on the basis they would win. With Walter Johnson slated to twirl the first game for Washington, several bets were made at 3 to 2 that he would lead the American Leaguers to victory.

Meanwhile the boards of strategy of both teams are mapping out their campaigns. While the Senators generally are credited with possessing the more formidable hurling corps, built around the veteran Johnson, Giant supporters believe McGraw will have unexpected strength in the box. They point out that the Senators' mound staff showed unmistakeable signs of strain in the closing weeks of the American League race when the club's batting strength pulled it through, whereas the Giant hurlers, chiefly Nehf, Bentley, McQuillan and Barnes, finished with impressive exhibitions when everything was at stake.

ALTROCK PITCHED.

Washington's Jester of the Diamond Also Scored Team's Only Run.

BOSTON, September 30. — Boston finished in seventh place to-day by defeating the pennant winning Washington Senators, 13 to 1, in a game which showed that the latter harbored no grudge against Boston for having delayed the finish by taking the first of the final series here. Nick Altrock, Washington's clown coach delighted the fans by holding the home team to one run while he had possession of the mound for the final two innings and then he capped the day by scoring the lone Washington run after hitting a remarkable three bagger.

RAIN HITS SPORTS.

Yankees' Double Header Cancelled—Other Games Off.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1. — Rain yesterday dealt a knockout blow to sporting activities. Baseball, boxing, cricket, polo and horse racing programmes were all shelved by a heavy downpour.

In Philadelphia the dethroned baseball champions, the New York Yankees, were forced to cancel a double header with the Athletics which was to have marked the season's close, while the International cricket matches were halted, and the welterweight title bout between Mickey Walker, the champion, and Bobby Barrett, were postponed until to-night.

Semi-finals in the Monty Waterbury cup polo tournament at Westbury were called off, and because of the soggy condition of the field, cannot be played before Thursday.

Boxing in Cleveland, Grand Circuit harness racing in Columbus, and exhibition baseball games, involving major league clubs, were called off in Baltimore and New Haven.

SOCCER AT NORWOOD.

C. P. C Juniors and North Dummer To Play There Oct 11th.

Deep sympathy was expressed by all present at the news of the death of James Summer, a prominent official of the association and the popular captain of the C.P.C. Grey Birds. The treasurer, Mr. J. Ball, was deputed to send a wreath from the association to the residence of the deceased. Mr. H. Hotson, vice-captain of the Grey Birds, will represent the association at the funeral.

The draw took place for the Bradburn County Cup and the Gordon medals. The C.P.C. Juniors will meet the Massey's in the first round on Saturday afternoon at King Edward Park. Kick off at 2 p.m. sharp. Referee, Mr. Rickard.

After a long discussion it was decided to play the undecided game in the Mayor Turner Charity Cup, the C.P.C. Juniors and North Dummer, on neutral grounds at Norwood on Saturday, October 11th. Kick off at 2:30 p.m. Referee, S. Calladine. Mr. Hector Munro will make arrangements for the grounds.

BASTONE REPORTS.

Queen's Star Joined Rugby Squad Yesterday—Was Warmly Greeted.

KINGSTON, Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Harry Batstone returned to town on Monday and was warmly greeted by the rest of the squad. He reported to the University at noon yesterday and was ready for practice. Batstone has a few pounds to get off, but is in pretty good shape, and will be right into form by Saturday when Queen's Seniors play R.M.C.

"BUCKY" HARRIS FACES M'GRAW

BOTH ARE FIGHTERS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press).—The world's series between New York and Washington promises many spectacular features, and not the least of these will be the battle of strategy between John J. McGraw, veteran leader of the Giants, and Stanley Harris, youthful playing-manager of the American League champions.

McGraw, variously known as the "master-mind" and the "little Napoleon," will match the experience that has carried him to ten pennants in the past twenty years, four of them in a row, against the fiery leadership of "Bucky" Harris, who will not be twenty-eight years old till November 8.

McGraw directs his athletes from the bench. He is known to decide every pitch and all moves on the attack. Harris leads his men from a post in the thick of the fray.

Ability to inspire aggressiveness is a characteristic shared by both managers. McGraw's clubs always have been known for their fighting qualities, particularly under fire, while Harris has had his men battling with unquenchable spirit throughout one of the hottest campaigns in history.

Harris, who is reported to have been purchased for only $4,000 from the Buffalo Club in 1919 is a reliable fielder and dependable batter. His chief assets, however, have not been his playing ability but the manner in which he has worked wonders with a supposedly mediocre team, one of the darkest horses that ever drew under the American League wire first.

JACK RENAULT MAY MEET WORLD CHAMP

Renault Can Trim Wills Now, But He Is Not Quite Ready For Dempsey Yet.

MONTREAL, September 30 (Canadian Press). — Jack Renault, Canadian heavyweight, will in all probability be the next man to fight Jack Dempsey for the heavyweight championship of the world.

This is the belief of two of New York's most experienced sporting writers, W. C. McGeehan and Robert Maher, who were in Montreal over the week-end.

They are convinced Tex Rickard had Renault in mind when he refused to commit himself regarding the match between the champion and Harry Wills following the victory of the latter over Firpo a few weeks ago.

"Renault," said Mr. McGeehan, "can beat Wills right now, but he is not ready yet to meet Dempsey."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Kindly give me a few line in your valuable paper. Regarding Saturday's football game, Brantford vs Peterboro, I think all who witnessed the game thought it was time well spent. I think the Peterboro boys put up a hard fight but were outclassed on every turn by the Brantford boys, who had, as I consider, very good command of the ball and they certainly played well. Their combination was a treat to watch. I hope the senior players of Peterboro will take notice of their combination. I watched most of the games played this season by the senior league and I have seen very little combination work. All clubs are and have adopted the long passing, kick-it-don't-care-style, but after all if the footballers want to get spectators at their games I think it would be a wise move to put a better display of football, keep the ball down, pass it, and for goodness sake do not hog it (like some do at present). Of course there is always room for improvements. Do away with favoritism in your selection of the team, get the best you can, but it was not so with Saturday's team. For instance, if you want a goalkeeper you have four teams to pick the best. Don't pick a centre forward to keep goal. It does not encourage other goal keepers. Don't pick half backs that play forward all season while you leave other halfbacks out in the cold. Then the forwards, three centre forwards on the forward line. Where on earth is the justice to the players that play the inside position all season? Men do not be bias, cut out your favoritism, don't pick a man because he plays well in own team's position, pick him for the position he has got to fill. You would not want a navvy to perform the surgical operation, you better pick him to dig the grave. Thanking you, I remain,

ONE FOR FAIR DEAL.

ONLY A FEW REMAIN

Just Seven of the Defunct Federal League's Stars Are Playing in Majors To-day.

Here they are—two of the seven Federal Leaguers who remain in the ranks of the major leagues today.

There aren't many Reds left in the majors. Just six others, Jack Quinn of the Boston Red Sox was with Baltimore; Howard Ehmke, also of the Red Sox, was with Buffalo; Eddie Roush of the Cincinnati Reds was with Newark; Johnny Rawlings with the Pirates, was with Kansas City, and Leslie Mann, who has returned to the Boston Braves, was with Chicago.

The fame of the Fed Leaguers did not live long. Benny Kauff, leading hitter during the last season of the independents with an average of .344, had a stormy career with the Giants and soon passed out as an "undesirable," according to the verdict from Judge Landis.

Lee Magee, another swat star with the Feds, was a flivver when he returned to organized baseball. He cost the Yankees $40,000 and was traded for the Cuban, Marsans, to St. Louis. One season with the Browns was all for Magee and, after getting his unconditional release, he signed with the Cincinnati Reds. But Lee did something that was not according to Hoyle and he was dropped like a hot potato.

SOCCER NOTES.

The bowling season is now here and the announcement of the opening of Solomon's Alleys is gladly received by the bowlers. The alleys are in great shape, having been completed renovated, and the inside of building has been painted and refixed.

The leagues will soon start to swing into action and the different concerns running leagues are reminded to make reservations early. This year should be a banner year in bowling and by the interest already shown it is going to go over big. Last year was a good year for the bowlers but this one promises to be even better.

Special accomodation has been arranged for the ladies. Last year was the first year for the ladies and they turned out in great numbers and several leagues were run. This year there should be even more bowling than ever. The way the ladies picked up the game was marvelous. It did not take them long to learn and before the season was over most of them were rolling as good, and some even better, than some of the men.

JUMPED INTO RIVER

Girl at Convent Refused To Do Any More Housework.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press).—The body of Mary Agnes Ritter, a student of St. Ann's Academy, was found floating in the Fraser River on Sept. 12. The girl, who was between 14 and 15 years old, came from Juneau, Alaska, where her parents live, and in addition to receiving instruction at the convent, did some housework here. At noon on Sept. 12, according to sisters from the convent, the girl walked out of the building with the words that she would not do any more housework. In a leisurely way she strolled to the New Westminster bridge. One of the men working there called out:

"You're liable to get wet if you stay there." They did not catch the mumbled reply, and the next moment saw that she had disappeared in the waters. One of the men made a heroic but vain attempt at rescue.

CONVICTS INCREASING

OTTAWA, Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press).—The total number of cases tried by the various criminal courts in Canada in 1923 was 164,131, as compared with 163,930 during 1922, says a Government report just issued. Of these, 4,879 were acquitted in 1923, against 5,590 in 1922, leaving the total number of convictions 159,252 for 1923, compared with 158,340 in 1922, an increase of 912

VOTE OF CENSURE.

Want To Know Why Charge of Sedition Was Dropped.

LONDON, Sept. 30. — (Canadian Press).—Prime Minister Macdonald moved second reading in House of Commons to-day of bill providing for creation of Irish boundary commission without participation of Ulster. In making motion Premier, declared it was essential duty of every government to fulfil its obligations. He said he resented charge that Government's move was an attempt to coerce Ulster.

Stormy scenes occurred in House of Commons to-day during questioning of Attorney General Hastings with regard to mysterious abandoning of prosecuting on charge of sedition of editor of the Communist the paper, Workers' Weekly.

Mr. Macdonald declared he was not willing to allow an exposure at this time of real circumstances of the case and urged that further consideration of it be postponed until regular autumn season of House. To this all parties agreed.

Thus the case which has been more or less of burning topic since early August will be taken up by the House next week, while House of Lords is dealing with Irish Bill.

Former Premier Baldwin, Conservative leader, hinted during discussion to-day that opposition might move a vote of censure when matter is taken up.

ODDS IN BRITAIN.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(Canadian Press Cable.)—The latest odds offered on Lloyds on probability of an early general election being held in Great Britain is "50 guineas per 100 for policy to pay total loss in event f general election before the end of 1924."

This is a drop of 10 points since last week and due apparently to the effect of Premier MacDonald's latest utterances on the Russian treaty.

In his speech at the Derby on Saturday, Premier MacDonald threw down gage on the matter of the Anglo-Russian treaty and said if the House of Commons censured the government on the treaty, the government would go to the country but he did not think the country wanted to break with the present administration.

WON HER CASE

TORONTO, Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Mrs. Blanche Friend was awarded $563 by Judge O'Connell in her action against a local druggist for injuries suffered following the use of hair tonic purchased from that firm. She claimed that the tonic blistered her face and scalp and that she was ill for weeks as a result of using it. Mrs. Friend sued for $613. The judgment awarded her $163 for medical attention and $400 for suffering and personal discomfort. Referring to the contradictory story of the plaintiff and the clerk, the judgment points out that it was reasonable to assume Mrs. Friend would, under the circumstances, want to be assured that the tonic contained no bichloride of mercury.

SIDNEY S. JONES IS BEING HEARD

Former Bank Auditor Could Have Had Knowledge of Many Transactions.

TORONTO, September 30 (Canadian Press). — Slowly but surely the Crown is filling exhibits and introducing witnesses in an endeavour to show that Sidney S. Jones, former auditor of the Home Bank, now on trial before Judge Coatsworth on charges of making, using and concurring in false returns to the Government, could have had knowledge of many transactions of which the Crown complains, had he so desired, because of the availability of the bank records for the purpose of the audits.

Particular investigation of the growth of indebtedness of C. A. Barnard, of Montreal, one of the impeached Home Bank directors, and the subsequent history of the account when it was taken over by the British Dominions Holding and Investment Company, was undertaken by both the Crown and defence counsel yesterday afternoon.

Through Victor W. Scott, manager of the Montreal branch, it was established that all payments through these accounts, after Mr. Barnard's debt grew to considerable proportions, had to be authorised by the late J. Cooper Mason, general manager. A. E. Calvert, assistant general manager, or J. C. Whitaken, supervisor, all of the head office at Toronto.

In fact, Mr. Scott stated, the account had been controlled entirely from the head office for a number of years.

Special Crown Prosecutor D. L. McCarthy, K.C., excited the information from Mr. Scott that it was through cheques to the value of $320,000 paid to C. A. Barnard by the Davie Shipbuilding and Repairing Company of Levis, Quebec, of which Mr. Barnard was managing director, being returned unpaid that the first large overdraft in the Barnard account was created. Immediately after that the head office took control of all accounts, the witness declared.

STREET RAILWAYS SHOW IMPROVEMENT

Sixty-Two Persons Killed in Accidents on Electric Lines in 1923.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Street railways and electric railways in Canada showed a slight improvement in operation in 1923 over 1922, according to a statement just issued by the Bureau of Statistics, the net operating revenues increasing by $345,851. After providing for taxes, reserves, etc., the aggregate for all railways, however, showed a deficit of $545,637, as against a surplus of $89,557 the previous year. Of the 64 railways operating, 15 showed operating deficits, and after paying all income charges, 40 showed corporate deficits for the year. Four of the latter paid dividends and 20 paid certain amounts in reserves and special charges.

It is interesting to note that, according to the bureau, there has been a gradual falling off in passenger traffic on street and other electric railways since 1920, due probably to a wider use of automobiles. Passengers carried by electric lines in 1923 showed a decrease of 1,626,911, a quarter of one per cent. Street railway traffic was the lightest in five years.

Sixty-two persons were killed in accidents on electric lines in 1923, compared with 47 the previous year, this being no increase in number of passengers killed, however. The greatest number of injuries to employes on record took place in 1923, when there were 1,652, compared with 873 in 1922, the increases mostly occurring in Toronto and Winnipeg. Passengers injured increased, but not to such a great extent.

"One-man cars, operated by one man, performing the duties of both conductor and motorman, are coming into quite general and common use," the report says.

HELD BARN DANCE.

Fine New Barn Replaces One Destroyed By Fire.

BETHANY, Oct. 1.—Mr. John Challice, who lost his fine frame barn by fire a month ago, entertained his friends and neighbors to a barn dance on Thursday evening, held in his large new barn, which stands on the foundation of the one which was burned. Mr. Challice has a barn which is the last word in barn construction, being 98 x 45 feet, with a hip roof. There are four windows, situated in the roof, which can be opened or shut at will by means of a rope; four large ventilators and a window in each gable end. The barn is constructed entirely of planks for a frame. The old-fashioned timbers running across the barn are absent. The barn is sheeted with steel. Mr. Porter and Mr. Ward supplied the violin music and the ladies present took turns at the piano. A tasty lunch with coffee was passed around at midnight, and dancing progressed until the wee small hours. The floor was in excellent condition and entirely free from roughness. The happy throng, which numbered around 150, after thanking Mr. Challice for his hospitality wended their way homeward.

Rally Day was fittingly observed in the Sunday School room of the Methodist Church on Sunday afternoon, 115 being present.

STRIKES INCREASE IN JAPAN

TOKIO, Japan, Oct. 1.—Japanese labor, growing in class consciousness, is becoming increasingly unruly. WHITEHOUSE TO FACE TORONTO CREW SATURDAY

And McCormicks Will Pit Rasson Against Lakeviews' Ace.

BIG CROWD LIKELY.

The Overtime Game Has Aroused Interest of the Local Fans.

Fans are hoping for better weather conditions by Saturday when the McCormicks of Toronto are slated to back into the Lakeviews in the second game of the series for the Junior O.B.A.A. championship.

The sensational overtime fight staged by the two teams last Saturday has keyed local fans up to a high pitch of interest, and with anything like good weather the crack Junior Outfits will hook up before a huge crowd.

It will be another battle of southpaws, for Whitehouse is going right back at the Toronto crew, while the latter are afraid to start anybody but their ace, "Irish" Rasson.

Both teams will be at full strength and the game should be one of the most interesting engagements of the season.

MAY FORM A CHESS AND CHECKER CLUB

Peterboro Has Two Noted Players Who Are Willing To Help Others.

A number of chess and checker enthusiasts met at the Y.M.C.A. on Monday evening to discuss the advisability of forming a chess and checker club. It was decided to hold an evening for these games at the Y.M.C.A. next Monday at 8 o'clock, when all those who play either game will be welcome. Mr. Maurice Fox, who stood second in the recent Dominion chess tournament in Hamilton, and who was only beaten by the champion on a technicality, will play all chess players simultaneously, and Rev. Mr. Edgar, of Gilmour Baptist Church, will meet all checker players in the same way. After the matches are played an organization meeting will be held and a club formed. Peterboro is fortunate in having two such outstanding players. Mr. Fox is a veteran of the game, having played for many years in England. Mr. Edgar is a former member of the Scottish championship team, coming from Glasgow, which is a notable centre of the checker game. Each of these men is enthusiastic about his favorite games, and is willing and anxious to help young or less experienced players so that the club will give any the opportunity who desire to learn or improve in these interesting and mentally stimulating forms of recreation.

Any players who are anxious to play on Monday evening are asked to get in touch with the Y.M.C.A. office not later than Monday noon.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

Overwhelming in the bigness of its scenes, full of genuine thrills, containing some of the finest coloured photography ever done and acted superbly by a wonderful cast, Cecil De Mille's epic picture "The Ten Commandments" which was shown at the Grand last night and is to be repeated to-night represent the last word in motion picture development.

It is in two parts the first showing the Exodus of the children of Israel from Egypt and the second a modern story showing the inevitable result of disobedience of the commandments

The second part contains a dramatic story and some strikingly melodramatic scenes and is most effectively acted but after all it is in the Biblical scenes that the picture reaches its highest point of excellence.

The scenes depicting the captivity of the Israelites surpass in their scope and their sense of reality anything that has been shown on the screen, the death of the first born of Egypt is most dramatically delineated and the silver sheet has never displayed anything more thrilling than the pursuit of the Israelites and the destruction of the Egyptian hosts in the Red Sea. The wizardry of Mr. De Mille's methods is illustrated in the latter episode by the realism of this spectacular scene. Coloured photography is most effectively used in depicting the Exodus and the pursuit and the result is a series of pictures that for beauty and animation are superior to anything in the history of motion picture productions.

The outstanding member of the cast in the first part of the picture is that veteran actor Theodore Roberts whose portrayal of the part of Moses in a notable feature of a most notable picture It seems funny to think of Mr. Roberts playing a role in which his familiar cigar must be discarded but the sterling artist scores one of the greatest triumphs of his career by his effective picture of the Hebrew prophet Estelle Taylor's delineation of the role of Miriam is another impressive feature of the Biblical episode while Charles De Roche is convincing as Pharoh.

The modern story tells of a very religious mother one of whose two sons shares her convictions while the other scoffs at his mothers' religion. The wicked son starts out to demonstrate how easy it is to demolish the Ten Commandments and to achieve fame and fortune in the process with the inevitable ending, despite early successes. The climax comes when the church which has been built by him with rotten material collapses and kills his mother, the adventuress upon whom he has been showering costly gifts turns out to be a leper, and he himself finally meets death after a thrilling attempt to drive a motor boat through a storm to safely

Rod La Roque is the wicked son and contributed a splendid performance while he is supported by a thoroughly adequate cast, of which Leatrice Joy, Nita Naldi, Edythe Chapman and Robert Edeson do particularly good work

The story is by Jeanie McPherson and in combination with the Biblical episode complete a most impressive picture.

A symphony orchestra accompanies the film and its rendition of striking musical score by Hugo Riesenfield is a wonderful contribution to the success of the production. In fact the work of the orchestra is one of the most noteworthy features of "The Ten Commandments" as produced here.

The repetition of the programme at the Grand to-night affords the last chance of seeing this wonderful production. Nothing more impressive in the silent drama will be seen in Peterboro this year.

ROBERT B. MANTELL IN CLASSICAL REPERTORY

Friday night, October 3rd, will usher in what to many will be the theatrical event of the season, when, at the Grand Opera House, Mr. Robert B. Mantell, America's best loved actor and foremost exponent of the classic drama, ably assisted by the young and talented leading woman, Miss Genevieve Hamper, and a large and capable company, will hold the stage for two nights and Saturday matinee, presenting a classical repertoire arranged as follows: Friday night, Sir Bulwer Lytton's historical play, "Richelieu"; Saturday matinee, Shakespeare's romantic comedy, "As You Like It," and for the final performance, Saturday night, Shakespeare's thrilling tragedy, "Richard III."

Mr. Mantell's mimic reincarnation of the great characters of the classic drama is a matter of stage history, and no tragedian of the present day can approach him in this line of work. As a younger man, he delighted another generation of theatregoers in romantic plays, but we of today can enjoy the privilege of seeing this great actor in truly great plays that call for artistic authority and poetic fervor. Mr. Mantell tours the country with eleven plays—eleven massive productions. He is prepared, at a moment's notice, to assume the principal male role in any play in his repertory—a feat of memory and versatility without a parallel. Miss Hamper has gained a just renown in impersonations of the heroines of Shakespeare. She is to Mantell what Ellen Terry was to Irving.

AT THE CAPITOL.

ALL-STAR CAST IN "THE FEMALE"

From Cynthia Stockley's Novel, "Dalla, the Lion Cub."

Betty Compson is supported by a unique cast in "The Female," her new Paramount starring picture directed by Sam Wood. The story is an adaptation of Cynthia Stockley's "Dalla, the Lion Cub." All of the scenes are laid in South Africa.

Heading the strong supporting cast are Warner Baxter and Noah Beery. Dorothy Cumming, Helen Butler, Pauline French, Edgar Norton and Florence Wix also have important parts.

There are other featured players who get no credit in the advertising, but they don't care. They are an assortment of lions, fourteen in number, ranging in size from tiny cubs to grown-ups. All the zoos in Southern California were scoured by Director Wood and his assistants to find African lions of just the right size and temperament.

"The Female," which will be shown today and Thursday at the Capitol Theatre, is a story of a beautiful young Boer girl who knows no life outside the African veldt. She meets and falls in love with a handsome young Englishman far above her station in life. Men before always flocked to her, but this one is different. He is strangely cold and ignores her, and his people, the "Englishers," insult Dalla (Miss Compson). The rest of the picture is a gripping and unusually entertaining story of the carrying out of this girl's plans for revenge—against all the ultra-smart of the English colony in general. The picture closes with her completely winning over the young Englishman.

Warner Baxter has the leading man's role in the production. Noah Beery plays the part of Dalla's guardian. Others in the supporting cast include Dorothy Cumming, Freeman Wood and Helen Butler.

AT THE ROYAL.

HOOT HAMMERS HOME RUNS IN HIS LATEST.

He Can't Field But Is Sure Big at Bat.

The Babe Ruth of the cactus country comes to the Royal Theatre to-morrow in the person of Hoot Gibson, starring in his newest Universal production, "Hit and Run," a baseball story.

As a sub-title in the picture characterizes him, he is just a lad from the "tall and uncut" where all good ball players come from. Hoot is introduced as an indolent cowpuncher who plays in the outfield and fields very badly.

After making several costly errors which contribute to the runs of the opposing team, he is relieved of further embarrassment when a third out is finally made and his side goes to bat. Here the reason for the clumsy outfielder's being in the game is revealed. He clouts the first ball pitched to him so far into the cattle country that an outfielder has to ride a horse to chase it.

A major league scout, played by Mike Donlin, the former famous star of the Giants, marooned at a country siding, brushes the cobwebs out of his eyes when he sees the long hit.

"Cactus Babe Ruth" Agrees.

The cowboy, who is Hoot, greets the stranger affably and agrees to play ball with the city fellers, which he does and does nobly. He repeats his bum fielding and heavy hitting and wins a pennant for his team, but not after a number of strenuous dramatic difficulties, and the daughter of the big league scout for himself. The daughter, played by Marian Harlan, is also a big leaguer and all is well.

The story is handled in a comedy vein and is crammed with laughs, but it is also well balanced with drama and has many thrilling situations sprinkled through it, with a good balance of comedy.

"RENO" CLOSES ENGAGEMENT TO-NIGHT AT ROYAL.

A very interesting picture is Rupert Hughes' "Reno," which closes its local engagement at the Royal to-night. It is screen entertainment crammed with thrills and wisdom, and bares the inside story of our comic, tragic, amazing divorce tangle, staged at Reno, Atlantic City and Yellowstone National Park. "The Leather Pushers" and comedy are also well worth seeing.

MUSICAL COMEDY DELIGHTS AUDIENCE

"The Gingham Girl" at the Grand Great Production—Given By Good Cast.

"Good! It's perfect!"

It is perfect Only by stealing a line from the piece can "The Gingham Girl," showing at the Grand Opera House, be aptly described. "The Gingham Girl" opened a three day engagement there last night to include a Saturday matinee and the first night audience was unanimous in proclaiming it easily the best show that has been offered in London for many a day.

Schwab and Kusell have an attraction in "The Gingham Girl" with which fault cannot be found. Though primarily a musical comedy it has a sweet story running its entire length and although there is plenty of humor, songs, dances, magnificent scenes and settings in its makeup, to say nothing of a cast of Broadway stars, the story remains intact. In this alone—much to its credit—it differs from the usual run.

Looking over "The Gingham Girl" the onlooker finds himself or herself at a loss to pick out that particular feature which stands out in prominence over another so exquisitely mounted it is. The same applies when judging the lengthy list of principals because each is a star and each is given opportunity to display talent. And the chorus! There have been few attractions in London that have presented such an array of modishly gowned damsels.

Miss McMahon.

The only way to appreciate "The Gingham Girl" is to get acquainted with Blue Bird biscuits and their maker. The biscuits are only part of the story, but their maker is real. She is Mary Thompson, "The Gingham Girl" (Madeleine McMahon) and her charms are just as real as the individual they adorn.

Playing opposite her is Eddie Fetherston, as John Cusins, the village youth, who finds he has outgrown his surroundings, but who later finds that life in New York is not just exactly as he thought it was and that "The Gingham Girl" is in the end the girl for him. Fetherston has a greater task than merely to dispense frivolous comedy, (though he is eminently capable of that, too) his work and the work of Miss McMahon is also one of injecting heart interest and their combined efforts are admirable.

But, leaving the headliners, there is Jack Waldron and Lillian Young. The latter is a distintcly different type of maiden from "The Gingham Girl" and she sings and dances with her partner exceptionally well. For pure comedy Waldron probably effuses more than does Fetherston and it's the kind of comedy one relishes, cleverly put across.

Looking further over the list of celebrities there are Francesca Hill as Sonya Maison Dorothy La Mar as Mazie Lelewer, the city girl; Flo Irwin as Sophia Trask, the millionaire spinster; Amy Dennis as Mildred Ripley and George Thom as Harrison Bartlet. Space does not permit of the many good things that may be said of these footlight artists. They each have lilting songs to sing and parts to perform and the manner of their acting is the highest tribute possible to bestow.

Good Dancing.

But no account of the "The Gingham Girl" would be complete without mention of the Apache dancing done by Fay Martinez and Joseph Saal. Several times they appeared and on each occasion the applause of the beholders spoke eminently of their efforts. In this connection also the work of Miss Young and Mr. Waldron cannot go unnoticed and their work in terpischore won the tribute of praise from the audience.

As for color and a harmonious mingling of costumes and scenery the "studio down Greenwich Village way" is art in its truest sense. The costumes worn by the chorus at all times are exquisite in design and fabric, but the blending of multitudinous shades with the marvelously beautiful scenery in the studio act has never been surpassed by any previous offering in this city.

Included in the song numbers are "The Down East Flapper," by Miss Young; "The Twinkle in Your Eye", by Miss McMahon; "As Long as I Have You," by Miss McMahon and Mr. Fetherston; "Down Greenwich Village Way", by Miss Hill; "Tell Her While the Waltz is Playing," by Mr. Thom; "The Wonderful Thing We Call Love," by Miss Hill; "Plunk, Plunk, Plunk" by Miss Young and Mr. Waldron; "Newlyweds," by the same pair; "Gingham Girl," by Miss McMahon.

A remarkably good show, a happy audience, and three more performances in which to see it before it leaves London on its next move on the tour 'round the world. What more could be asked for?—London Free Press.

HAYNES TO RIDE EPINARD OCT. 11

Again Will Have Mount on French Colt For Race at Latonia, Sys Wertheime

NEW YORK, Oct. 1. — "Epinard will be shipped to Latonia on Wednesday and Haynes will ride him in the third of the international races," said Pierre Wertheimer, the owner of the French four-year-old, at the Aqueduct Racecourse yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Wertheimer was emphatic in his statement that there would be no change in jockeys, and should put at rest rumours that Haynes would be supplanted in a race of a mile and a quarter on Sunday, 11th October.

The French sportsman amplified his statement by adding: "I know what Haynes is, and I might not know what some other boy is."

"All is well with Epinard," said Mr. Wertheimer, "and that is what counts. What happened Saturday is past history. We now turn our eyes to Latonia. I will be here until Thursday of next week, and will take an afternoon tea with a number of friends to be on hand for the last of the series for which we came over the water."

We asked what his plans are for Epinard after the conclusion of the three races for which he is under contract Mr. Wertheimer said that he could not say now. He said he would wait and see what happened at Latonia.

The colt is entered in two events in Maryland, and it is possible that if he is victorious at Latonia he will be seen in several other races.

Mr. and Mrs. John Butcher, 201 Burnham Street, who yesterday celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day, were at home last evening to their friends, numbering about one hundred, who called during the evening to offer congratulations. A golden wedding dinner preceded the evening's festivities, at which the family entertained their parents. All five children were present, including Mrs. John Scott, Patterson Street; Mrs. A. L. Turner, of Unity, Saskatchewan; Miss Mary and Messrs. George and Alexander. Catering was done by Hooper's. The table was centred by a handsome three-storey wedding cake, and the dining room was arranged in golden yellow, with yellow paper streamers and wedding bells, and quantities of yellow 'mums, dahlias and marigolds. Gifts to their parents from the family included two gold-handled parasols, with several other articles in gold. Mrs. Butcher received a great many lovely bouquets from her friends, also a large bouquet of yellow 'mums from her grandchildren. Music during dinner and the evening was played by Mr. F. Smith and Mr. R. J. Devey, Mr. and Mrs. Devey also contributing several vocal numbers to the programme. The evening was spent in jolly fashion, with plenty of community singing of old-time favorites, ending with "Auld Lang Syne" and the National Anthem.

COURT DROPPED CAMPBELL CASE

Political Considerations Did Influence the Dropping of Prosecution.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Critics who are not disposed to be unusually harsh on the present administration do not hesitate to describe the explanation given in the House of Commons yesterday by Sir Patrick Hastings, Attorney-General, for the dropping of the prosecution of J. R. Campbell, editor of the Communist paper, "Workers' Weekly," on the charge of sedition as entirely unsatisfactory. Sir Patrick Hastings' statement gave evidence of having been prepared with great care, but the general comment on it is that it did not clear the air in connection with the most disagreeable impression over the abandonment of the prosecution. There is a general feeling that the whole matter was badly bungled. Sir Patrick Hastings spoke at some length upon the extremely good war record of Campbell, and enlarged upon the fact that he held the editorship of the paper temporarily. He added that he had not been approached by any member of the Government to withdraw proceedings. The Telegraph asserts that it is plain that political considerations did influence the dropping of the prosecution. The Manchester Guardian points to the fact that the Communist Publicity Bureau has disavowed law officers' reasons for abandoning the prosecution.

BANK FINANCING BIG BOOZE DEAL

One of the Strongest Banks In Canada Backed New York Gang.

BREST, Oct. 1. — (Canadian Press).—One of the strongest banks in Canada has been shown to be financing huge liquor deals negotiated in New York, according to a statement made to the press to-day by Magistrate Fournier. M. Fournier will preside over the trial of Max Jerome Phaff, German-American, who was charged with piracy on the high seas in connection with the looting of the French steamer Mulhouse off the Canadian coast last July.

Magistrate Fournier said he had the address of the meeting place in New York where brokers for whiskey firms met agents of whiskey rings, and where deals running into six figures in dollars were closed daily.

"Those men have unlimited financial backing," M. Fournier said.

PRINCE'S DINNER PARTY.

Old Timers Swap Tales With Their Interested Listener.

HIGH RIVER, Alta., October 1. — The Prince of Wales spent a quiet day on Tuesday. In the morning he stacked green feed after enjoying a ride on the range. At noon he made preparations to welcome his dinner guests. A number of old men who have been connected with the cattle industry in Alberta for more than 35 years, were present. They included the original "Big Four" in the cattle world: P. Burns, A. E. Cross, Archie McLean and George Aine, together with Colonel James Walker, W.R. Hull, W. P. Pierce, J. Brown, R. B. Bennett, Dan Bennett, K.C., Dan Reilly, W. Thorn and F. D. Adams. Hon. P. C. Larkin, Canada's High Commissioner at London, was also a guest.

The gathering was held on the banks of a creek which flows through the ranch, and it was a real old time western dinner.

After dinner, the old timers soon had their pipes going, and they swapped many interesting tales with the Prince of Wales an interested listener.

SLEW HIS WIFE AND DAUGHTERS AND CONFESSED

John Buchanan Pierie Could Not Supply Living For His Family.

BEHIND IN RENT.

Had Been Out Of Work For Considerable Length Of Time and Was Penniless.

OTTAWA, October 1 (Canadian Press). — John Buchanan Pirie, bookkeeper for the Ottawa Electric Light and Gas Company, walked into the Ottawa Police Station shortly after nine o'clock this morning and informed the desk sergeant that he had first murdered his wife and then his two children, but he had not the nerve to kill himself.

Police officers who went to his flat confirmed the tragic announcement.

Despondent because of his inability to provide for his family on account of unemployment, John Buchanan Pirie, 40, formerly employed by the local Gas and Light Company as a bookkeeper, last night murdered his wife and two children, Kathleen aged 7 and Joan aged 6, in a rooming-house at which they were living at 32 Grove Street.

"I have killed my wife and two children." Pirie announced when he walked into the Police Station at 8.25 this morning. "I intended committing suicide when I realised what I had done—" and he ended with a gesture of despair, according to Sergt. John Cunningham, who was on desk duty.

In a letter found on Pirie's person, Pirie said that he preferred killing his wife and daughters to doing away with himself and leaving them unprotected to face the world.

Inspector Emile Joliat, when told of the man's statement, sent two detectives to the house, which is owned by Mrs. Edward Gorman.

Breaking down the back door they were confronted by Mrs. Gorman. She did not know of anything, but when the detectives went into the Pirie bedroom, they found Mrs. Pirie and the two girls dead in bed.

It is not known how they were slain.

Mrs. Pirie had bruises which had bled profusely on the side of her head, but the skull was not fractured. The two children had no marks on them.

Medical authorities are inclined to think that poison of some kind was used.

According to Mrs. Gorman, Piries had been rooming with her since last June, and had been a very quiet family. Pirie had always been good to his family, she said, and Mrs. Pirie and the children were very popular in the neighborhood. The landlady said she could not understand the cause of the tragedy, as the couple were most affectionate towards each other, but, she added, that they were three months behind with their rent, and it seemed to worry Pirie exceedingly. Although she had never bothered him about the rent he had referred to it every day, stating that he hoped very shortly to receive a cheque.

The couple were married overseas, where Pirie was granted a commission in the Royal Air Forces, subsequently attaining the rank of captain in April, 1918.

OBITUARY.

MRS. WM. HUGHEY.

(Contributed.)

On Friday, 12th September, in St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterboro, after a brief illness, heaven's gates opened to one lovely soul of earth in the personage of Mrs. Wm. Hughey (nee Roxie Dunford), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Dunford, Wilberforce. Her sudden passing came as a great shock to her husband, her family, and her many friends. Roxie has been with us for only twenty-two years, but God's messenger came and remained, and on the afternoon of 12th September she slipped away from her home and friends. We feel that her life was God's gift to us, and now that the gift has been recalled we cannot find it in our hearts to repine or to complain. This young life was a delight and joy to all, so full of promise, the memory of which is dear to all.

She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, and dear little Baby Ronald, her parents, three sisters and three brothers.

The respect, love, and sympathy were shown by many floral tributes from her many friends; Her husband, a wreath; Mr. and Mrs. Hope, a spray; Rev. and Mrs. MacTavish, a spray; Mr. and Mrs. Frankish, a spray; Mr. and Mrs. F. Dunford, a spray; employees of the De Laval Co., a wreath; Mr. and Mrs. Goselin, a wreath; Misses L. Herlihey and E. Foley, a spray; Mr. and Mrs. R. Dawson, a spray; Mrs. Doughty, a spray; Mr. and Mrs. Chambo and grandchildren, a spray; Mr. and Mrs. G. Foy, a spray; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Simpson, a spray.

Her death is a loss to her friends at Peterborough, and to her many friends at her old home, Wilberforce. May we feel that her loss is our gain. The funeral service was held at her home, 111 Rubidge Street, Peterborough, and was conducted by Rev. F. G. MacTavish, of Melville, one of her former pastors. She was laid peacefully away in Little Lake Cemetery, Peterborough.

I do not say, and I will not say
That she is just away.
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand
She left us for an unknown land,
Leaving us dreaming. Indeed, how fair
It needs must be since she tarries there.

MRS. H. C. STABLER.

On Saturday evening, September 27, the death occurred of Mrs. Henry C. Stabler, at her residence in this city.

Mrs. Stabler, who before her marriage, was Margaret Jane (Jennie) Campbell, was born near Mount Forest, Ont. Early in life she moved to Cannington, and after some years of residence there, came to Peterboro, which has been her home for the last twenty-five years.

Mrs. Stabler was one whose life exemplified in a marked degree the finest of the Christian graces. In her home relationships, as a friend, and in many forms of Christian work, she manifested an unquestioned sincerity and unfailing loyalty that won her a place in the esteem and affection of a larger circle than she realized. She took a large interest and active part in the work of George Street Church, and in no place will her loss be more felt than in its life.

The genuineness and depth of her religious life was abundantly evidenced during the months of her last illness, when, with a serene spirit and undisturbed faith, she awaited the inevitable end. Death came at last as a kind friend to usher her into the larger life which she had so fully merited. To mourn her loss there remain her husband and her two sisters, Mrs. Rachel Murdoch, of Montreal, and Miss Elizabeth Campbell, of Philadelphia.

Burial took place on Monday afternoon in Little Lake Cemetery, services at the house and the grave being conducted by Rev. W. Harold Young, of George Street Church, assisted by Revs. S. Crookshanks, H. M. Manning and B. Greatrix.

M'GAUGHEY MENTAL DEFECTIVE ALIENISTS FIND IMPULSE TO KILL WAS RESULT OF HIS DISEASE STRAIN OF MENTAL WEAKNESS TRACED IN FAMILY

BROTHER UNAWARE OF INSANITY SIGNS

Fred Became Addicted To Liquor, Brewed Beer and Neglected Farm.

NERVOUS AS A BOY.

Mother Had Hallucinations Ten Years Ago—"Crazy Drunk" When He Shot Girl.

(By A Staff Reporter)

LINDSAY, Oct. 2.—With the hearing last night of evidence introduced by the Crown in rebuttal the trial of Frederick William McGaughey for the murder of Beatrice Fee came to an end.

Yesterday's sessions were given over to the hearing of defence evidence, consisting of a battery of alienists who declared Frederick McGaughey had a defective mentality and suffered from dementia precox. They had based their findings, they said, on questions put to the accused in jail and on his attitude in the box throughout the long long almost motionless.

His immobility simulating catatonic dementia precox was the subject of much comment by the crown, Mr. White seeking corroboration from defense witnesses of the theory that the accused was attitudizing.

As before, McGaughey gazed downward and showed no sign of interest in the proceedings that will decide whether his life will be forfeit for the life it is said he wantonly took on May 25 when he shot his sweetheart.

Mrs. Madill recalled this morning identified the blood stained clothing produced in court as that worn by Beatrice Fee. This closed the case for the Crown.

Defense Opens.

The first witness called by Leslie M. Frost for the defense was Lawrence McGaughey, brother of the accused. He appeared well groomed. Fred McGaughey is 32 he said, and he is six years younger. The farm that McGaughey owned was given him by his father six years ago, and it was a good location and well worked. This summer it had gone down, as the witness, had noticed when working on it.

Fred was always "sort of distant," he would never come into a conversation and was not a good mixer. He was shy.

At school he was not bright, going up to junior fourth when he left at 15 years of age. Both boys attended McArthur's School, near which the tragedy occurred.

Clarence McGaughey, 20, did most of the work on the farm. Fred was not lazy but lately did not take much interest in the farming of his land. He was under the influence of liquor several times. As a sign of his being intoxicated the witness said Fred was seen on the street with his overcoat collar up. Lawrence had always known his brother to take liquor, but not to excess, as he had lately. He made beer on the farm and it was sour and unpleasant.

FRED McGAUGHEY

The Ops Township Farmer, Whose Trial For the Murder of Beatrice Fee, His Fiancee, Ended on Wednesday.

Eliza Jane Hall, Fred's grandmother on his mothers' side, died on July 11, 1911, at the age of 80 years

Under cross examination by Peter White, K.C. the witness said his brother had a permit to make beer. He admitted that it is a common thing for a man's coat collar to be turned up, but Fred took a "don't care" attitude, not together attributable to liquor.

"Have you noticed that when the motor car comes on to the farm the farm usually deteriorates especially if the farmer is a young bachelor?"

"I don't know as to that."

The witness said twitch grass will develop in a field in two or three seasons and sow thistle in two seasons. He denied that bad seed would cover the farm in one season with sow thistle. Fred's farm had a lot of both.

"You never dreamed that there was anything wrong mentally with your brother?"

"It never occurred to me."

"And he was just as bright as the rest of you?"

'I wouldn't say that."

Mr. White read from the evidence before the Coroners' Inquest in which Lawrence McGaughey said Fred was just as bright as the remainder of the family.

Lawrence had no idea that his brother was insane at the time of the inquest and there was no indication as to his being crazy.

The witness denied that he said under oath that he had not noticed his brother's addiction to drink during his week-end visits but later retracted his denial.

On being warned by Mr. Justice Logie of the seriousness of the affair the witness said that up to the time he gave evidence he had not noticed his brother was addicted to liquor.

His reason for saying Fred was backward at school was that he was reproved several times by the teacher.

Shortly after the shooting the accused gave Wilbert Fee and Lawrence McGaughey power of attorney to administer the farm. Fred McGaughey signed this in jail.

On the night of the shooting the witness went into the house and saw Miss Fee wounded.

Fred pulled a gun out of his pocket and said, 'I may as well shoot myself."

Witness did not hear Fred say "She shot me in the hand." He paid no attention to the wounded girl.

Medical Witnesses

Dr. John Brown of London, Ontario said he formerly practiced in Lindsay and while here examined and attended Mrs. Hall, grandmother of the accused about 20 years ago. He found she was demented, but does not remember what he prescribed. She suffered from a senile dementia, as old age impaired her faculties.

Dr. Brown advised that she be put in a hospital for the insane. One observation made showed that Mrs. Hall climbed through a window and broke her leg.

Under cross-examination Dr.

McGaughey Examined In Jail By Alienists During Week Following the Shooting.

THREE ALIENISTS IN ENTIRE AGREEMENT

Only Happiness To Destroy Himself and Kill Sweetheart at Same Time.

DEMENTIA PRECOX

(By Staff Reporter.)

LINDSAY, Oct. 2.— Dr. N. H. Beemer, of Mimico, was the first alienist called by the defense in the McGaughey trial yesterday. On an argument by counsel, Mr. Justice Logie decided that all alienists should be excluded except the one who was at the moment giving testimony.

Dr. Beemer said he examined the accused on May 27 in the jail in Lindsay. He found him suffering from mental disease at that time. "A mental defect is the basis of the disease he is suffering from now," the expert said. I divide a man's mind up into its separate parts to find which one is not functioning properly. The accused is suffering from dementra precox (disease of adolescence) which is a progressive disease originating in hereditary sources. The accused's reasoning power is very much impaired. He thought that the only way to get happiness or comfort would be to destroy himself and his sweetheart, and at the same time he assured me he loved his sweetheart more than anything else in the world. He said it was not any more wrong to kill her than to kill himself and it certainly was not wrong to kill himself as that was the only way to get rid of his troubles. It was hard to get him to answer questions and he had a slowness of mental machinery to comprehend and answer. He was very low spirited and had been low spirited from early life-time with that trend to suicide that imbued his mind."

Malingering does not count much and the accused had not the mentality to fool him, the alienist said.

He had defective control from early life through hereditary strain. He one time smashed a pump against the barn because he was mad and often pounded a post when angered.

The accused said he acquired the revolver and carried it more like a boy would carry it, not with any idea of using it. He had, however, meditated shooting himself.

The accused had no hallucinations, which are symptoms of an advanced type of dementia precox. A symptom of the stage in which this man was suffering was sitting for long periods of time without moving.

Dr. Beemer thought the accused did not at the time appreciate the nature and quality of the act he committed and that his moral faculties did not tell him the deed was wrong." The senile dementia of his grandmother and the delusions of his mother strengthen the basis for McGaughey's hereditary weakness.

Doctor Not Infallible.

In cross-examination, Dr. Beemer told Mr. White that the attitude of McGaughey in the dock was that of a sufferer from the disease he mentioned.

If the accused was able to play ball and pitch a curve in the jail yard that would indicate that his mind and body were syncronized, the witness said.

"This man has no chance at all."

"The only quarrel I have with you, doctor, is that I do not consider you infallible. No matter what a man does, if you start out to make him insane you can. If he remains quiet that is resistance— another symptom."

"Did you think, when you were a boy, you could retaliate on your father by killing yourself?"

"No, no."

"Isn't it common among young boys to say, "I'll kill myself and then you'll be sorry?"

"It may be."

Prince Sells Cattle Before Leaving Ranch

HIGH RIVER, Alta., Oct. 2.—More than 500 people attended the livestock sale at the Prince of Wales' ranch yesterday afternoon and the Royal Rancher himself mingled with the crowds all afternoon watching the spirited bidding for his pure bred stock.

The Prince appeared at the front door of his ranch house shortly after 12.30, dressed in old riding clothes. Yesterday was his last day at the ranch. He left late in the afternoon for High River, where he boarded his special train which took him through Calgary to Jasper Park last night and later to Vancouver.

Gaudet and a Mrs. St. Croix, all of Barachois, Que, were almost instantly killed when a car in which they were driving pitched head long over a bridge

SNOW AT NORTH BAY.

Nearly Three Inches Fell In Surrounding Country During Gale.

NORTH BAY, Oct. 2.—When the storm that held sway for 24 hours ceased yesterday afternoon, it has seen that snow had fallen on all high points of land around North Bay. Canadian National Officials reported about three inches between here an Sturgeon Falls Across Lake Nipissing some of the hills showed quite a mantle of white and to the north the snow is right up to the limits of the town. Two to three inches deep.

The storm began with rains Tuesday and all night and continued yesterday with heavy gales and a mixture of snow and rain, snow melting in town as fast as it hit the ground. Some damage was done by the gales to shade trees in town and most side walks were littered with leaves and broken twigs.

The sun came out in the afternoon and the snow on hills was disappearing this morning.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 2.—(Canadian Press Cable, via Reuter's).—W. M. Hughes, former Premier of Australia, commenting on the outcome of the Japanese objections to the arbitration protocol at Geneva and the subsequent settlement of the difficulty raised by Japan in the matter, said yesterday Australia should not accept the compromise entered into at Geneva. He declared that it was obvious that the Japanese were determined to bring under the League of Nations' rules any disputes regarding immigration laws aimed against Japanese nationals.

Premier S. M. Bruce declined to comment on the matter, but promised a statement thereon later.

ECONOMIC WARS NEXT PROBLEM

Aristide Briand Warns the League That Political Disputes Not Only Menace To Peace.

NOT A SUPERSTATE.

GENEVA, Oct. 2. — A warning that wars based on economic reasons may menace the world in the future was issued by Aristide Briand, many times premier of France, yesterday when with that same fire of eloquence and emotion which stirred his auditors at the Washington naval conference he called upon all nations to approve the protocol for pacific settlement of international disputes and pledged there and then France's adhesion without reservation whatsoever.

The amended protocol of arbitration and security occupied the attention of the assembly of the league and a general report by Dr. Benes and M. Politis, representing the two commissions which jointly framed the document, accompanied it, furnishing an explanation of the various changes made in the original protocol.

"Men may say," declared Briand, "that economic wars are possible because the interests of nations may be swayed by the same considerations as the interests of selfish individuals and that under the influence of selfish interests the ideal and duty may be obscured or mutilated. To-morrow, therefore, having now settled political questions, the league of nations must settle completely the difficult economic problems. But France will be ever ready to help in their solution."

M. Briand painted a picture of France prostrated by a war which

ROTARY CRITICISED.

Law Society Members Call Rotary Collection of Tradesmen.

LONDON, October 2 (Canadian Press Cable). — Rotary Clubs came in for some criticism at the annual convention of the Law Society here to-day. One member described Rotary Clubs as collections of tradesmen who had done well during the war, and at the meetings listened to a lot of drivel. Other members, however, spoke highly of the Rotary movement.

Home Bank List Amounting To Millions Had No Known Value

LOSS ON DISCOUNT.

Clarence Smith, Montreal Director, Likely To Go To Trial Monday.

TORONTO, Oct. 2. — (Canadian Press).—The case for the Crown in the trial of Sidney H. Jones, auditor of the Home Bank, on charges of making false statements wound up to-day. If the defence and legal arguments are concluded by to-night Clarence Smith, of Montreal, Home Bank director, will go on trial on Monday. He will be the first Home Bank director to be tried.

Albert E. Nash, of the firm of Clarkson, Gordon and Dilworth, chartered accountants, who made an examination of the books of the head office, Toronto branch and some of the Montreal and Vancouver branches, was the chief witness yesterday. He gave evidence concerning securities held by the bank and securities in loans to various companies. In its annual statement for 1923 the bank gave the securities on call loans at $1,272,686. Mr. Nash said in evidence that this amount was $858,692 too much, according to market values placed on securities. There was a deficiency in the market value of $74,144 of some of the securities, and for another loan of $452,048 there was no security at all.

Worthless Securities.

Witness also said that there was a loss of $1,315,000 in current loans and discounts. He traced the history of the Frost loan, which started at $380,000 in 1910, and by May 31, 1923, had reached $2,543,000. The interest on it had been capitalized yearly, and in 1918, 1919 and 1920 had been credited to the contingent account of the bank and reported as deposits. He also gave a list of securities held by the bank which had been found to have no known market value which the bank had valued as follows: Reynolds Timber, Shipping and Insurance Co., $10,000; Jas. A. Ogilvie Co., $250,000; Manufacturers Holding and Investment Company, $500,000; Port McNeil Pulp and Paper Company, demand debentures, $1,000,000; Howe Sound Pulp and Paper Co., demand debentures, $975,000. Other accounts which had a market value were treated as assets of $608,410 by the bank, while the witness had found that their actual market value was $451,377.

Major Nash defined the difference between an examination and an audit in his evidence. He said that an audit meant checking all vouchers and statements, while an examination did not mean that detail.

CREW ESCAPED WATERY GRAVE

St. Lawrence River Bateau Ran Aground on Bar and Battered.

STORM ON RIVER.

QUEBEC, Oct. 2. — (Canadian Press). — Snatched from a watery grave only with the utmost difficulty while the lower St. Lawrence was being whipped into a seething caldron at an early hour yesterday, and witnessing their craft being crushed and battered into a pulp, was the experience of Captain Renaud, of the river bateau "Louila," and his crew when the vessel, laden with freight, and on her way to this port, struck the bar at Port Neuf, 120 miles from Quebec, on the south shore, and a short distance below Tadousac, according to information reaching here.

Everything possible under the circumstances was done by Captain Renaud and the crew, but it was seen that the sturdy little bateau was doomed. Small boats were launched with the greatest difficulty. The men were able to reach the land, which was only a short distance from the stricken bateau.

Another river accident occurred yesterday morning when the auxiliary ferry L'Etoile, which runs regularly between this port and points in Lotbiniere County and Montreal, ran aground about one mile this side of the bell mouth signal station, some 109 miles above Quebec on the south shore. A tug was despatched from Sorel at once to tow the vessel to safety.

MURDER TRIAL EVIDENCE ALL BEFORE COURT

Argument of Counsel In the McGaughey Murder Trial Opened This Afternoon.

CUSHION INCIDENT.

Dr. Armour Did Not Consider Prisoner a Sufferer From Dementia Precox.

LINDSAY, Oct. 2.—(By Staff Reporter).—That Frederick McGaughey's desire for comfort while sitting in the dock during his trial for murder, may cost him his life was accentuated to-day when Dr. Robert Armour testified for the crown that sufferer from catatonic dementia precox is not conscious of discomfort. The action of the accused in asking for a cushion was not consistent with the attitude he took as an advanced sufferer from the disease.

The ragged brown sweater on which he sits to-day may be a fateful piece of comfort.

Dr. Armour's evidence as an alienist closed the hearing and the argument of counsel opened at 2.30.

In his testimony Dr. Armour stressed as evidence of orientation, the fact that the revolver was fully loaded when taken from the accused. Evidence showed that there were bloodstains on a shell in the magazine of the revolver and blood on a cartridge box from which the ammunition was presumably taken. The

Liquor Production Greatly Decreased

The Purity League, in last night's Examiner, does not attempt to deny our figures showing that since the enactment of the Ontario Temperance Act, 29 breweries in Ontario have been closed and that the production of beer has decreased from 24,193,619 gallons in 1914 to 6,379,667 gallons in 1923. But, they ask, "Why are not the statistics of outside distillerie, and breweries quoted? Their output has so increased as to astonish the world. This illicit output of outside distilleries, etc., is what the bootleggers pour into Ontario."

TOTAL CONSUMPTION GREATLY DECREASED.

Why, may we ask, don't the "Moderationists" and "Purity Leaguers" quote the figures themselves. They dare not. So we will. Here they are:

It is a simple matter to add together the total manufactures and imports of liquor and subtract the exports. What is left represents the amount of liquor available for use in Canada.

LIQUOR CONSUMPTION IN CANADA.

Here are the actual figures, in gallons, of spirituous liquors, available for consumption in Canada, for the years ending 31st March, 1914, when the O.T.A. came into force, and 1923:

	1914.	1923.
Total	8,570,820 Gals.	3,320,645 Gals.
Exported Home Prod.	798,643 Gals.	539,404 Gals.
Net total gallons of liquor available for consumption in Canada for all purposes	7,748,024 Gals.	2,691,531 Gals.

That is to say—There were 5,056,493 gallons less liquor in Canada for use in 1923 than in 1914. When we consider that British Columbia and Quebec wer legally selling during 1923 and estimate their consumption as being two-thirds as great per capita as in 1914, they alone would consume 2,039,167 gallons of liquor.

CONSUMPTION DECREASED 90%.

This would leave for consumption in the other seven Provinces of Canada, with a combined population of 5,890,073, only 652,364 gallons, or .111 gallons per capita. This is only one-ninth as much as in 1914, and this is for all purposes, medicinal, bootlegging, rum-running, and everything else.

Facts like the foregoing, and not wild rumours and exaggerated statements, tell the tale. Don't let the Moderationists deceive you.

CHICKEN

A chicken with eight hearts, killed by Mrs. C. D. Evans, is reported from Evening Shade, Ark.,

That excites curiosity. But the real marvel goes unnoticed It is that billions of other chickens have only one heart. Nature standardizes. She produces exceptions rarely. And when an exception does slip through, especialy in the form of high intelligence, nature usually destroys her "blunder" quickly.

A super-brain is generally handicapped by a sickly body. The great Darwin wrote most of his stuff in bed. He had to—an invalid suffering tortures.

NIGHT SESSION HELD IN LINDSAY IN TRIAL FREDERICK M'GAUGHEY

Prisoner Asked For a Cushion To Make Him More Comfortable in the Dock.

MEDICAL TESTIMONY.

(By a Staff Reporter).

LINDSAY, Oct. 2. — A crowded court-room, peering faces at the windows, jostling crowds in the hallways and hundreds of townspeople turned away marked the interest that was taken in the trial of Fred McGaughey for the murder of Beatrice Fee as it entered its sixth session last night, and only the accused remained unmoved by the electric thrill that accompanied the closing moments of the battle for his life. With head and shoulders bowed in an attitude that would, but for the Crown assertion that the position is a poise, indicate the hopelessness of a crushed man, McGaughey yesterday held for ten hours the rigidity in which he set himself on Tuesday morning. He moved more yesterday. His thumbs twitched often, and his feet refused to maintain their cramped position in the poky cage that is called a dock. Seated on the bench, there is not room for his limbs to stretch, if he wished to stretch them.

On Tuesday, when he attempted to rise, he was compelled to squirm two or three times to release his clothing that had become sweated to the bench. Yesterday he sat on a folded-up woollen sweater.

His simple request for the cushion may have as much to do with his conviction as any other single factor.

It indicates, Crown witnesses declared, that McGaughey is not a catatonic as the defence claims, since a sufferer from catatonia has no sense of discomfort.

His eagerness to leave the dock may also count against him in the role he may be playing, since catatonics are unaware of their surroundings, and he rises voluntarily to his feet immediately the door of his cage is opened.

Evidence showed that the prisoner was not so passive as he looked in the dock, and had, in jail been to all appearances a normal man, able to pitch a curve ball and very fond of reading.

Momentous Struggle.

Never before has the little Lindsay court room seen so great a struggle as that in progress this week to determine whether McGaughey will expiate with his life the slaying of Beatrice Fee, his sweetheart. People who had seats on Tuesday night slept in them to retain them for yesterday's sitting. The fire escapes and window sills were crowded with people, who could only catch snatches of the brilliant sallies of counsel and the testimony of the galaxy of experts, and again hundreds were turned away from the crowded doors.

In the body of the court were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fee, father and mother of the dead girl. Mrs. Fee is a pitifully aged woman, aged by the tragedy that carried away in an hour the most beautiful and brilliant of her children.

Helen Stewart, who claimed Beatrice as her "dearest friend," was there, dressed in the height of fashion, a fixed tone of sadness in her piquant face, with occasionally that haunting light of a terrible memory that held the crowded court room speechless as she recited the story of the awful night.

Mrs. Madill, aunt and confidante of the victim of the tragedy, was in constant attendance on Miss Stewart, and herself received much attention as she smoothed the way for the slip of a girl who brought so fateful a message to the court.

Called in rebuttal at the night session last night, Mrs. Madill said she had never noticed any abnormality in Fred McGaughey and had always found him bright in intelligence and shrewd. Pressed in cross-examination for an instance of his shrewdness, Mrs. Madill said she deduced it from what he said of his farming operations.

As Sane As Any.

Lawrence Madill declared Fred McGaughey was as sane as ever he was. On objection by defence counsel the witness changed the word "sane" to "clever." He demonstrated that he could figure accurately in his mind by counting up the amount he would realize from things on the farm.

In the Mossop hotel in Toronto, during a discussion of the effects of city life on country girls, Madill told Fred he had no need to worry about Beatrice Fee going astray. McGaughey said there was men who made a business of seducing girls and that was what he was going to prevent with Beatrice.

R H. Stone, governor of the County Jail at Lindsay, said he remembered the accused being admitted to jail. His conduct since has been ordinary and there has been nothing peculiar about him. He talks intelligently on farming and sport. He read a lot in jail, mostly magazines and expressed his likes and dislikes regarding the stories. He read for an hour or an hour and a half at a time.

There were two cigarettes on Mr. Stone's desk one day and when taking Fred out for exercise on Sunday, the Governor gave him these cigarettes. Fred said he had smoked that kind before and said they came in yellow packets. He said: "This is the kind of cigarette I was smoking in the car that Sunday, I came to jail."

McGaughey played catch with the other prisoners and the Turnkey, he had a good swing and pitch but was nothing much of a catcher.

The Governor said McGaughey answered all questions asked by the defense alienist but would not answer Dr. Clare. Between these visits Mr. Frost, defence counsel, informed his client that he was not to speak to any one regarding the crime Thereafter McGaughey carried out his counsels' orders, although he talked freely on other subjects.

McGaughey preferred a certain brand of cigarette. He asked for a newspaper but, it not being permissable to give a whole newspaper, he asked for the comic strips and the market reports. On one occasion he remarked that the price of cattle was not very good.

In conversation with Lawrence McGaughey, the accused discussed the selling of a calf of which he approved as being a good deal.

Asked for a Cushion

The Governor of the jail said the accused sat on Tuesday without a cushion, but yesterday morning asked for one as he was not very comfortable. He said he had to sit "humped up".

On the night of his arrest Fred McGaughey asked the jailer to telephone his brother anod told his telephone number. While McGaughey was not a conversationalist, he talked freely on occasions. A short time ago he told of buying an engine and the trouble he had with it. At other times he would not follow up conversational leads. He sat in the ward for hours reading and smoking, but not motionless.

He had no fits of nervousness and only cried when his people called. He called for the doctor and was given medicine. He had lost ten pounds in weight.

Wanted Poison.

Dr. John A. White, jail surgeon, said he visited the accused in jail on May 25 and found him very nervous, and in a state of semi-intoxication, stammering in his speech. He told Dr. White, "I must have been crazy. The accused had vomited, and might have taken some poison or it might have been the drink. He was thirsty all night. His appetite continued fair throughout his imprisonment.

On May 29th accused asked for poison, suggesting strychnine or prussic acid. He suggested that the doctor might give a small portion of the poison to the prisoner's brother, and it could be smuggled in in a shirt collar. Dr. White took his dog once, and McGaughey advised vaseline as a cure for burns the dog had sustained. He also gave advice about treating a horse. He said he had a farm and a ranch where he pastured horses and cattle and told the price he charged for a cow for a season. He talked connectedly and clearly.

About the last day of May the prisoner said he remembered Dr. White examining him in connection with the Military Service Act some years before.

McGaughey complained about not having cheese or tea and was given them. He said he had a permit to make beer, and told the detail of the process that made "hot, strong stuff."

The accused complained of a crushing feeling in his head and a tightness in his chest with a jerking sensation in the night. This, Dr. White said, is not uncommon.

Hymns in His Cell.

The prisoner told of an idea that some one came into the cell and grasped him by the shoulders and he could not cry out.

He also spoke of hearing hymns in his cell. He also said voices told him to kill Miss Fee. He had at times the sensation of filling up so that his body filled the cell.

On two occasions the accused talked about his trial and became more nervous as the date came nearer.

In Dr. White's opinion the accused is a little below average in mental ability, but with sufficient intelligence to know and actually knowing, right from wrong.

Answering Mr. Frost in cross-examination, Dr. White said the accused was never crying when he arrived, but broke down on mention of certain matters.

Dr. White said in his opinion the accused has not dementa precox, but with his limited knowledge of mental diseases the witness could not state definitely.

Denies the Disease.

Dr. Harvey Clare, superintendent of Ontario Hospital for the Insane, Toronto, said in the last ten years of his 23 years' experience, he had seen more mental cases than any other man in Canada.

Here on orders of the Attorney General, the witness visited McGaughey in the jail. The governor admitted him on presentation of his order from the Attorney General.

The accused answered, "I don't know" to every question when he spoke at all. He would not say how long he had been in the jail or why he was there.

On another occasion, on September 15, the doctor visited the accused and he spoke nicely on several subjects. He told Dr. Clare the best way to travel to Toronto, and asked about Toronto fair. Any question concerning why he was in jail went unanswered.

A few minutes after Dr. Clare left the first time he returned and looked through a peep hole and saw McGaughey reading again.

"What do you say as to whether in your opinion this man is suffering from catatonic dementia precox?"

"I do not think so. There are isolated facts that are symptoms, impulses are symptoms of dementia precox, but impulses to shoot a person four times with an interval between shots are not an outcome of dementia precox."

"The actions of the accused before and after the shooting belie the theory that he did not know the difference between right and wrong If he knew at 3 o'clock what he was doing that rules out the theory of dementia precox which is a slowly growing progressive disease. He knew what he was doing because he drove the car, turned it, took the young lady to the house, put her on a bed, telephoned for the doctor, told of his injured hand, said there was a hold up; and asked for a lawyer to defend him, using good judgment in picking a lawyer whom he believed would serve him best. Ever since he has apparently known what was going on around him."

On His Guard

"In these things there is no indication of catatonic dementia precox. His refusing to speak to me showed I believe that he realized he might say something that would go against him, he certainly had inhibitory power."

Dr. Clares said he did not attach any significance to the statements "I'm crazy" on the night of the slaying, he had never, in any crisis heard of an insane person declaim his insanity. "I think he was endeavouring to make an excuse for himself."

Dr. Clare expressed the opinion that the accused had no intention of killing himself or he might have done it during the two or three hours, he was alone at the house.

"I have observed the accused during the trial and his attitude might be that of a catatonic dementia precox sufferer but his calling for the cushion denies that, for catatonics do not realize uncomfortable positions and don't feel the discomfort. If the man were in a catatonic condition he would not swallow saliva and the saliva would drop from his mouth Catatonics are incapable of moving because of a blocking of the will power. His position indicates an advanced condition of the disease in which twitching would be absent. Each day when the trial is over he gets up promptly as soon as the gate is opened showing he is fully in touch with everything that's going on around him Without his losing contract with his surroundings there is no catatonic dementia pretox."

In cross-examination Dr. Clare said: "I don't know" as a habitual answer is inconsistent with the disease claimed for McGaughey.

"Are you sure of that?"

"I'm quite sure of it."

"Is alcoholism in itself an insanity?"

"That question doesn't mean anything. There are several form of insanity due to alcoholism.

The use of alcohol in small amounts might be a symptom of insanity, "but I don't believe it," declared Dr. Clare.

The use of alcohol is not a symptom of Dementia precox since the disease comes on early in life and the great majority of sufferers never see alcohol.

The term dementia precox means precocious dementia or disease of adolescence, and the violent outbreak as a first symptom in a man of McGaughey's age is unheard of in medical circles.

Drink Responsible.

Lack of interest in his farm did not indicate dementia precox, declared Dr. Clare. This was explained because the man was drinking home brew and driving his car all over the country.

"When you have slowness at school lack of interest in work, drinking liquor and senile decay in his grandmother you have no symptoms of dementia precox. Talking about his grandmother having senile dementia does not get you a symptom of dementia pretox," Dr. Clare said.

Miss Irene Wagner Tells How Cuticura Healed Pimples

"I was troubled with pimples from the time I was twelve years of age. Some of the pimples were large and some were small. They were hard and red at first but after the second or third day they usually came to a head and gradually disappeared. They looked so badly that I was disgusted and did not want to go anywhere.

"One day I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and decided I would send for a free sample. I purchased more and in two or three months the pimples disappeared." (Signed) Miss Irene Wagner, Box 881, Havre, Mont., Aug. 27, 1923.

Trial of Slayer of Beatrice Fee

Brown said senile decay is the ordinary result of enroaching age.

Made Beer At Home.

Clarence McGaughey, 20, a brother of the accused, said he had lived up to May 24 on the homestead with Fred McGaughey. His brother hired him for $20 a month.

Fred started to use liquor several years ago. Up to the time his mother left the homestead three years ago he had not taken liquqor to excess. Since then he had drunk all kinds of liquor—white stuff without labels and other stuff labelled.

He made his beer from boiled hops and yeast and other ingredients and put it in bottles which he capped. Fred drank most of it. Clarence did not like it well enough to drink it. Two three-gallon crocks were made every ten days or so. Fred drank the beer instead of water and it seemed to make him stupid.

When he was deprived of liquor he looked "half stupid and half dead" the witness said.

On Friday night before the tragedy Fred McGaughey returned the worse for liquqor at 11 o'clock at night, got some more liquor and went away again. About 2 o'clock Fred returned, the worst his brother had ever seen him. He went straight to his room and was raving to himself and was sick.

Got More Liquor.

On Saturday Fred was ill all morning and stayed around the farm until noon when he left in the car and returned with several bottles of liquor.

Clarence McGaughey had done most of the work lately he said, Fred being incapable through intoxication.

Under cross-examination by the Crown Prosecutor, the witness said the home made beer tasted something like vinegar.

On Friday night when Fred came home late Clarence did not hear a woman's voice in the car outside, nor did he know any friend of Fred's who wore pearl earrings.

Fred was always able to control himself no matter how drunk he was.

Clarence knew Beatrice Fee more than ten years. She was at his home when he left there at 6.30 on Sunday evening.

Fred was intoxicated but the witness did not suspect that anything would happen to her. If he had any suspicion that Fred was mentally defective Clarence would not have left Beatrice Fee alone with him, he said.

Fred had practiced with the gun, shooting at tin cans.

On the evening of the tragedy Clarence and Beatrice Fee and Fred quarerlling in the garage.

McGaughey Drunk.

Melville Irvine whose farm borders the acused's said Fred McGaughey's buildings and fields have gone to pieces lately. His brother had done most of the work.

McGaughey was drunk one night when Irvine called and was ordered off the farm.

Under cross-examination, Irvine admitted he was going to get seed barley off this dirty farm, and both His Lordship and the Crown prosecutor remarked on the circumstance.

Had Night Terrors.

Mrs. Wilbert Fee, sister of the accused, gave evidence as to Fred's school life. Mrs. Fee's husband is a cousin of Samuel Fee, Beatrice's father.

When eight and nine years old, Fred suffered from night terrors and lost time from school. Lately he had stuttered and had been drinking a lot. On at least one occasion she saw him so intoxicated that he could not walk.

Mrs. Fee was ashamed of Fred's appearance of late, and took pains to see that he looked presentable before he left home to go to Toronto on his last trip.

Was a Feeble Boy.

Dr. J. A. McAlpine, of Lindsay, who has practiced fifty years, said he had been the McGaughey family physician for years. As a boy, Fred was feeble and nervous, and subject to night terrors. Dr. McAlpine advised the boy's parents to keep him away from school.

Lucinda McGaughey, mother of Fred., was weak mentally ten years ago. She had delusions that people were throwing things around the house, and that there was a bad smell in the house. She is now between 60 and 70 years of age.

Dr. A. Galloway, of Woodville, said he attended Lucinda McGaughey in 1921 and 1923, when he noticed her mental condition was not up to normal. She had delusions regarding taste, smell and noises.

Under cross-examination, Dr. Galloway said he did not think a catarrhal condition of the nose, ear and throat could cause the condition. Mrs. McGaughey had an anaemic brain.

Crazy Drunk.

Wilbert Fee, cousin of Samuel Fee, father of the slain girl, said he went with Samuel Fee to the hospital on Sunday night following the shooting. Miss Fee said she was not going to live.

She then said Fred shot her in a fit of temper and crazy drunk. It was on the road, and she got the revolver from him and threw it into the ditch. He got the revolver and shot her once more.

The witness declared he was positive Miss Fee used the expression "crazy drunk."

Dr. Moir.

Dr. A. Moir, of Peterboro, said he saw Beatrice Fee in Ross Memorial Hospital and heard Miss Fee say she thought she would die.

After the Crown Attorney left the room, Dr. Moir asked, "Did Fred. McGaughey made any improper proposals or attempt to have intercourse with you?"

She replied: "No such thing. He made no such proposals or attempt."

She said Fred. McGaughey had made a promise to her which he had not kept, and she had taken him to task for it.

In cross-examination, Dr. Moir reiterated on his oath that these exact words were used by Miss Fee. He wrote the words in his note-book, but does not know where the note-book is now.

"That's most unfortunate, may I suggest," Mr. White said.

Dr. Moir later said it was on a letter he wrote the sentence.

"A man who is so careless that he means a piece of paper when he says a note-book might have said "accomplish" when he says he said "attempt," Mr. White remarked.

Dr. Moir identified the statement taken in writing by Crown Attorney J. E. Anderson, which was entered as evidence.

McGaughey Examined in Jail

McGaughey had diminished apprehension and orientation, Dr. Beemer said. The accused knew where he was, but the doctor did not ask whether he knew the day of the month.

"Did you ask him if he knew there was a commandment, 'Thou shalt not kill'?"

"No."

"Did you ask him if he knew there was a law of the land against killing?

"No."

"Wasn't it important to ask him whether there was a law of God prohibiting killing in order to judge whether he knew right from wrong?"

"Perhaps I should have asked. He might have known the text but been overcome at the time."

"Because of uncontrollable impulse?"

"I don't like that term."

"No. I know you don't, because you know its significance."

"Well, loss of inhibitory power, then?"

"Yes."

"And that is called uncontrollable impulse."

"It is called that."

"Did you ever hear a man suffering from dementia percox say he was crazy?"

"Crazy men rarely admit they are crazy."

"The fact that a man after a deed such as this would say he was crazy would go a long way to show he was not?"

"Yes. People suffering from dementia precox do not say that."

"But that statement under the circumstances is consistent with sanity?"

"Yes."

Mr. White: "He was backward at school, but many most remarkable men have been backward at school. He had night terrors, but that has been caused in the cases of hundreds of normal children by worms. He was in low spirits, but he was getting over a drunk, and realising that he had killed his sweetheart."

Suggested Answers.

Dr. Beemer admitted that he suggested the thought of anger with his father and conducted his entire investigation by suggesting points to the accused. Dr. Beemer based his findings were given in response to questions that might have been suggestive to a brighter mind than that of the accused, the witness said.

McGaughey didn't seem to care what was going to happen to him, and this indicated his lack of interest. He wanted to have someone kill him.

The fact that McGaughey said he wanted to poison himself showed lack of judgment, the witness said.

Mr. White. "It was bad judgment for him to kill this girl, wasn't it?"

"Yes."

"It's always bad judgment for anyone to kill anyone else, and if we let everyone off who uses so bad judgment as to kill someone what is going to happen to this country?"

The breaking of the pump and the hitting of the post might have indicated bad temper, like a man smashing his golf club when he misses the ball, Dr. Beemer said.

"Isn't it true that people suffering from dementia precox cannot pick up new occupations readily?"

"Yes."

"Yet this man learned to make beer."

"It is unusual but does not involve any great mental effort."

Mr. White: "Attitudinizing is another symptom that developed later. His attitude now might be a pose. His muscles might be fixed until they tired He is doing it pretty well?"

Dr. Beeemr said the moving of the man's hands indicated that he was not suffering from fixity of the muscles. He has not yet reached the stage of absolute fixity but Dr. Beemer believed the man was not pretending.

A man may know the nature of the act of shooting without knowing the quality of the shooting to kill a person, Dr. Beemer said.

Second Opinion.

Dr. English, of the Ontario Hospital for the Insane in Hamilton, said he had examined the accused on May 30th, when he decided he was a mental defective, and had been using alcholic stimulants to excess. Dementia precox was developing in the catatonic state. His educational advancement had been slow; he did not attend to work; his complaints, his night terrors, his gastric disturbances; the temptation to take his life in order that his father might appreciate the way he was punishing his son, were all signs of mental disorder. Dr. English said he had been too long in the business to be fooled by a maligner.

The prisoner had an impulse or an impression that he must take his own life and that of Beatrice Fee. His suffering from alcoholic precox and his alcoholic indulgences had made him insane and irresponsible.

The accused asked him, Dr. English declared, for something to put him out of the way.

The senile dementia of the grandmother at 73 and the pernicious anaemia of the mother at 50, had a decided effect on the accused's mentality, the doctor said.

There are two stages of catatonic dementia precox, catatonic stupor and catatonic excitement. The former is the state in which the prisoner sits in the box and the latter the condition in which he was at the time of the shooting, Dr. English said.

Dr. English declared that the impulse to kill was the result of McGaughey's disease but the actual shooting was done when he was so under te influence of liquor that he did not know the nature and the quality of the act.

Not Characteristic.

"Is it characteristic that he should swallow occasionally?"

"I will not answer that."

"I demand an answer. You are swearing as an expert."

Dr. English: "Frequent swallowing and working of his hands are not characteristic—immobility passiveness are characteristic."

Dr. English said he believed he had seen a catatonic patient moving his fingers, but would not name the patient and could not give any case in which a catatonic had moved as McGaughey did in the prisoner's dock

Dr. English re-affirmed his oath, and declared positively that the appearance of the accused in the dock satisfied his expert knowledge that the accused is suffering from catatonic immobility.

Mr. White: "If another doctor came to talk to the accused and he refused to talk altogether, and refused on instructions, what would you consider his will power?"

"Good, if done on instruction."

The Third Expert.

Dr. Edward Ryan, of Kingston, superintendent of the Hospital for the Insane, said he examined Fred McGaughey on May 29, when he found that the accused suffered from dementia precox in the catatonic state.

He admitted to Mr. White that a bad tempered drunken man, balked in his sexual desires might be guilty of just the act the accused is said to have committed.

"Supposed the accused complained he could not sit in this cramped condition as it made his chest muscles hurt would that be indicative of catatonic dementia?"

"No, not indicative."

"Supposed the accused asked for a cushion—none of the rest of us have them—that does not indicate a catatonic attitude?"

"No."

"Ten he was orientated as far as to-day's trial is concerned, and pictured himself sititng in the dock?"

"As to place anyw..."

"It also indicates foresight?"

"Yes."

Dr. Ryan admitted that he came to no conclusion as to the man's mentality until the trial opened and he observed the accused in the box in a state of catatonic immobility.

At the close of the evening session His Lordship expressed a desire to complete the hearing and over-ruled Mr. Frost's protestations of fatigue in favor of a night sitting.

BILLBOARDS COVER CHINESE HIGHWAYS

TECHOW, Shauntung, Oct. 1.—The bill-board has invaded China, along with other western innovations, and is gradually making its appearance far in the interior and off the beaten tracks. Not only is it devoted to the recognized purpose of crying the merits of some article of merchandise, but occasionally it is employed in furthering moral uplift. For instance, in certain districts in the province of Shansi herculean policeman are portrayed on bill-boards in the act of seizing opium traffickers, apparently in the hope of bringing the lesson within the scope of the dullest intellect, while others show guardians of the law with enormous knives lopping off the heads of offenders.

Only words of praise can be said for bill-boards which herald forth to the Orient the fact that flies are carriers of diseases, even though the motive be recommendation of a certain preparation for the extermination. As for the others, colossal roosters or king-fishers proclaim special brands of cigarettes, and giant bunches of raisins miraculous patent medicines. And endless variety of electrical appliances are also advertised, pointing the way to enjoyment, health and comfort.

Great Britain, through Lord Parmoor, lord president of the council, did not go as far as France, merely announcing her acceptance of the resolution transmitting the protocol to the governments, but promising to exert all the influence of the British government and parliament to ratify it. The speaker insisted that the protocol represented no attempt to make the council or the assembly of the league a super-state, with authority over the various governments. Such an attempt would court inevitable failure

"Neither the council nor the assembly," he continued, "will have any power to interfere in internal affairs beyond what is already comprehende din the covenant.

WHERE THE ONUS LIES.

The Examiner referred last evening to the action of coroner's juries in Toronto in passing resolutions calling for better instruction of children as to the dangers of street traffic.

The London Advertiser shows why in a few sentences, pointing out that there are two parties involved—the driver and the child on the street.

The driver is an adult and he knows or should know that the child has not the same strength of understanding or the same sense of danger that he possesses.

The child is a child in mind and habits; a ball or a pet cat on the street is an object to be secured at once; the child does not stop to take in the whole situation, judge distance and the speed at which a car is approaching.

By all means lose no opportunity of training and warning children about street accidents, but let the motorist always remember that it behooves the adult part involved to assume the greater share of the care.

Children should be kept off the roads, but every motorist driving in city streets should always handle his car as if at any moment he might be called upon to dodge a careless child.

THE BOWMANVILLE FARM.

The contracts have been awarded by the Ontario Government for the construction of the first two buildings on the Provincial boys' corrective farm near Bowmanville.

The price for the erection of a dining-hall and a dormitory is $90,957, and the Government is wise in its decision to start the work immediately and have it carried on throughout the winter months, thus providing employment for a large number of men engaged in the building trades who would be otherwise idle, and at the same time making it possible to make an actual start with boys on the farm in the spring.

This new venture is the biggest piece of social service work undertaken by the Ferguson administration, and promises to go a long way toward solving the problem of what is to be done for the delinquent boys of Ontario.

The working out of the new policy by which such youngsters are to be given a chance to get a new and a better start in life, instead of being herded with adult criminals and thus completing their education in crime, will be studied with much interest.

The success of a similar institution in Quebec gives reason to hope that Ontario's farm effort will prove itself of the very greatest benefit.

With the work to get under way at once, it is probable that the beginning of a new year's agricultural operations will find a group of boys being given practical education along lines that will develop them mentally, physically and morally.

THE REVOLVER AGAIN.

The murder trial being held at Lindsay throws the spotlight once more upon the deadly revolver.

It was this easily concealed, too easily operated weapon that killed Beatrice Fee, and, in addition to the revolver said to have been used, other firearms were spoken of during the evidence.

The facility with which these weapons can be procured is a very important factor in most crimes of violence.

Because it is not difficult to obtain a revolver and little trouble to carry one, they are too readily at hand when a quarrel eventuates and angry passions rise.

No young man in this section of Canada has any justification for "packing" a gun.

He does not need it for protection, and there is no more reason why he should go round armed with a revolver than there would be to carry a machine gun with him.

It should be made such a serious offence to be found with a revolver concealed around one's person that no honest citizen would ever dream of carrying one.

It should be made so difficult to secure a pocket firearm that dishonest citizens would have no opportunity of arming themselves.

Had such regulations been in force last May Beatrice Fee would likely be alive today.

THE COST OF EDUCATION.

While there is little that is new in Premier Ferguson's statements in regard to the increase of rural schools in Ontario, the fact that he has given prominence to some of the features of this phase of the educational situation will perhaps call general attention to the matter.

When it is realized that 13 per cent. of the rural schools in Ontario have an average attendance of less than 10 pupils, 33 per cent. an average of less than 15 and 55 per cent. an average of less than 20, the public will begin to wonder whether some of the money spent upon education could not be saved.

It is apparent that in many rural sections of the Province there are more schools in proportion to the number of available pupils than necessary.

No one would wish to deprive any rural pupil of opportunities for education, but at the same time the situation seems to call for the amalgamation of many of these schools and the substitution of a central school to which the pupils living at a distance could be transported.

This idea is not a new one; it has been tried out and given satisfactory results, but there is the greatest difficulty in persuading communities to adopt the system in spite of its manifold advantages, not the least of which is the effect upon the tax-rate.

Incidentally, the high cost of education is not merely a rural problem.

Cities have found their school tax bills mounting with alarming rapidity, and the cost of educating the children of the present day has assumed such proportions as to call for an earnest endeavour on the part of those entrusted with the administration of our school system to see that every possible cent is saved.

Anything that smacks of luxury or extravagance must be eliminated, and the time has come for the adoption by the cities of a standard type of school building which, while not so beautifully architecturally as some of the schools that have been erected, would serve the purpose satisfactorily.

The man who has to go down in his pocket to provide the money is willing to dispense with a few frills if he can get a standardized building at less expense.

CAPITAL AND LABOR.

An interesting correspondence has been going on between Warren S. Stone, President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and John L. Lewis, President of United Mine Workers of America.

Members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers have $3,000,000 invested in a coal mine in West Virginia called the Coal River Collieries Company. It developed last year that coal mined from this property which could only sell on cars at the mines for $1.50 per ton cost to produce $1.63 per ton.

This spring a contract came up for renewal between the company and the miners, which called for a renewal of the old rate of union wages. The company asked for a reduction in the rates, which was refused. Then the company declined to renew the old contract and the miners struck and have been on strike since.

President Lewis of the United Mine Workers recently wrote a strong letter to Mr. Warren S. Stone who is not only President of the Locomotive Engineers but is Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Coal River Collieries Company. Mr. Lewis in this letter called upon Mr. Stone to show loyalty to Union principles by renewing the old contract at the mines. Mr. Stone replied in part as follows:

"You are laboring under the impression that a coal mine is operated wholly and solely for the benefit of your organization. The members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, who have invested over $3,000,000 in these properties, are entitled to some return on their investment. . . . We want to run a union mine and expect to run one if we run at all, but it is impossible to do so when the non-union fields around us can produce coal so much more cheaply and have a monopoly of the entire market. If it comes to the point that we have to pay 13 cents more a ton to produce the coal than we can sell the coal for after it is loaded on the cars, without even considering any return for our investment and without taking care of our overhead, we are up against a serious problem, and I think you must realize it."

This statement did not seem to impress Mr. Lewis very forcibly, for he replied practically that the problem confronting Mr. Stone was one which did not concern the Union. He intimated that the problem of production costs and owners' profits is one with which the Union has no concern, or in other words that when Union labor wants a certain scale of wages, it refuses to think of the profits or losses of the employers no matter who these employers may be.

The correspondence has its humorous side, seeing that Mr. Stone who declines to admit the force of the arguments of Mr. Lewis is on record as having often used precisely the same sort of argument against employers when dealing with the question of the wages of railway men. As President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Mr. Stone has always been strongly insistent on the rights of labor to have good wages no matter whether the railways are making profits or not. Evidently it makes quite a difference whose ox is gored.

But the correspondence is also illuminative of the fact that capital is sometimes not able to pay good wages. The idea which a good many well-meaning but not well-informed people are apt to apply to difficulties between capital and labor is that capital is always greedy, and trying to squeeze too much out of workers. Quite as sensible an idea is the idea that workers are always trying to squeeze too much out of capital.—Ottawa Journal.

BELIEVING WHAT YOU HEAR.

This controversy between religion and science, about the theory of evolution simmers down to the problem of how much one is willing to accept "on faith."

But does it ever occur to these scientists that at least 95 per cent. of their scientific knowledge is also based on faith?

For instance, every scientist will take oath that the skull of a creature known as the Java Ape Man, supposed to be half a million or so years old, exists—having been reconstructed from fragments. But how many scientists have actually seen this skull? Belief in this skull is entirely a matter of faith—credulous-

We're all like the scientists, in that 95 per cent. of what we "know" is accepted on faith alone. How do you know that there's a country called China? Were you ever there to see with your own eyes? Most of us have never seen China, but we believe in it.

Faith in the word of others makes us believe nearly everything we class as knowledge. Studying chemistry, we are told that water is a combination of hydrogen and oxygen—and we accept this as true, on faith.

Scientists "swore by" the authenticity of the Cardiff Giant—believed in it, many of them, because they had faith in it—until the giant was exposed as a "planted" hoax of P. T. Barnum.

The world is so big that a man travelling constantly for 100 years would see only a small fraction of the whole before he died. With this handicap, it's quite natural that nearly all of our knowledge is accepted on the basis of faith.

Faith is one of the mightiest forces in life.

It is just as much present in science as in religion.

All theories are eventually proved false—from Columbus knocking out the scientific theory that the earth was flat, to Einstein proving that parallel lines do meet if indefinitely prolonged. The history of science is a history of exploded convictions—shattered faiths.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, October 2. — If the cattle supply at the Union Stock Yards does not move fast to-day and to-morroy there will be a large carry-over into next week. Tuesday's sales only totalled 1,568, and there were just about 3,000 still for sale yesterday morning. Tuesday's receipts were 53 cars, 380 cattle, 201 calves, 1,270 hogs, and 1,445 sheep and lambs. One buyer who came off the market yesterday morning, not having any immediate orders to fill, said it was the deadest affair he had seen in many months.

Rogers & Maybee are still scouring the market for any good export stuff, and will ship over 1,600 head of cattle this week. They have only been able to get about 10 bulls and were buying heifers and cows yesterday morning, the latter at about $4.75 a cwt. Shields & Co. had a number of 1,500-pound steers thrown out of the choice export loads, and for these they were able to get $5.20 a cwt. from the packers. One mixed load of good butcher steers and heifers was sold yesterday morning at $5.50 a cwt.

There was quite a stir in the cattle trading starting around 11 o'clock, and loads started to the scales pretty freely. Buyers' bills were accepted at drops of 15 to 25 cents a cwt. on butchers cattle. Steers, about 1,200 pounds, sold at $5.75 a cwt.; good handyweight butchers sold in loads at $5.50, and medium butchers at $4.50 a cwt.

Common butchers were $1.00 to $1.50 a cwt. below the mediums.

Stockers are selling at lower prices. Loads of these 600 to 800 pounds each are bringing $3.75 to $4.50 a cwt. and yearlings are only good for $2.75 to $3.00 a cwt. The commission men recognise the bad situation of the market, and are getting shippers to accept offers to dispose of the accumulated supply of butchers' cattle.

The Jews are buyers of calves again, and this market holds decidedly firm, with tops 10 to 11 cents. Heavy calves are the only weak spot and these are hard to sell over 6 cents a pound.

Lambs are holding the advance of Tuesday with top ewes at 12 cents a pound. The bulk of yesterday's lambs went at from $11.50 to $11.75 for the ewes, with bucks $2.00 a cwt. lower. There are few breeding ewes to be had, and the inquiry is persistent at 7 to 8 cents a pound.

Hogs were quoted steady yesterday at $9.25 a cwt. f.o.b. The shipments are not increasing, and sellers are expecting a higher market.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, October 2 (Canadian Press). — Owing to the fact that foreign buyers have not responded to the late advance in prices for Canadian grain recorded here, exporters have found it impossible to do any business of importance.

On the other hand, a fair amount of business is being done in American grades of wheat and oats by some Canadian exporters owing to the prices being lower than Canadian. The trade in cash grain was also quiet. Canadian Western grades of oats moved up another 3 cents per bushel yesterday.

There was no further change in the condition of the local flour situation for spring wheat grades, but the undertone was firm.

The export trade was quiet on account of the fact that British importers are not buying at the prices prevailing. Prices were well maintained for winter wheat flour, with a fair amount of business passing.

A moderate amount of trade was done in lines of millfeed for domestic account, and prices ruled steady. A firm tone prevailed in standard grades of rolled oats.

There was no change in prices for old crop hay and business was extremely quiet.

The volume of business in eggs was large and the trend was firmer, but no actual change of prices occurred. The undertone to the butter market was reported a trifle easier owing to the lull in demand from all sources for supplies.

Owing to the demand from British importers being very small for cheese yesterday, an easier feeling developed in this direction.

WINNIPEG LIVE STOCK.

WINNIPEG, October 2 (Canadian Press). — Livestock arrivals: 1,095 cattle, 119 calves, 1,291 hogs, and 534 sheep and lambs.

Trading on the cattle market yesterday morning held fairly steady with Tuesday, while the market generally was more active, there was no improvement in prices. Calves were $1.00 lower, with top prices at $5.00.

The sheep and lamb market held firm, with top quality lambs at $10.50 to $11.00, and sheep from $5.00 to $7.00.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, October 2 (Canadian Press). — Heavy selling to realise profits achieved during the recent big advance held down the wheat market yesterday, despite new top record quotations on rye and notwithstanding further slashing of estimates of the world supply of wheat.

The close in the wheat market was easy at the same as yesterday's finish to 3-8c lower, December 141 1-2 to 141 5-8 and May 146 7-8 to 147, with corn varying from 1-2 cents decline to 1 cent gain; oats 2 to 2 3-8 cents up; and provisions 5 cents off to 15 to 17 cents advance.

Although price declines in the wheat market brought about liberal fresh buying, the market showed an evident tendency to react whenever values bulged. Chiefly on the downturns, export business developed and it was said 2,000,000 bushels of wheat and 1,000,000 bushels of rye were taken yesterday for shipment to Europe. Meanwhile a report from the United States Department of Agriculture was current which figured the world supply of wheat as 600,000,000 bushels to 685,000,000 bushels, as compared with the probable requirements of 610,000,000 bushels to 715,000,000 bushels.

Something of an offset was an unofficial estimate here that the total domestic yield of wheat is 866,000,000 bushels against the Government estimate of 834,000,000 bushels a month ago.

"Child's Eyelids Inflamed Stuck Together and Bled"

Mr. E. P. Kimball, Entwhistle, Alta., writes:

"Our little girl from birth was troubled with inflamed eyelids and in spite of several remedies, grew worse until at the age of sixteen months her eyes could not be opened after sleep without bleeding, a waxy discharge sticking the lids together and adhering with great tenacity. The child's grandmothers were consulted by mail, and both responded with a little sample box of Dr. Chase's Ointment. These were used as directed, and lasted until we could obtain a further supply from Edmonton. Improvement was very marked from the first application. The waxy discharge was easier removed and did not reappear. Inflammation subsided and has not returned."

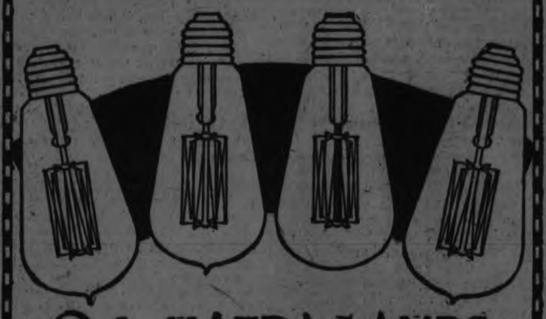
ELECTRIC "BULBS" MAY LOOK ALIKE, BUT—



Only MAZDA LAMPS Can Give You the Best Results

"I WANT SOME BULBS." How often this request is made; yet to purchase electric lamps without specifying the make is like buying the proverbial pig in a poke.

For instance, two lamps may look exactly alike, yet one may have a fine film of moisture on the inside, while the other is perfectly dry. The first lamp will have a much shorter life than the dry lamp.

Two gas-filled lamps may look identical, yet one may contain a rare and costly gas known as argon, while the other will be filled with the cheaper and much less efficient, nitrogen.

By always specifying Edison Mazda Lamps, you are assured of receiving the latest scientific development in incandescent lighting.

Near you is an Edison Mazda Lamp store, recognizable by the yellow and blue cartoon. There you will obtain real information about good lighting.

Kellogg's Bran delights father by bringing health to children

Poor little kiddies—they needed bran badly. But they wouldn't eat ordinary brans. They didn't like them. Most folks don't. Then their father tried Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled. What a difference! He tells the story in his letter:

"Dear Sirs:
I wish to express my appreciation of your Krumbled Bran, which I have used for my children this summer We had a great deal of trouble with them through constipation, and bran had been the most satisfactory remedy but they could not be induced to take the old varieties . . . because they disliked them so. They enjoy the Krumbled Bran and consider it an essential ingredient of their porridge. No one whose children have not been troubled in this way can appreciate the relief there is in having their bowels move regularly."

(Name and address on request.)

Constipation is a dangerous disease. It should not be neglected. But do not try halfway measures in seeking relief. Kellogg's Bran is ALL bran. And it takes ALL bran to be 100% effective. Kellogg's Bran is guaranteed to bring permanent relief, if eaten regularly, in the most chronic cases. If it fails, your grocer will return your money.

Eat two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. Eat it with milk or cream. The flavor is delicious. Sprinkle it on other cereals. Cook it with hot cereals. Try it in the recipes on every package. It will bring you health. Begin eating it to-day. Made in Toronto, Canada. Sold by all grocers.

THE DEAD REMOVED.

Cemetery Board at Downeyville Made Good Job of Old Cemetery.

DOWNEYVILLE, Oct. 1.— The members of the Cemetery Board met and decided to look after the old cemetery just west of the village, which has been neglected for the past years since the new cemetery was started. A great number of the dead have been removed, but a large number are there still and all the men of the parish with a large number of teams, worked all last week and did a splendid work removing all the old roots and large trees which were thick in the cemetery. The roots were blown out by blasting powder and drawn away. The cemetery now is a credit to the parish and the people are to be congratulated on the excellent work done by Rev. Father Galvin, Messrs. Jas. Carroll, Patrick Harrington, D. M. Costello, M. D. Harrington and John McGuire and others.

A School Fair.

The Downeyville school fair was held on Tuesday in the school grounds and was largely attended. There was a splendid display of everything, fruits vegetables, cooking and fancy work. There were races of different kinds for the children and the parades of the five schools, S.S. No. 6 won first prize, Miss Ruby Perdue as teacher, a speech on forest fires prevention by Master Carl Collins, also of S. S. No. 6, won first prize. The driving contest was very interesting, the winners were: Girls: First Rose Costello, second Violet Duffy, and boys, first Paul O'Neill, second Clarence Lynch.

Miss Rose Costello had twenty-eight exhibits and won 18 first prizes, which was deserving of much credit.

At King's Wharf.

Mr. Chas. Logan, who lives north of the boundary on the Bobcaygeon road, is at present erecting the pens for a fox farm on his ranch. He has it nearly completed and will move the foxes from his farm to the ranch about the last of the month. He had good luck with them last year and intends to keep at it as it pays, he says. A number of other residents intend going into the fox farming in the same district.

The heavy frosts of a few nights ago did serious damage to gardens, corn and late buckwheat. It withered everything and the farmers are now cutting their corn, which is only a fair crop. Buckwheat is good in some places. Mr. T. F. Crowley threshed last week what grew on two acres and it yielded 50 bushels to the acre. He had 100 bushels off the two acres.

Caverley, who sentenced Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb, confessed kidnappers and slayers of Robert Franks, to life imprisonment, has been a closely guarded patient in the hospital here since the close of the case, says to-day's Chicago Tribune, although Mrs. Caverley denies that the Judge is sick, and says she has been going to the hospital to visit friends.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Post-Nuptial Reception At Highland Farm — School Fair Postponed Until Friday.

MILLBROOK, October 1. — Mrs. William Whitfield Kennedy (nee Anna Russell) held her post-nuptial reception at "Highland Farm," south of the village, on Thursday afternoon, a large number from Millbrook and vicinity taking advantage of the opportunity to call upon the bride in her new home.

Wearing her dainty wedding-gown of white kitten's ear crepe, with pearl trimming, Mrs. Kennedy received her guests in the cosy and attractive living room and was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. H. Russell. Later in the afternoon, Miss Alberta Russell, the bride's sister, also gave assistance in greeting the numerous guests.

Miss Olive Elson attended the door, and the tea room was in charge of Mrs. W. E. Russell, who poured tea, Mrs. H. Argue, the bride's sister-in-law, Miss Ella Elson, and Miss Marguerite Russell.

The callers seemed naturally to gravitate toward the bright wood fires which burned in the open fireplaces both in the reception room and dining room, the rather crisp air out of doors making the warmth most welcome. A few beautiful bouquets of fall flowers added their touch of brightness to the char ing home.

The weather, which was most favorable, doubtless had a share in making it possible for the bride's large circle of friends and acquaintances to be present and offer greetings during her reception afternoon.

The School Fair.

Owing to the heavy rain on Monday the rural school fair for Millbrook and vicinity was postponed until Friday, October 3rd, when through the kindness of the officers and directors of the Millbrook Agricultural Society, it will be held in conjunction with the annual fall fair under the auspices of that organization.

The rural fair for North Cavan, which should have been held at Ida on Tuesday, was unavoidably postponed, until Wednesday, October 1, because of the very unfavorable weather.

NOTED SPEAKER TO VISIT HERE

Dr. F. H. Taylor Will Preach In Two Local Churches

Thirty-four years ago, a young doctor, after a brilliant course at the London University, England, went out to China at the call of God, as a medical missionary. He was appointed to Honan, a province larger than England, with a population of nearly forty millions, among whom he was the first, and for some years, the only foreign doctor. This missionary was F. Howard Taylor, M.D., M.R.C.P., F.R.C.S., B.S., a son of the late Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, the Founder of the China Inland Mission.

In those early days of medical work in the province of Honan, one of the doctor's patients was the mother of the distinguished statesman, who afterwards became the first President of China. He was then an Ambassador to Korea from the Court of Pekin. Being very desirous to show his gratitude for Dr. Howard Taylor's services, he requested the world-famous Li Hung-chang, who was in high office at the time, to present the young medical missionary with a tablet signed with his own name. This was done, much to the delight of Dr. Taylor's Chinese friends, who thoroughly appreciated the beautiful tablet with its large gold characters, and signature of China's then Prime Minister.

The medical work was always made secondary to the preaching of the glorious Gospel of Redeeming Love. Many heard of the Lord Jesus Christ in the waiting room or dispensary, for the first time—an experience that even to-day, in the year 1924, is frequntly the case in work in China. As the door of opportunity was opened more widely, a sudden change came over the scene. A terrible riot took place, when lives were nearly lost, but in answer to prayer, this apparent set-back was overruled for greater blessing. No claim was made for the losses, which included the doctor's instruments and medicines—a serious loss indeed in the heart of China in those days—the whole matter was simply committed to God, and earnest prayer was offered that He would undertake, and so turn the hearts of the people that there might be better openings for the Gospel in the days to come. How fully those prayers were answered, can be plainly seen in the wonderful opportunities that, in spite of all the present grave lawlessness, are an outstanding feature of the work-to-day.

The missionaries soon returned to the field—their temporary leaving was caused by personal injuries and serious damage to the house they called their home. But their return was different from their hurried departure! The gentry of the city were so much impressed by the forbearance of the missionaries that they wrote a united letter courteously inviting them to come back, in which they promised that no further trouble of this sort should ever occur again. They repaired to the house, and six weeks after the riot, when the missionary party returned, it seemed as if the whole city had turned out to welcome them; there were banners, flags, trumpets, and feasting. From that time the work went forward, and in 1900, when the Boxer troubles came with such tragic results, that mission station was protected by the gentry, according to their promise, although the missionaries had again to leave for a time.

Great changes have taken place in China since those days. In order to know the actual conditions that prevail, Dr. and Mrs. Taylor recently undertook to revisit the field, and spent three years in their investigations. Their journey took them west to the borders of Mongolia and Tibet, and into fifteen provinces. It was a wonderful experience, and it appeared as if they would complete the task without any great difficulty. But, just before they reached the railway, suddenly, within one day's journey of the terminus, they were carried off by brigands in Southwest China. The story of those long weeks that followed—after Mrs. Taylor had been set at liberty—while Dr. Taylor remained in the hands of that desparate band, constantly threatened with death, cannot be told in a few words. The thrilling events that followed in rapid succession, have been published in Mrs. Howard Taylor's book, "With Piu and His Brigands."

The China Inland Mission of which Dr. Taylor is a member, is, as its name indicates, specially interested in inland China. It has been a pioneer in many provinces. When Hudson Taylor faced the question of carrying the Gospel to the interior of the land, eleven great inland provinces were fast closed, and their many millions had never heard the name of Christ. Those provinces are now widely open, and many have heard the Good Tidings. But while the China Inland Mission has been privileged to be a pioneer in many provinces, it has warmly welcomed the entrance of other Missionary Boards into territory so vast, and so spiritually needy. China is not yet evangelized. There are many millions who have not heard of Him who is The Way, The Truth, and The Life. In addition to this, there are special classes in China still untouched, for whom the Word of God has not yet been translated; the Tribespeople in such districts are still waiting for the Light. The Moslem population in China—exceeding as it does the total population of Canada—is without one missionary free to devote his or her whole time to this difficult but promising work.

For many months, Dr. and Mrs. F. Howard Taylor have been speaking on behalf of China, and on both sides of the Atlantic many have heard their inspiring messages. From their personal experiences they have a rich store of facts concerning China, the power of the Gospel in that land, and concerning the present opportunity that calls for earnest prayer, and consecrated lives. Mrs. Taylor is now engaged in the preparation of another missionary biography, but Dr. Howard Taylor is, by special request, visiting several important centres, and speaking in the different Churches. All interested in the evangelization of China are invited to attend the meetings arranged locally. Dr. Taylor will preach in St. Paul's Church Sabbath morning, Oct. 5, and in the evening in All Saints' Church. He will lecture on the Monday evening following in St. Paul's on "With the Brigands in China."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

CHRISTIAN CHARACTER.

As we go through life and watch the development of character in the lives of God's afflicted yet trusting children, we cannot help but feel that He is more concerned about that development of character than He is for their present enjoyment or happiness. It makes one's heart ache sometimes to see the crushing weight of sorrows they try to hide and yet bear with a smile often because they are too noble, too loyal to speak to another of the things which are weighing them down. Perhaps it is selfishness and lack of thought in their children or in their partner who allows them to bear the heavy end of the load, with little or no concern, having no eyes to see the drooping shoulders and saddened eyes, but whatever it is we may be sure of this that the selfish one gets daily farther from God and from nobleness of life, while the unselfish one gets daily more refined, more sweet, more patient, more kind and sympathetic, more pure and unworldly. One of the most beautiful women I ever met had a husband as unlike her as a vulture is unlike a dove, but what a beautiful character she was. I never heard her complain about him, and never heard her say one unkind word about a single soul, all the things which hurt her she must have taken to God and left them there, and the patience and goodness and glory of heaven was reflected in her face. But oh what years of quiet suffering she had passed through in order to be what she was. My mind travels back over the years and calls to mind another brave, patient face and noble character, this time a man. His wife died in her early thirties, leaving him with three motherless children. How well I remember his quiet, pale face as he used to pass our home on the Sunday afternoon with his children on his way to the village church, and on his way home would sometimes come in to see mother, who was his dead wife's sister. Forty years have passed, and he is still a widower, faithful to her in death as in life. I never remember hearing him complain, but one look at his strong, yet sometimes quivering face, and you know he suffered alone, yet believed in God. Truly all God's works show forth His praise; but let us bow our heads in reverence when such as these pass by, for they are His masterpieces, something which has cost Him great pain to produce. Truly God sits as a Refiner and suffers with His children as they pass through the furnace of seven-fold heat. But we may rest assured His gold shall not suffer a bit more heat than is needed to make it pure.

The fastest-cooking cereal

COLDER weather calls for hot breakfasts. Now, you can prepare a steaming cereal every morning in 3 to 5 minutes. Quick Quaker cooks perfectly while you make the coffee.

Quick Quaker is just as delicious and flavoury as the regular Quaker Oats you have always known. It is just as wholesome and nourishing. It is packed in the same sealed cartons.

The only difference is that in Quick Quaker, the grains are cut in two, rolled thinner and partly cooked before packing. Because of this, it cooks perfectly in less time than it takes to boil coffee or fry eggs.

Your grocer has both kinds of Quaker Oats now. Get whichever kind you prefer. Look for the picture of the Quaker on each package.

BOYS' WORK BOARD HOLD CONFERENCE

Representatives From All Parts of the District Were Present at Meeting.

A very enthusiastic meeting was held in the Y.M.C.A. on Monday evening last, when it was decided that the time was ripe to hold an area boys' work conference in Peterbrugh. Representatives were present from nearly every church in the city and from Warsaw, Cobourg and Havelock in the district. Mr. Charles Plewman, of the Ontario Boys' Work Board, was present in his capacity as secretary of that body. The Ministerial Association was well represented.

After the plan of organization, together with the purpose and policy of the proposed conference had been dealt with by Mr. Plewman, the decision as to the conference was strongly endorsed by those present. October 31, November 1 and 2 were decided upon as dates wherein the conference could be put across in a worth-while way. In view of the great need of leaders for boys' groups in the churches today the conference will stress "Leadership" and its theme, and it will only accept as delegates older boys and present or prospective leaders of boys' groups.

The following conference officers were appointed:

Neil Porter—Chairman of Conference committee.

Trevor Miller— Secretary-Treasurer.

W. J. Hamilton —Chairman of Billeting committee.

F. G. McNeely—Chairman Promotion committee.

Harry Taylor—Chairman Reception committee.

Reg. Cuffe—Chairman Committee on Arrangements.

A. J. McLeish—Chairman of Recreation committee.

Arrangements are in hand to take care of 225 delegates who will arrive in time for the opening session on Friday evening and who will leave Monday morning.

JOHN ROWETT DEAD.

Financier of Expedition To Antarctic In 1921 Found Dead.

LONDON, October 2. — Canadian Press Cable. — John Quiller Rowett, well known in business and financial circles to the general public and best known as the man who financed the last expedition of Sir Ernest Shackleton, the noted explorer, to the Antarctic, in 1921-1922, was found dead in his London residence to-day.

MURDER TRIAL

accused, if it was he, who loaded the revolver, showed voluntary intent, contrary to the symptom of lack of purpose found in the sufferer from catatonic dementia precox.

McGaughey maintained his graven attitude in the face of friendly and adverse criticism alike. Among all the exhibits of bloodstained clothing bullets and other mute evidences, of the crime, McGaughey was as silent as any. He was his own silent witness and with his downbent head and stopped shoulders, he was centre around which the argument and counter argument waged throughout the three hours of Dr. Armour's testimony this morning. As usual, he arose immediately the gate of the dock was opened and walked voluntarily back to his cell.

His fate will be put in the hands of the jury this evening and the verdict will probably be reached to-night.

A pathetic figure in the court room again to-day was Helen Stewart, the winsome slip of a girl who was plunged into the midst of tragedy so early in life. With her child ishly innocent face framed in dark bobbed hair that curled coquettishly around her eyes, she sat almost as immovable as the accused, ready again if called up to reaffirm her story of the dreadful night. So eloquent and heartrending was her rendition of the history of the tragedy that her entry into court, still has a potency to touch the hearts of those who heard it.

Spectators who had brought their lunches to eat in the court room intending to remain the day, were disappointed when His Lordship ordered the constables to clear the room so that it might be aired. No one slept in the court last night, but it was crowded early this morning. Act from the City of Peterboro.

The evening closed with a dance, patronised by a large number of people.

LETTER THROWS LIGHT ON CASE

Ottawa Veteran, Unable To Continue the Fight With a Cruel, Hard World.

OTTAWA, October 2 (Canadian Press). — John Buchanan Pirie, bookkeeper for the Ottawa Electric and Gas Company, who yesterday walked into the Police Station and announced that he murdered his wife and two children, had in his pocket the following letter, which shows that he evidently intended to end his own life as well as take those of his wife and children:

The letter reads in part as follows:

To the authorities:

This reason for these crimes is just that I have absolutely lost all hope, disabled as I am I cannot do any work, as far as I can see I am a complete failure.

After serving my country for 20 years and getting disabled doing it, find that I can no longer fight the apparently impossible, and rather than see my wife and children starving and absolutely lacking the necessities of life, and allowing my children to grow up handicapped by my inability to clothes and feed them I have decided to cut the slow torture of living short.

My wife has been absolutely splendid, and I ask you to communicate with her sister, whose name is Mrs. Daking, Weybridge, Surrey, England.

My relatives will have no interest in my death, but it may be communicated to Paymaster Captain Green, Officers' Friend, Ministry of Pensions, London England which Ministry seems to think that a man suffering from disabilities can exist on £84 per annum after giving 20 years of my life to the country and getting disabled doing it it seems a pretty hard proposition to only get $374.00 per year for it.

Another factor is that the only employment I obtained since being retired from the Army was as a ledgerkeeper at a starvation wage.

I am sorry for my numerous creditors but had I been given the opportunity to make good, I would would have done so. But there was no business man who would try me, as I had no experience, and did not put the chance of gaining experience in my way. Consequently I have had to take this apparently cowardly way out, but when a man experiences rebuff after rebuff his fighting power vanishes, even when he is 100 per cent. man, which I am not.

I have been attempting to be a salesman, but I have had the certainty forced upon me that a salesman must be physically fit, and despite the fact that I worked hard as a salesman I made no success of the work.

I am not insane, although my actions would make it appear so, and the worries I have shouldered of recent years were of sufficient magnitude to drive me to that condition.

I regret being the cause of so much unexpected and repugnant work, but I find it too expensive to live, and too risky for my wife and family for me to die and leave them unprotected and from knowledge of my fellow men my apparent cruelty is kindness compared to leaving unprotected women to them."

Members of Great War Veterans' Association and St. Andrews' Society are, it is stated, engaging prominent lawyer to defend prisoner, when he comes up for preliminary hearing next Wednesday. Pirie, who was a long time captain in Royal Air Force and who suffered severe injuries in an airplane smash during the war, will be closely watched day and night at the county jail, extra precautions having been taken to have him constantly guarded. It has been determined that Mrs. Pirie was slain by heavy blow on back of right side of skull, Dr. C. J. McPherson and Coroner Dr. J. E. Craig, after working for several hours, were forced to admit that two little girls came to their deaths by inhaling some strange drug which is so far unidentified.

Pirie was a medical student before, joining imperial army in which he served for twenty years. He has dabbled in medicine all his life and is believed by The Examiner to have studied the various drugs common to orient during twelve years he spent in India as member of British army.

SYDNEY H. JONES TRIAL NEAR END

Jones Will Complete the Defence Witnsses When He Is Placed on the Stand To-morrow.

TORONTO, Oct. 2 — (Canadian Press). — The trial of Sydney H. Jones, Home Bank auditor, on charges of making false statements of the condition of the bank, will be concluded to-morrow. Major A. E. Nash, chartered accountant, whose evidence for the Crown was completed this morning, is the last witness for the prosecution. When his cross-examination has been finished by R. H. Greer, defence counsel, this afternoon, the accused will be put in the stand in his own defence. With some witnesses giving character evidence, Jones' own evidence will complete the case for the defence. The legal argument will be heard to-morrow.

Major Nash this morning gave elaborate details of the Home Bank accounts and traced them through the books of the head office to the departments and branches in which they originated. He said that the amount of interest which had been charged up to the accounts and not paid amounted to $575,837 for the year ending May 31st, 1922, and to $801,724 for the year ending May 31, 1923. He said that the auditor's balance sheet was not made in accordance with the books of the bank in some particulars. Accrued interest in the Toronto branch was shown in public statement as call loans, which was not correct, said Major Nash. The contingent account from the Toronto office was shown in the annual or public statement as deposits, and this was not correct, said witness. The annual statement did not show an announcement of bad or doubtful debts. Witness said the form of the yearly balance sheet was substantially correct but the substance was wrong.

"Does it give a correct statement of the position of the bank?" asked Mr. McCarthy.

"No, it does not," replied witness.

ARBITRATION WAS APPROVED TO-DAY

Forty-Seven Nations Unanimously Approved the League's Arbitration.

GENEVA, Oct. 2—(United Press) —Representatives of forty-seven nations unanimously approved the League of Nations, arbitration, security and disarmament protocle today and six signed immediately on behalf of their governments. France was the first to sign the protocol, which her spokesmen declared had marked the end of the war. Poland, Latvia, Esthonia, Bulgaria and Serbia also signed. In the closing debate, speakers declared that once the covenant providing for compulsory arbitration and reduced armaments should be ratified and put into effect, the next project would be an economic protocol to remove the causes of war.

EVANGELISTS ACQUITTED.

Verdict of Not Guilty Returned By Supreme Court.

SARNIA, Oct. 2. — (Canadian Press).—A verdict of not guilty was returned by the Supreme Court jury late yesterday afternoon in the case of George and Roma Garner, American evangelists, charged with the desecration and theft of sacred hosts from St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church here.

The jury was an hour and a half in reaching its verdict, upon which Mr. Justice Rose offered no comment, and merely discharged the two accused. Many Port Huron friends of the evangelists gathered round to offer congratulations, but there was no demonstration and the party left at once for Port Huron. "This is a pretty horrible act of sacrilege, an act that positively made me shudder during the hearing of this case," stated Justice H. E. Ross, in opening his address to the jury. His Lordship spoke for more than thirty minutes, and his charge to the jury was a very impartial review of the salient points of the evidence.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: Women have got to begin their struggle for liberty all over again. The preachers who preached most of woman's emancipation turned them down when it came to interference in the churches. As voters, to enable these preachers to get their claws on the liberties of the people by means of social service, in lieu of the Bible, now discarded, women were to be the admirers and servants of the preachers, and now the preachers have turned them down!

Women got their freedom, and then began to deprive the decent citizen of his by forcing Prohibition on him.

"What are national rights, or any other kind of rights in the face of the public interest?" women cried. And now the preache s say the same and that it is not in the public interests that the rights of women in churches should be allowed. Have women our sympathy? They have not. They are only getting now what they have been giving to others. Just keep up Prohibition as a principle of human conduct and your rights will end at the cradle and the dishpan—in the public interest! See?

Once the principle of freedom and personal responsibility is ignored anything may happen, and women are now learning it. It is a rude awakening and an unhappy one, by, but, O women—what are women's rights in the face of the public interest!

PURITY DEFENCE LEAGUE.
Advt. 1d79 3678

The Editor, The Examiner:

Sir,—I accept your suggestion, that this letter should bring to a close, the controversy with Mr. Gordon, and at the same time I desire to express you my most hearty thanks for the valuable space you have so generously placed at my disposal. When I replied to Mr. Gordon's first letter, I had no intention of going into any lengthy discussion over the matter, you have done me the honor of giving me the opportunity of showing that 'the service of Gordon is the service of himself and of Gordon alone.'

I have endeavoured at all times to touch on matters of public interst and deep concern to the welfare of this city and county, I wish to state that I stand by my former letters and that my remarks were all true and I don't retract in any way, as Mr. Gordon is a public man, paid by the public and is entitled to be criticized on public matters.

I again wish to thank you for your valuable space.

Yours truly,
ROLAND DENNE.

Oct. 2nd, 1924.

Sept. 30th, 1924.

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I am willing to accept your suggestion that the correspondence cease with this letter. It occurred to me some time ago as hardly fair to the Examiner, that it should pay type setters, proof readers, and for the space that it has been taking to conduct this controversy. However, I might say to you briefly that what I sought to do was to defend myself against an attack Mr. Denne made at Norwood when he said I was to blame for the whole re-distribution situation.

I told the public by a letter to the Examiner, in reply, that it was the Conservative party who introduced the plan, and that Mr. Meighen and every Conservative, except one, voted for it, and insisted upon the re-distribution being carried out according to their ideas, which were directly the opposite to Mr. Denne's plan.

Further than that, I said that the Government accepted the Conservative plan of re-distribution in this county and in the adjacent ones, and it was agreed to in that way.

Surely I have the right to object to Mr. Denne's one-sided mis-statement, of my responsibility, for I never even voted for this plan of re-distribution, but was chairman of the committee of the whole House.

You can appreciate that when I was charged so unjustly and unfairly, that no man in his right senses would permit that to go unchallenged, and because I insisted upon standing up for my rights, I have been subjected to all the abuse and virulent violence of a scalp-hunter.

Yours truly,
G. N. GORDON.

Small Boy Took Fire Box For Letter Box and Sent In Alarm.

MONTREAL, October 2. — "I thought it was a letter box," said a small boy yesterday evening when firemen rushed to an alarm box which had sent in a call. The little boy held up the letter as a guarantee of good faith. The firemen gave him a good talking to and let it go at that.

INDIA THREATENS TO LEAVE BRITAIN

Bengal Leads Movement For Home Rule—Has Record For Assassination and Bomb-Throwing.

By CLIFFORD DAY.

LONDON, Oct. 2.—(United Press).—Everything looks ripe for a spell of disorderly liveliness down Bengal way, something along the lines of an old-fashioned Irish Easter.

Bengal has a worse record for assassination and bomb-throwing than any other province in India, and Bengal is in the van of the fire-eating element that is out for a United States of India.

Throughput the summer, the trouble-makers have remained comparatively dormant. But three sets of foreign world-fliers having now finished putting the country back on the map, the home-rule advocates are again busy.

C. R. Das, India's DeValera, continues at the head of the independence-seeking Swarajists. He definitely took over the leadership from Gandhi, the champion of passive resistance, at the Ahmedabad conference some time ago.

A recent Calcutta demonstration was punctuated by fiery speeches of the old-time variety, the kind that were spell-binded in the pre-Gandhi days. Some of the harranguing was extremely inflammatory. A "Red Bengal" leaflet was distributed, demanding the shedding of "oceans of blood" by political assassination.

English observers see an ominous likeness between the present excitement and the furore aroused after the partition of Bengal. Now, as in 1907, the goddess Kali, grim personification of the destructive forces of tropical nature, is invoked as the patroness of political crime.

Lord Curzon, the late Foreign Minister before Ramsay MacDonald, has told the House of Lords that he sees in Bengal a revival of the old revolutionary party. Their methods, he said, are assassination, barbarism and terrorism, and they "are tearing at the foundations of our rule." Premier MacDonald let it be known shortly after coming into office that "no party in Great Britain would be cowed by threats of force or by a policy of bringing the Government to a standstill."

The Swarajist chieftain Das disclaims being a believer in violence, but admits that unless Britain accedes to his demands, violence is very likely throughout India. He wants a "United States in India as a fully-fledged dominion within the British Empire." Vowing wreckage on the reformed constitution the Empire has given India, he swears he and his followers" will destroy this sham constitution in every province."

It looks like a fight to a finish between diarchy and anarchy. Das wants a round-table conference with the London officials, to put India on the new United States status. And, he adds, unless something is done about it right away, India will be drenched and ablaze in anarchism.

Das says that there "undoubtedly" is an anarchist movement in Bengal, "and a much more serious anarchist movement than the authorities realize. It is growing increasingly difficult to suppress it. If the Swarajist movement fails, no repression can possibly cope with the anarchy which is sure to raise its head, and violence and disorder will reign supreme."

The statement is regarded with all the more significance in London because, in swearing to expose "the sham of these so-called reforms, Das added that he would "consider no method too mean to prove their meanness."

Das objects not only to British participation in the direct government of India, but also to the communal system of representation under the reforms. Through this system, special constituencies have been created for communities which might be outvoted and therefore remain unheard in constituencies based on territorial representation.

With anarchy forecast on one side and civil war threatened on the other, the Empire authorities seem faced with the necessity of resorting to the mailed fist if both the "devil and the deep blue sea" are to be avoided.

A Crash of Quiet!

"And then—quiet crashed in", said a soldier, describing the sudden stillness in the trenches when gunfire ceased on Armistice Day, 1918.

Similarly, when Remington Noiseless typewriters are first installed in offices accustomed to the rattle and bang of old fashioned machines, the quietness startles.

But it does more than startle—it delights both business executives and stenographers and enables them to do more work with less fatigue.

THE DISARMAMENT PROTOCOL ADOPTED

Forty-Seven Nations Voted at League Assembly To-day.

By Henry Wood.
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

GENEVA, Oct. 2.—The Assembly of the League of Nations—with 47 nations voting—unanimously adopted with the disarmament protocol to-day.

Spokesmen for all the leading powers have pledged support of the project when it comes up for ratification by governments and parliaments. Many hailed the protocol as bringing an end to war.

By adopting the protocol of arbitration, security and disarmament, the Assembly summoned a reduction of armaments conference to meet at Geneva next June. The United States will be invited to send representatives.

The Moderation League of Ontario

President, Mr. I. F. Hellmuth, K.C.

THERE has never been in Ontario a more popular cause than the Moderation League's fight against compulsory prohibition.

No political party has ever had as large a following.

Indications are that on the 23rd of October next the largest poll this Province has ever known will be cast.

These indications also point to the overwhelming defeat of compulsory prohibition.

But between now and 23rd October much has to be done to make this victory a certainty.

Money and service are urgently needed.

The canvassing and registration of voters, the organizing of meetings, and publicity cost large sums.

The Moderation League of Ontario needs the help of every citizen who desires the life of his Province to be characterised by temperance and toleration.

Bonds will be sold, the proceeds of which are to be used to enable the League to carry on the campaign.

Bonds are in denominations of $1.00, $5.00 and $10.00.

Your pleasure in the victory will be made the sweeter in proportion to what you yourself have done to achieve it.

Do not let the other fellow do it all. Besides, your help is imperative.

Clip off and mail the attached coupon. Any money you send will be spent in your own district.

OMEMEE WOMEN HELD MEETING

Missionary Auxiliary of Christ Church—Young People's League

HARVEST FESTIVAL.

OMEMEE, October 1. — The Women's Missionary Auxiliary of Christ Church met on Thursday afternoon in the rectory. It was the first meeting of the fall season. The opening exercises were conducted by the president, Mrs. (Rev.) Weir, after which several interesting papers were given. Miss Edith Curry read Miss Cartwright's address which was given at the annual meeting. Miss E. Cornwall read an interesting article on the work of a Hamilton lady, who has been doing mission work among the Indians in Manitoba for twenty-five years, teaching school and making her home in a small lean-to built near the school.

Miss Edith Robinson gave an account of the work done by the Auxiliary during the year. The various readings were interspersed with bright missionary hymns.

It was unanimously decided to send for the new study book, "The Church and the Newcomer."

Mr. Wilfred Andrews, of Toronto, formerly of Omemee, was in the village last week completing arrangements for a moving picture show to be held on Tuesday night. Mr. Andrews' plans are to hold one here each week.

Field Day.

Attractive announcements of the Omemee High School Field Day, which is to be held next Friday afternoon, have been placed in the store windows. The first event, basketball, will be called at one o'clock, and will take place on the school grounds, after which the students will march to the Athletic Grounds, where a big programme of sports will be held.

Young People's League.

Monday night was Citizenship Night in the Young People's League. The meeting was in charge of the citizenship vice-president, Mr. Vernon Lang, who conducted the meeting in his usual efficient manner. Mr. Johson led in the responsive reading of the 37th Psalm. Mr. Harry Jackson, of East Emily, gave a most convincing address on the temperance question, having with him literature put out by the Moderation League, and also facts and figures to prove that Government control does not better, but makes much worse, conditions wherever it has been tried out. Several rousing temperance hymns were rendered with enthusiasm by the Leaguers.

It was unanimously agreed that the League bear half the expense of a new set of Canadian hymnals, recently purchased by the Sunday School. The singing of the National Anthem brought to a close an interesting and profitable meeting.

Harvest Home.

The annual harvest home thanksgiving services were held in Christ Church on Sunday morning and evening.

The beautiful old church, with its stained glass windows, over which grows English ivy and Virginia creeper vines, gave evidence of a very bountiful harvest. The interior decorations were carried out in the products of the season. The baptismal font was banked with fruit, vagetables, and flowers. Each pew was tied with a miniature sheaf of oats, and three coloured asters, the Bible mottos were framed in autumn leaves, etc., and flowers of many colours and varieties were in evidence, while reminding one of the changing seasons, also gave food for though in God's goodness to all.

Rev. Sidney Childs, extension secretary of Trinity College, Toronto, was the special speaker for the day, and delivered very impressive sermons both morning and evening. His text for the evening service was taken from I. Samuel, 6, 13—"And they of Beth-Shemesh were reaping their wheat harvest in the valley; and they lifted up their eyes and saw the ark and rejoiced to see it."

The choir rendered special thanksgiving anthems, and the congregational singing was in harmony with the rest of the service.

Rally Day Services.

Rally Day services were observed in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning. The special order of service, arranged by a joint committee of Sunday School Boards of the Baptist, Congregational, Methodist, and Presbyterian Churches, was followed and proved most interesting to the children as well as the grown-ups. Rev. J. A. Black, the pastor, led the service, and the children who assisted in recitation and Scripture reading were Masters Jamie Mackey and Donald Mahood and Misses Helen Mackey, Emily Mitchell and Lillian Williamson. Many beautiful flowers adorned the church, which seemed to give an added light to the carefully prepared programme.

Mr. Isaiah Moore, who has been suffering from typhoid and pneumonia for the past month, is somewhat improved in health, having this week been able to discharge one nurse.

Among the many from Omemee who attended Bobcaygeon Fair on Friday were Messrs. S. J. Mackey, R. Williamson, Reuben Bradley, R. J. Adams, O. G. Williamson, Thomas Magee, J. Magee, L. Dorell. Mr. and Mrs. H. Lamb, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Mitchell, Mrs. J. J. Magee, W. Douglas, and Misses Edna Morton, Rita Kennedy, and Beryl Hart.

Friends of Mrs. Albert Fee will be sorry to hear that she is suffering from a stroke of paralysis, and although she has regained consciousness, is yet in a very serious condition. Mrs. Fee was telephoning to a neighbour lady when seized with a severe pain in the head, and managed to reach the sofa near by before losing consciousness, in which state she remained several days.

Has Your Husband Got Indigestion?

Nothing creates domestic discord quicker than an attack of indigestion, and nothing gets rid of indigestion quicker than Bisurated Magnesia. No man can be sweet tempered(good natured or even fair minded when his stomach is constantly sick, sour, gassy, and upset with after-eating distress. MARMORA CHURCHES FILLED ON SUNDAY

Rally Day Was Big Success In Village of Marmora.

MARMORA, Oct. 1.—On Sunday the regular Rally Day services were held in the Methodist Sunday School The church had been very prettily decorated by the young ladies class. The autumn leaves and berries form a bright and many coloured background for vases of flowers. The choir gallery and platform presented a beautiful picture to the audience.

The choir was composed of the members of the Thoughtful Worker's Class. The regular Rally Day service was followed throughout but several additions were made.

Mr. James Mullen gave a splendid violin solo. The special recitations for the service were given by Miss Jessie Williams, Miss Myrtle Potts Master Wesley Clare, Master Jim Linn, Master Merney Emmorey and Master Ira Cronbaite

Promotions were made throughout the entire Sunday School. A large attendance was reported and the service was the best Marmora Sunday School has had on Rally Day in years.

At the evening service a fair congregation was present nothwithstanding the inclemency of the weather.

Rev. D R. Clare, B. D. spoke on Defence of the Ontario Temperance Act. His text was taken from St. John 10: 11,12, and 13. The speaker spoke first of the need of leadership in this Temperance campaign. The pastor, is as a shepherd to his people, to lead in the right way.

The Moderation League had first used the expression, Government control on their literature, but as the O.T.A. was under Government Control they had to change the expression to Government Sale of Liquor.

By means of a number of charts, the speaker presented some starting facts.

Some of these were:

(1) From 1913-1922—In Saskatchewan crimes associated with drink declined 74 per cent. These were the years of prohibition.

(2) —In Toronto, drunkenness declines 74 per cent in nine years.

(3) —In Toronto, convictions of crimes, associated with liquor per 10,000 of population were over 3 times as many in 1914 under license as in 1922 under O.T.A.

In other words an improvement of 310 per cent .

(4) In Ontario convictions of crimes, associated with liquor, was 58 per 10,000 population under license to 18 in 1922.

(5)—In Canada, the same comparison shows 78 to 10,000 in 1913 to 27 in 1922 under the O.T.A.

(6) Cardinal Begin, Archbishop of Quebec, claims that under Government control, Quebec is very much worse than before.

(7) 21,309 Canadians were kept out of goal by the O.T.A. Three benefits in this (a) It avoids immense expenditure for their maintenance in goal.

(b) It saves 21,309 citizens for home life.

(c) It keeps 21,309 citizens for useful occupations.

(8)—Some facts from British Columbia. The Liquor control Board says the bootlegger provides increasing embarrassment under Government sale. Vancouver police court had 70 bootleggers convicted in a week 1923.

Hon. Stevens, M. P. Vancouver, says you can not sell liquor and control it.

The speaker presented many other facts gleaned from official reports, showing that the O.T.A. has worked nothwithstanding that two different governments had to plan machinery for its enforcement.

He urged the women of the country to study the problem and not be indifferent.

He said he could only lay the facts before the people and the subject was left to their good judgment.

His fears were to be quickened soon on that same score. He was leaning that afternoon upon the rail idly observing the doing out of the rations to the slaves, when Marzak came to join him.

For some moments he stood silently beside Sakr-el-Bahr watching Vigitello and his men as they passed from bench to bench serving out biscuits and fried dates to the rowers—but sparingly, for oars move sluggishly when stomachs are too well nourished—and giving each to drink a cup of vinegar and water in which floated a few drops of added oil.

Then he pointed to a large palmetto bale that stood on the waist-deck near the mainmast about which the powder barrels were stacked.

"That pannier," he said, "seems to me oddly in the way yonder. Were it not better to bestow it in the hold, where it will cease to be an encumbrance in case of action?"

Sakr-el-Bahr experienced a slight tightening at the heart. He knew that Marzak had heard him command that bale to be borne into the poop-cabin, and that anon he had ordered it to be fetched thence when Asad had announced his intention of sailing with him. He realized that this in itself might be a suspicious circumstance; or, rather, knowing what the bale contained he was too ready to fear suspicion. Nevertheless he turned to Marzak with a smile of some disdain.

"I understood, Marzak, that thou art sailing with us as an apprentice.

"What then?" quoth Marzak.

"Why merely that it might become thee better to be content to observe and learn. Thou'lt soon be telling me how grapnels should be slung, and how an action should be fought."

Then he pointed ahead to what seemed to be no more than a low cloud-bank toward which they were rapidly skimming before that friendly wind.

"Yonder," he said, "are the Balearics. We are making good speed."

Although he said it without any object other than that of turning the conversation, yet the fact itself was sufficiently remarkable to be worth a comment. Whether rowed by her two hundred and fifty slaves or sailed under her enormous spread of canvas there was no swifter vessel upon the Mediterranean than the galeasse of Sakr-el-Bahr. Onward she leaped now with bellying lateens, her well-greased keel slipping through the wind-whipped water at a rate which perhaps could not have been bettered by any ship that sailed.

"If this wind holds we shall be under the Point of Aguila before sunset, which will be something to boast of hereafter," he promised.

Marzak, however, seemed but indifferently interested; his eyes continued awhile to stray toward the palmetto bale by the mainmast. At length, without another word to Sakr el-Bahr, he made his way abaft, and flung himself down under the awning, beside his father. Asad sat there in a moody abstraction, already regretting that he should have lent an ear to Fenzileh to the extent of coming upon this voyage, and assured by now that at least there was no cause to mistrust Sakr-el-Bahr. Marzak came to revive that drooping mistrust. But the moment was ill-chosen, and at the first words he uttered on the subject he was growled into silence by his sire.

"Thou dost but voice thine own malice," Asad rebuked him. "And I am proven a fool in that I have permitted the malice of others to urge me in this matter. No more, I say."

Thereupon Marzak fell silent and sulking, his eyes ever following Sakr-el-Bahr, who had descended the three steps from the poop to the gangway and was pacing slowly down between the rowers' benches.

The corsair was supremely ill at ease, as a man must be who has something to conceal, and who begins to fear that he may have been betrayed. Yet who was there could have betrayed him? But three men aboard that vessel knew his secret—Ali, his lieutenant, Jasper, and the Italian Vigitello. And Sakr-el-Bahr would have staked all his possessions that neither Ali nor Vigitello would have betrayed him, whilst he was fairly confident that in his own interests Jasper also must have kept faith. Yet Marzak's illusion to that palmetto bale had filled him with an uncasiness that sent him now in quest of his Italian boatswain whom he trusted above all others.

"Vigitello," said he, "is it possible that I have been betrayed to the Basha?"

Vigitello looked up sharply at the question, then smiled with confidence. They were standing alone by the bulwarks on the waist-deck.

"Touching what we carry yonder?" quoth he, his glance shifting to the bale. "Impossible. If Asad had knowledge he would have betrayed it before we left Algiers, or else he would never have sailed without a stouter bodyguard of his own."

"What need of bodyguard for him?' returned Sakr-el-Bahr. "If it should come to grips between us—as well it may if what I suspect be true—there is no doubt as to the side upon which the corsairs would range themselves."

"Is there not?" quoth Vigitello, a smile upon his swarthy face. I'Be not so sure. These men have most of them followed thee into a score of fights. To them thou art the Basha, their natural leader."

"Maybe. But their allegiance belongs to Asad-ed-Din, the exalted of Allah. Did it come to a choice between us their faith would urge them to stand beside him in spite of any past bonds that may have existed between them and me."

"Yet there were some who murmured when thou wert superseded in the command of this expedition," Vigitello informed him, "I doubt not that many would be influenced by their faith, but many would stand by thee against the Grand Sultan himself. "And do not forget," he added, instinctively lowering his voice, "that many of us are renegadoes like myself and thee, who would never know a moment's doubt if it came to a choice of sides. But I hope," he ended in another tone, "there is no such danger here."

"And so do I, in all faith," replied Sakr-el-Bahr with fervor. "Yet I am uneasy, and I must know where I stand if the worst takes place. Go thou amongst the men, Vigitello, and probe their real feelings, gauge their humor and endeavor to ascertain upon what numbers I may count if I have to declare war upon Asad or if he declares it upon me. Be cautious."

"Depend upon it," he said, "I'll bring you word anon."

On that they parted, Vigitello to make his way to the prow and there engage in his investigations, Sakr-el-Bahr slowly to retrace his steps to the poop. But at the first bench abaft the gangway he paused, and looked down at the dejected, white-fleshed slave who sat shackled there. He smiled cruelly, his own anxieties forgotten in the savor of vengeance.

"So you have tasted the whip already," he said in English. "But that is nothing to what is yet to come. You are in luck that there is a wind today It will not always be so. Soon shall you learn what it was that I endured by your contriving."

Lionel looked up at him with haggard, blood-injected eyes. He wanted to curse his brother, yet was he too overwhelmed by the sense of the fitness of this punishment.

"For myself I care nothing," he replied.

"But you will, sweet brother," was the answer. "You will care for yourself most damnably and pity yourself most poignantly. I speak from experience. 'Tis odds you will not live, and that is my chief regret. I would you had my thews to keep you alive in this floating hell."

"I tell you I care nothing for myself," Lionel insisted. "What have you done with Rosamund?"

"Will it surprise you to learn that I have played the gentleman and married her?" Oliver mocked him.

"Married her?" his brother gasped, blanching at the very thought. "You hound "

"Why abuse me? Could I have done more?" And with a laugh he sauntered on, leaving Lionel to writhe there with the torment of his half-knowledge.

An hour later, when the cloudy outline of the Balearic Isles had acquired density and color, Sakr-el-Bahr and Vigitello met again on the waist-deck, and they exchanged some few words in passing.

"It is difficult to say exactly," the boatswain murmured, "but from what I gather I think the odds would be very evenly balanced, and it were rash in thee to precipitate a quarrel."

"I am not like to do so," replied Sakr-el-Bahr. "I should not be like to do so in any case. I but desired to know how I stand in case a quarrel should be forced upon me." And he passed on.

Yet his uneasiness was no whit allayed; his difficulties were very far from solved. He had undertaken to carry Rosamund to France or Italy; he had pledged her his word to land her upon one or the other shore, and should he fail, she might even come to conclude that such had never been his real intention. Yet how was he to succeed now, since Asad was aboard the galeasse? Must he be constrained to carry her back to Algiers as secretly as he had brought her thence, and to keep her there until another opportunity of setting her ashore upon a Christian country should present itself? That was clearly impracticable and fraught with too much risk of detection. Indeed the risk of detection was very imminent now. At any moment her presence in that pannier might be betrayed. He could think of no way in which to redeem his pledged word. He could but wait and hope, trusting to his luck and to some opportunity which it was impossible to foresee.

And so he paced on alone and very lonely, waiting and praying for a miracle.

CHAPTBR XXIV
THE PANNIER

He was still pacing there when an hour or so before sunset—some fifteen hours after setting out—they stood before the entrance of a long bottle-necked cove under the shadow of the cliffs of Aguila Point on the southern coast of the Island of Formentera. He was rendered aware of this and roused from his abstraction by the voice of Asad calling to him from the poop and commanding him to make the cove.

Already the wind was failing them, and it became necessary to take to the oars, as must in any case have happened once they were through the cove's narrow neck in the becalmed lagoon beyond. So Sakr-el-Bahr, in his turn lifted up his voice, and in answer to his shout came Vigitello and Laroeque.

A blast of Vigitello's whistle brought his own men to heel, and they passed rapidly along the benches ordering the rowers to make ready, whilst Jasper and a half-dozen Moslem sailors set about furling the sails that already were beginning to flap in the shifting and intermittent gusts of the expiring wind. Sakr-el-Bahr gave the word to row, and Vigitello blew a second and longer blast. The oars dipped, the slaves strained and the galeasse plowed forward, time being kept by a boatswain's mate who squatted on the waistdeck and beat a tomtom rhythmically.

Sakr-el-Bahr, standing on the poop-deck, shouted his orders to the steersmen in their niches on either side of the stern, and skilfully the vessel was steered through that narrow passage into the calm lagoon whose depths were crystal clear. Here before coming to rest, Sakr-el-Bahr followed the invariable corsair practice of going about, so as to be ready to leave his moorings and make for the open again at a moment's notice.

She came at last alongside the rocky buttresses of a gentle slope that was utterly deserted by all save a few wild goats browsing near the summit. There were clumps of broom thick with golden flower about the base of the hill. Higher, a few gnarled and aged olive trees reared their gray heads, from which the rays of the westering sun struck a glint as of silver.

Laroeque and a couple of sailors went over the bulwarks on the larboard quarter, dropped lightly to the horizontal shafts of the oars, which were rigidly poised, and walking out upon them gained the rocks and proceeded to make fast the vessel by ropes fore and aft

Sakr-el-Bahr's next task was to set a watch, and he appointed Laroeque sending him to take his station on the summit of the head whence a wide range of view was to be commanded.

Pacing the poop with Marzuk the Basha grew reminiscent of former days when roving the seas as a simple corsair he had used this cove both for purposes of ambush and concealment. There were, he said, few harbors in all the Mediterranean so admirably suited to the corsairs' purpose as this; it was a haven of refuge in case of peril, and an unrivaled lurking-place in which to lie in wait for the prey. He remembered once having lain there with the formidable Dragut-Reis, a fleet of six galleys, their presence entirely unsuspected by the Genoese admiral, Doria, who had passed majestically along with three caravels and seven galleys.

Marzak, pacing beside his father, listened but half-heartedly to these reminiscences. His mind was all upon Sakr-el-Bahr, and his suspicions of that palmetto bale were quickened by the manner in which for the last two hours he had seen the corsair hovering thoughtfully in its neighborhood.

He broke in suddenly upon his father's memories with an expression of what was in his mind.

"The thanks to Allah," he said, "that it is thou who command this expedition, else might this cove's advantages have been neglected."

"Not so," said Asad. "Sakr-el-Bahr knows them as well as I do. He has used this vantage-point aforetime. It was himself who suggested that this would be the very place in which to wait this Spanish craft."

"Yet had he sailed alone I doubt if the Spanish argosy had concerned him greatly. There are other matters on his mind, O my father. Observe him yonder, all lost in thought. How many hours of this voyage has he spent thus. He is a man trapped and desperate. There is some fear rankling in him. Observe him I say."

"Allah pardon thee," said his father, shaking his old head and sighing over so much impetuosity of judgment. "Must thy imagination be for ever feeding on thy malice? Yet I blame not thee, but thy Sicilian mother, who has fostered this hostility in thee. Did she not hoodwink me into making this unnecessary voyage?"

"I see thou hast forgot last night and the Frankish slave-girl," said his son.

"Nay, then thou seest wrong. I have not forgot it. But neither have I forgot that since Allah hath exalted me to be Basha of Algiers. He looks to me to deal in justice. Come, Marzak, set an end to all this. Perhaps tommorrow thou shalt see him in battle, and after such a sight as that never again wilt thou dare say evil of him. Come, make thy peace with him, and let me see better relations betwixt you hereafter."

And raising his voice he called Sakr-el-Bahr, who immediately turned and came up the gangway. Marzak stood by in a sulky mood, with no notion of doing his father's will by holding out an olive branch to the man who was like to cheat him of his birthright 'ere all was done. Yet it was he who greeted Sakr-el-Bahr when the corsair set foot upon the poop.

"Does the thought of the coming fight perturb thee, dog of war?" he asked.

"Am I perturbed, pup of peace?" was the crisp answer.

"It seems so. Thine aloofness, thine abstractions—"

"Are signs of perturbation, dost suppose?"

"Of what else?"

Sakr-el-Bahr laughed.

"Thou'll tell me next that I am afraid. Yet I should counsel thee to wait until thou has smelt blood and powder, and learned precisely what fear is."

The slight altercation drew the attention of Asad's officers who were idling there. Biskaine and some three others Bunged forward to stand behind the loasha, looking on in some amusement, which was shared by him.

"Indeed, indeed," said Asad, laying a hand upon Marzak's shoulder, "his counsel is sound enough. Wait, boy, until thou has gone beside him aboard the infidel, ere thou judge him easily perturbed."

"Dost thou, O my father, join with him in taunting me upon my lack of knowledge. My youth is a sufficient answer. But at least," he added, prompted by a wicked notion suddenly conceived, "at least you can not taunt me with lack of address with weapons."

"Give him room," said Sakr-el-Bahr, with ironical good-humor, "and he will show us prodigies."

Marzak looked at him with narrowing, gleaming eyes.

"Give me a crossbow," he retorted, "and I'll show thee how to shoot," was his amazing boast.

"Thou'lt show him?" roared Asad. "Thou'lt show him!" And his laugh rang loud and hearty.

"Go smear the sun's face with clay, boy."

"Reserve thy judgment, O my father," begged Marzak, with frosty dignity.

"Boy, thou'rt mad Why, Sakr-el-Bahr's quarrel will check a swallow in its flight."

"That is his boast, belike," replied Marzak.

"And what may thine be?" quoth Sakr-el-Bahr. "To hit the Island of Formentera at this distance?"

"Dost dare to sneer at me?" cried Marzak, ruing.

"What daring would that ask?" wondered Sakr-el-Bahr.

"By Allah, thou shalt learn."

"In all humility I await the lesson."

"And thou shalt have it," was the answer viciously delivered.

Marzak strode to the rail.

"Ho there &igitello A cross-bow for me and another for Sakr-el-Bahr."

"An it were not against the Prophet's law to make a wager—" he was beginning when Marzak interrupted him.

"Already should I have proposed one."

"So that," said Sakr-el-Bahr, "thy purse would come to match thine head for emptiness."

Marzak looked at him and sneered. Then he snatched from Vigitello's hands one of the crossbows that he bore and set a shaft to it. And then at last Sakr-el-Bahr was to learn the malice that was at the root of all this odd pretense.

"Look now," said the youth, "There

"Look now," said the youth, "there is on that palmetto bale a speck of pitch scarce larger than the pupil of my eye. Thou'lt need to strain thy sight to see it. Observe how my shaft will find it. Canst thou better such a shot?"

His eyes, upon Sakr-el-Bahr's face, watching it closely, observed the pallor by which it was suddenly overspread. But the corsair's recovery was almost as swift. He laughed, seeming so entirely careless that Marzak began to doubt whether he had paled indeed or whether his own imagination had led him to suppose it.

"Aye, thou'lt choose invisible marks, and wherever the arrow enters thou'lt say 'twas there An old trick, O Marzak. Go cozen women with it.

"Then," said Marzak, "we will take instead the slender cord that binds the bale." And he levelled his bow.

But Sakr-el-Bahr's hand closed upon his arm in an easy yet paralyzing grip.

"Wait," he said, "Thou'lt choose another mark for several reasons. For one I'll not have thy shaft blundering through my oarsmen and haply killing one of them. Most of them are slaves specially chosen for their brawn, and I cannot spare any. Another reason is that the mark is a foolish one. The distance is not more than ten paces. A childish test, which, maybe, is the reason why thou hast chosen it."

Marzak lowered his bow, and Sakr-el-Bahr released his arm. They looked at each other, the corsair supremely master of himself and smiling easily, no faintest trace of the terror that was in his soul showing upon his swarthy, bearded countenance or in his hard pale eyes.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys As You Clean Your Bowels.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about 4 ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightfunl effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

FABLES ON HEALTH

"After a day of considerable walking and the feet become tired or inflamed bathe them in hot antiseptic solution for 15 or 20 minutes," Mr Mann was advised when his feet were troubling him.

"When the feet have been dried, excrescences and callosites can be rubbed off with a coarse towel.

"After this thoroughly massage the feet, using some healing foot lotion. An astringent solution can be used if the skin is naturally moist or soft."

There is not a great deal to be done for perspiring feet unless it is so excessive as to become annoying.

The best day-in-and-day-out treatment is a good bath in astringent and antiseptic solutions. Frequent changes of stockings in which foot powder has been scattered is about the best home treatment

Cold and clammy feet must be blamed on the general physical condition and not the feet themselves.

RUST PROOF IRON

You can make ironwork rust proof by heating it until it is almost red hot and then brushing over with linseed oil.

A Trip to the Old Land

(By F. M. Dela Fosse)

It is a trifle hard to write, except discursively, on such material as presents itself in items jotted down at random on backs of envelopes, margins of newspapers and leaves torn from twopenny notebooks. Even such aids to memory as picture postcards present difficulties when no marks are visible to identify them with places of particular interest. But the letter-writer has this advantage over the essayist; he can jump from place to place and from detail to detail freed from all danger of being branded as guilty of lack of logical coherency. I intend to avail myself to the utmost of the advantage I thus possess and to commit things to paper just as my notes bring them to my memory.

A man would have to be very torpid in intellect if he did not find a multitude of things to interest him in a tour, much of it by motor car, which embraced a dozen English counties. I found so much, and imbibed so much of the spirit and legendary lore of Southern England, that if I had not prudently bottled the balance of what was left, for leisurely consumption, my brain would have been in as hopeless and inextricable confusion as a room at a church jumble sale.

In Cheshire I found endless enjoyment in gazing across the sands of Dee at the Welsh mountains, but it was hard to picture Mary calling the cattle home when the Dee that my eyes beheld was so wide that it would have required the voice of a Stentor, with the help of a gigantic megaphone, to carry the coaxing "co-bossy-co-bossy" across the intervening waters. Dorset and Devon are charming in more ways than one. The drives up hilly lanes and through villages that seem to be rapt in drawn-out siestas are joys to be remembered; but even amid such quiet environments, where everything seemed to exude contentment and rest, there was a pathos that even the lulling music of the countryside could not entirely eradicate. There was not a village that we passed through, however insignificant in size it might be, that did not hold some tribute to the memory of men who had given up their lives in the Great War. Humble monuments many of them were—some with only two or three names engraved on them, but all alike bore witness to the fact that the farm, in no less measure than the town, had given of its best and bravest to the defence of the Empire.

In a long drive that took me, for the second time, to Wells and Glastonbury, I passed over Sedgmoor and through many hamlets with most curious names, such as Chedzoy, Middlezoy and Huish Episcopi. It was a drive long to be remembered, because our road lay right over the historic battleground where the Duke of Monmouth came to his end, and also because it was about the only day free from rain or cold that I experienced in England. During the course of the trip we stopped at a little village on the outskirts of the moor, and I had the pleasant surprise of meeting at the manor-house a lady whose brother, the late Mr. Dudman, was many years ago a resident of Peterborough.

Berkshire being the county in which my old school was situated, and happening to be at Camberley, close by, I seized the opportunity to drive over one afternoon, and, under the guidance of the porter, was taken through the dormitories and along its quadrangles. The statues of the famous generals who had fought under Wellington were still in their accustomed niches, and I could not help contrasting the immunity from iconoclasm which they enjoyed with the treatment meted out by Cromwell's zealous soldiery to the statues of Madonnas and saints in so many of the churches and cathedrals that I had visited. It was, in a sense, saddening to go through one's old dormitory and to call to mind individuals whom one had known in days gone by. All along the line of march I could single out the rooms they had once occupied, and when I recalled the Spartan methods which the older boys used to adopt in order to keep the younger ones in order, there was a psalm of thanksgiving in my soul that I, for one, had reached manhood alive and unmaimed. We passed on to the chapel, enlarged now by the addition of an extra aisle in memory of the first headmaster, afterwards Archbishop Benson. It was easy enough, after the lapse of so many years, to mark the spot where I used to sit as a not too demure member of the choir. We choristers sat in the very centre of the chapel, and immediately opposite to us were the seats reserved for visitors. Many great men had sat in those seats, but I was not on speaking terms, so to say, with any of them, not even to the extent of being told to go to the devil, as another small boy gleefully boasted had been his good fortune on one occasion when he apologized for unwittingly muddying a noted statesman's boots.

Enquiries regarding the masters of my time elicited the information that most of them had passed away; but there were still living two or three who, after the stress and strain of years of tuition, had taken orders and were passing the sunset of their days in remote rectories in the country. Camberley Chapel was well worth seeing if for no other reason than that there are over four thousand names of former students of the Staff College emblazoned on its pillars. Even the seats in the choir had names engraved on them of men who had once sat there and who had fought and died in the Great War. As I turned away from that edifice there was but one thought in my mind, and that was that whatever the Britisher's faults or foibles might be, the world had yet to be shown a record in peace or war that surpassed his in valour and grandeur of achievement. One could not help feeling as one breathed its fragrant air, that it was good to belong to a land that possessed such a glorious history, and that no greater incentive to manliness and true heroism could be imagined than to place before the eyes of future students such records as were inscribed in that chapel.

Amongst many curious habitations which I visited was a windmill, situated high on the Sussex moors. It was occupied by a lady, whose husband, a naval officer, had purchased it years before from a miller and converted into a dwelling-house. If he sought seclusion he certainly found it there, for it was three or four hundred feet above the valley and well out of the way of the charabanc tourist or sightseer. The sails had been removed and the interior had been converted into a most pleasant abode. I found that the mill had been built of magnificent oak timbers salvaged from wrecks that had been cast up on the Sussex coast some time during the 18th century, and as I looked at the massiveness and strength of the foundations, I could easily understand how it had withstood for so many years the fury of the elements. In a room close to the top of the mill the lady had set up a little chapel for her private devotions. Here she had installed an altar and a Priedieu with prayer books and Bibles, and here, on many occasions, she had invited the surrounding clergy to hold services. On one occasion, some three years before, she had had a visit from the Bishops of Gibraltar and of Chichester. The room only holds seven people in comfort, and as the Bishop of Gibraltar is about 6 ft. 3 ins. in height, it may be imagined that he loomed somewhat largely in that small space. The present occupant devotes herself to the charitable task of providing working girls with a cheap holiday, and to that end has had bedrooms built around the mill. Girls who are lucky enough to get rooms there just pay for their bare cost of board, and enjoy for two or three weeks the glorious air from the sea that is wafted over those wide spaces.

Some time ago a wandering bard, in lieu of placing his name in the visitor's book, wrote the following lines and sent them to her:—

Raised high from the valley, far up on the moor—
Remote from the tripper, the tourist, the boor—
Where the winds, all-unfettered, hold revel at will,
Like a guard, ever-watchful, there stands the old mill.
Many years has it stood overlooking the vale,
Unscathed by the fury of tempest or gale;
Time was when its sails would revolve in the breeze
And the song of the miller be heard on the leas,
But, now, for his voice one may listen in vain,
For gone is the miller and gone is the grain;
Yet, who would be pining for miller or bin
In exchange for the kind hearts now sheltered therein?

VETERAN RE-UNION.

Thousands of Veterans of War Will Attend Re-union In Washington.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—(United Press).—Over 10,000 world war veterans are expected to attend the First Division Memorial Reunion here which opens tomorrow, at which President Coolidge will unveil the $145,000 monument to the memory of the division's 5,586 men killed in the war.

Besides the President and Secretary of War Weeks, General Pershing and Major General John L. Hines, the new Chief of Staff, will welcome the veterans to Washington. The War Department has arranged for a composite regiment of the 16th and 18th Infantry, the 6th Field Artillery, and the Regular Army troops of the District of Washington to march in the veterans' parade.

The three-day program includes regimental reunions, visits to Mount Vernon and other historic places, a pilgrimage to the tomb of the unknown soldier at Arlington, and dedication of the monument.

The monument, the first to be erected to world war divisions in the national capital, is in the park between the State, War and Navy Buildings and the Corcoran Art Gallery. It is a light colored granite column crowned by a bronze "victory," modeled by the famous sculptor, Dantal Chester French.

Inscriptions on the monument pedestal list the battles of the division in France, including Cantigny, Soissons-Aisne Marne, St. Mihiel, Meuse-Argonne, and quotes from a citation in the general army orders of 1918:

"The Commander in Chief has noted in this division a special pride of service and a high state of morale never broken by hardship nor battle."

The First Division, A. E. F., was first American outfit to confront and attack the Germans and distinguished itself throughout the war.

HUSSARS RODE ROUGH SHOD OVER C.G.E., WINNING SECOND GAME 16-5

Peterboro Intermediates Turned Back In Quest of Third Championship—Game Started Late and Was Called in the Sixth—Frost and Hardill Were Hit Hard

KINGSTON MADE IT TWO STRAIGHT.

(Special to the Examiner)

KINGSTON, Oct. 1.—The 4th Hussars made it two straight over the Peterboro C.G.E. team here today, winning out 16 to 5 in six innings and thus qualifying for the final series of the Intermediate O.B.A.A. It was a runaway match while it lasted, with the Kingston team showing undoubted superiority in pitching, fielding and hitting.

The Peterboro boys landed here after a long motor car drive through that terrible day and they had a lot of the "gimp" taken out of them before they landed on the field. Then both umpires were a little late and after looking over the usual playing ground at the Fair Grounds, which had about three inches of mud on top after the unexpected wet spell during the middle of the day, it was decided to play the battle off on the Cricket Field, which is the best local diamond but lacks facilities for charging admission.

Spectators Few.

The game did not start until about four o'clock and the thirty or forty hard-boiled spectators who had turned out in spite of winter weather followed the team from one field to the other. As the match advanced the crowd increased a little and about two hundred saw the last few innings.

Hussars started the trouble in the last of the first. Nicholson made first on Rose's error. Arneil singled. Gourdier tripled to score them both. Twigg flied to McCarney and Gourdier was nabbed at the plate trying to beat the throw. Hall doubled but was left when Conley flied to McCarney.

In the second Fannon breezed. Lawless hit for two bags and scored on Moore's single the latter scoring on Nicholson's single. "Nick" died at second when Arneil and Gourdier struck out.

Frost Taken Out.

After a walk, two doubles and three singles in the third with not a soul out, Frost was hoisted and Hardill sent in. He started on Nicholson and the little centre fielder cracked out a double. Gourdier also secured a single before the inning ended with seven hits and six runs. Frost had gone to right field, Ranger to second and Barrie was withdrawn after being hit by a pitched ball in the first of the same inning. Hussars remained scoreless only in the fourth and then gathered five in the fifth and one in the sixth.

General Electrics did not open until the third. Ranger made a two-base hit and Barrie was hit by pitcher. They worked a double steal. Arneil threw McPherson out at first. Wolfe walked. McCarney grounded to Fannon who fizzled at second and had to take the play at first, Ranger scoring. Rose grounded to Gourdier.

Hardill featured with a hard triple in the fifth, which followed hard on Nicholson's diving catch of Ranger's high fly. Hardill was cut off at the plate when McPherson grounded to Fannon. Wolfe popped to Fannon.

Four in the Final.

In the sixth C.G.E. made their best bid, scoring four runs on singles by Rose, Ross and Dugan, Hardill's double and a walk to Ranger. They secured one single in the first of the seventh but Umpire Howard called the game for darkness and the record reverted to the sixth.

The Peterboro players crowded around the Hussars bench after the game and shook hands all round, wishing their opponents luck. They were voted the finest bunch of sports the local intermediates met this year. They were beaten by harder and more experienced men but took the defeat with a good grace and played all the time. It was noticed that when the Peterboro team might have held up the game and played for darkness that they kept right on playing and stuck to baseball.

The Hussars have as yet received no notification from the O.B.A.A. as to their next opponents nor where they will play.

TUNNEY SUSPENDED.

By Boxing Commission and Fined $200 For Loafing.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—The Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission announced to-day that on recommendation of Commissioner H. J. Boyle of Pittsburgh, Gene Tunney, of New York, has been suspended for three months and fined $200 "for boxing a listless contest" in Ebenburg, Pa., September 27. His manager, Billy Gibson, George Engel, his assistant, and Tunney were "scored by the commission for not completing their licenses," the announcement said, "and a forfeit of $100 was held by the commission until these licenses are complete."

"The show at Ebensburg was financed by Charles M. Schwab, the steel magnate," the announcement further said, "and Tunney's opponent, Ray Newman, was paid a liberal purse in order to give the fans a run for their money."

M'GRAW RAISED PIRATES' ANGER

Postponed First Game of Final Series To Give His Cripples a Rest.

NEW RULE NEEDED.

It seems the game was called off four hours prior to the scheduled time for it to begin.

The fact that a National League game was staged in Brooklyn, only a few miles distant from the Polo Grounds, makes the calling off of the New York game all the worse.

The National League rules make the home club the sole judge of the fitness of the field for play. Manager McGraw decided against a game, giving wet grounds as the cause.

While that was the announced reason, the real one was a desire to give his cripples an extra day of rest.

McGraw believes in the power of psychology. He knew calling off the game would peeve the Pirates, all the more so since the game could have been played.

Th fact that Pittsburg lost all three games is proof positive that the scheme worked.

Unquestionably the major league rule covering postponements has its flaws.

In the first place, it hardly seems right that the matter should be entirely up to the home team.

It has been suggested that the umpires, who have no ax to grind, be placed in sole charge of the situation as to the fitness of the field for play.

Incidentally it might be mentioned that the umpires do not take kindly to the suggestion. They feel they have enough trouble to take care of.

The row stirred up by McGraw's attitude in the series with Pittsburg will no doubt be threshed out at the first session of the American League.

The American League has a rule relative to postponements that might have averted the unpleasant situation that came up in the National.

The Amerocan League rule says that a postponement of the first series shall be played off on the first day of the second series.

Postponement in the second meeting between two clubs must be played off on the following day. Likewise postponement of the third series.

The American League rule would have called for the teams to have played a double-header on the day following McGraw's postponement of the opening game.

This rule is to eliminate the chances of a game not being played. In case there is an open date, as was the case in New York, it could be utilized in case weather conditions make it impossible to finish the series on the scheduled dates.

Perhaps Judge Landis will take a hand in the situation. It has already stirred up much strife that is is certain to continue unless a solution is ofered.

RICKEY MAY QUIT AS ST LOUIS PILOT

Is Thinking of Devoting His Time To Scouting For New Players—Has Been Directing the Cardinals For Six Years.

(By Billy Evans)

How important are the managerial duties? Especially when compared with those of the magnate—the man who assembles the players and organizes the club?

Branch Rickey of the St. Louis Cardinals is pondering over that question and his decision may be—

That the man who assembles the players and organizes the club is more important than the manager on the bench.

Anyway, Rickey has hinted that he will resign as manager of the Cardinals during the winter and devote his entire time as discoverer of material with which to develop his National League baseball machine.

Remarkable Character

Rickey is one of the most remarkable characters in baseball. He started as a minor league catcher in the Texas League and his career includes college football coach, college baseball coach, business manager, club president, vice-president and manager.

Originally an American League product, Rickey was ousted as manager of the St. Louis Browns following the close of the 1915 season when his club was purchased by the St. Louis Federal interests.

When the St. Louis Cardinals were purchased by home subscriebrs in 1917 Rickey was snared from the American League for his high-up job as president. His manager then was Miller Huggins.

The American League retaliated by snatching Huggins for the New York Yankees and Rickey, without a manager for 1918, signed Jack Hendricks.

A third-place club drifted to a tail-ender during the Hendricks reign and he was fired.

Manager Six Years.

Rickey then decided to pilot his own club and he put on the managerial spangles in 1918.

Serving as manager for six years. Rickey has hinted that he may appoint a successor and herefter devote his time to scouting collegiate fields and the minor leagues.

He realizes that he must rebuild his organization which in 1921 and 1922 gave the Giants stiff competition for the pennant. This year it dropped out of sight early and has been in the second division all season.

Bill Sherdel, Eddie Dyer, Johnny Stuart, Jim Bottomley, Clarence Mueller, Ray Blades, Howard Freigau, Chic Hafey, Roscoe Holm and Flint Rhem are present members of the Cardinals who were found on corner lots by Rickey and developed by his own hands.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

In most sports the champions run true to form.

Bill Tilden has dominated tennis for years Jack Dempsey is in a class by himself in the fight game Leading the National League in batting is getting to be an annual affair with Rogers Hornsby.

Golf is generally recognized as the one sport in which the world champion means little or nothing. One year a champion, next year an also ran, failing to qualify. That's golf history.

Walter Hagen stands out as the one exception in golf. He's a real champion in a sport that has but little respect for the titleholder. Year after year he delivers.

The experts will tell you Hagen's game is no better than scores of other stars. Which makes it seem that the courage of Sir Walter tells the story of his continued success.

Weak arms, on the part of the modern day pitchers was the one feature of play that impressed Dutch Leonard on his return to the majors.

After an absence of several years, the former star southpaw returned to the game in an effort to help Detroit win a pennant.

"Either a majority of the pitchers think a fast ball no longer necessary or they have weak arms," says Leonard.

"I am inclined to think it is a matter of weak arms, because the pitchers seem to be putting everything they have on the ball.

"When I broke into the majors the pitcher who lacked a fast ball didn't have much of a chance. Now everything seems different."

The lively ball caused pitchers to curtail the use of the fast one in an effort to throw the batters off. Now it seems to be the system used by a majority of pitchers. The fast ball is passe.

In the final stages of the National League race some mighty tough breaks were handed Dazzy Vance. With an all-time pitching record almost within his grasp he suffered defeat in a four-hit, extra inning game.

Unfortunately for Vance three of the four hits made off his delivery were homers. The game being finally broken up on a circuit clout.

Proving that the fast ball is full of dynamite if the batsman connects No doubt in each instance Vance got his fast ball too good. The result was disastrous to his record, also Brooklyn's chances for a pennant.

THE DOURO FAIR WAS BIG SUCCESS

This Was the First Annual Fall Fair Held In This Locality.

DOURO, Oct. 1. — Douro's first annual Fall Fair was held on Thursday last in conjunction with the School Fair, on the grounds adjoining the village, and it was an unqualified success. With perfect weather and with a crowd said to be much larger than was in attendance at the old-established Lakefield Fair, and with exhibits said to be more numerous in some cases than either Lakefield or Peterboro, Douro can well be proud of her Fair. Too much credit cannot be given to Mr. P. G. Towns, who organized the Fair, with no assistance except what was given on the day itself.

The event was also a sports day, and an excellent programme of sports was run off. The Curve Lake Indian Band furnished music during the day.

The team-drawing contest was the first event. In the heavy class the teams did not give a very good exhibition, but some fine work was done by the lighter-weight teams.

The winners were: Heavy class—Wm. Heffernan (West), 127 feet; Thos. Fitzgerald, 50 ft. 9 ins., and Jas. McKeiver, 11 ft. 6 ins. Light class—Stan. Farley, 418 ft. 3 ins.; Edward Kennedy, 297 ft. 6 ins., and Michael McKeiver, 126 feet.

The winners for best lady drivers were: (1) Miss Florence Allen, (2) Mrs. Wm. Hayes, (3) Mrs. Michael Ryan.

For farmers' driving outfits the winners were: (1) Robt. Allen, (2) Wm. Hayes, (3) Ernest Dunsford.

The prize for the longest-married couple on the grounds went to Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Brien, who will be fifty-three years married in November. The prize for the most recently married couple went to Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Sheehan.

The prize for the person with the most descendants on the grounds went to Mr. Michael Garvey with thirty-four, and second, Mr. Thos. Heffernan (Otonabee) twenty-eight.

For the largest family on the grounds the prizes went to (1) Daniel Delaney, twelve; (2) Samuel O'Brien and Peter Doherty, equal with eleven each.

Three softball games were played during the day: (1) Bachelors vs. Married Men, (2) Douro vs. Lakefield, and (3) two girls' teams, Indian River vs. Villiers.

Villiers: Misses Lillie Manley, Gladys Nelson, Rose Manley, Mary Hall, Gladys Steele, Mary Hastie, Marjorie Francis, Grace Wood and Lila Hall.

Indian River: Misses Edna McCauley, Annabel Carlow, Ruby Bolton, Alberta Darling, Marjorie Payne, Daphne Payne, Angeline Fitzgerald, Jean Bowen and Frances Fitzgerald.

The score was 26 to 16 in favor of Villiers.

In the game, Lakefield vs. Douro, the result was a win for Lakefield, 7-0. The line-up was as follows:

Douro: Frank O'Brien, C. Towns, Garnet O'Brien, Raymond Walsh, John Dwyer, Chas. Condon, Jos. Towns, Hubert Allen and M. Delaney.

Lakefield: Dr. Renwick, C. S. Tanner, W. Morrison, J. Hull, E. Greer, S. Erskine, Hal. Payne, B. Dench, B. Redpath.

Bowling

Solomon's Alleys re-opened yesterday and drew a lot of bowlers, who were anxious to get the first game of the season in. Quite a number were over in the afternoon and evening. A lot of the boys who rolled last year were on hand and some of the players from different leagues were there. They were able to turn in some fair scores, but their eye is not quite up to the standard. The alleys have been completely "gone over." The building has been compeltey painted and the alleys have been re-scraped and fixed and new pins have been secured.

The season is now open and pretty soon the leagues will be swinging into action. The success of bowling all over the country last year, promises to be even bettered this year. Reports from the larger cities show that the leagues are already under way. A great season is looked for.

GOOD PITCHING SERIES FACTOR

Contenders Have Powerful Firing Squads — Teams Look Well Matched.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2—With Walter Johnson, veteran ace of Washingtons' sharp shooting corps, as the outstanding figure, pitching may be the decisive factor in the 1924 world's series between the Senators and the New York Giants.

Until recent years, twirling was usually the most potent factor in the diamond title struggle, but with the advent of the lively ball, the Babe Ruthian home runners, baseball strategy shifted. Pitching, of course, continued to figure largely but it has been the speed and power of attack that decided the last three world's championship battles between the Giants and the Yankees.

John McGraw won the premier baseball crown in both 1921 and 1922 from Yankees with effectiveness of his offensive. His hurling staff both years was rated inferior to "five star" Yankee corps both years. Last year, it is true, the utter collapse of of the Giant moundsmen hastened the Yankee victory but the mighty bats of the hugmen were the most potent influence

This year, however, with a less lively ball, pitching may come into its own again. The "Big Four" of the Washington staff, Johnson, Zachary, Mogridge and Marberry, put the club in front, although it was attacking power that kept it there in the final drive. Supporters of the Senators figuring they have the edge on the Giants in the box, believe twirling will carry Washington's first pennant winner to the greatest heights in the game, but Giants rooters are equally confident that Nehf, Bentley, McQuillan and Barnes will offer a potent rebuttal.

ZEV BEATEN BY LENGTH

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—Big Blaze Glen Riddle Farm entry, won the $3,500 Interborough handicap at a mile and a sixteenth at Jamaica today the feature event of the opening day's programme. Zev, outstanding favorite in the race, was beaten by a length in a driving finish, with Setanwix, his stable mate, third. The time was 1.44 4-5.

JOHNSON PLANNING TO RETIRE FROM BOX

Senators' Star Wants To Locate In Baseball Out West Next Season.

BOSTON, October 2. — With the American league pennant won, the Washington Senators of 1924, who accomplished what Washington teams have been trying unsuccessfully to do for forty years, took things easy to-day. Their youthful manager, Stanley Harris, whose rise from breaker boy in a mine to the leadership of a champion team at 27 years of age, has fired the youngsters of the country, went to Washington over night, accompanied by Walter Johnson, the veteran pitcher, and Clark Griffith, the president of the club.

Before leaving Harris said his team's success was due to its fighting qaulities and that they would carry these same qualities against the Giants on Saturday. He indicated that Walter Johnson was in good shape, nothwithstanding his recent injury and would pitch the first game.

Johnson himself achieving an ambition to qualify for world series play afer a generation of pitching, said this might be his last year in major league baseball.

"I realize that I cannot go much further," he said. "My arm is still good, but I know I haven't got the stuff I used to have. Then the season started I had fully made up my mind to retire at the end of this year. Now it all depends on what comes up this winter.

"If I can get located in baseball somewhere in the west that would suit me perfectly. I want to get settled. I have four little children and I want to get out of baseball before I get useless. If I can help Washington to win a world pennant this Fall, that would certainly be the time to quit."

BROWNS NOW STAND ALONE.

Remain Only Team in American That Has Not Won a Pennant.

ST. LOUIS, October 2. — While local baseball fans generally expressed satisfaction over Washington's victory in the race for the 1924 pennant, it was generally mentioned that the Browns now are the only team in the American League that has not won a pennant.

Washington's victory served to recall the days of 1922 when "the Browns almost won a pennant." They were defeated by the Yankees, the margin of victory being one game.

Why did Sweden, Norway, Newfoundland, British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba all give up Prohibition in any and every form?

Because liquor is good for the sick and is in use in all the hospitals and cannot be prohibited.

To talk Prohibition is to talk nonsense. Hence it became a question who was going to sell liquor—the Government or the bootlggers. At first the bootleggers and smugglers had it all their own way, but at the first plebiscite that was changed. You will have your chance on 23rd October.

Archbishop Matheson, Anglican Primate of Canada, gave his report to the House of Bishops upon Government control in Manitoba. He said that after careful investigation he had found it "very satisfactory."

Do you think that bootlegger control is better than Government control? If so, vote for the O.T.A.

LAKEVIEWS THE BEST BET FOR ONTARIO TITLE

Win For Local Juniors Saturday Will Put Them in Good Position.

DESERVE SUPPORT.

Fans Should Turn Out To See Southpaw Rivals Renew Duel

With the elimination of the C.G.E. from the Intermediates O.B.A.A. race Peterboro teams are now out of the running for provincial honours in any but two classes, the junior and juvenile series.

The Lakeviews, who tied with McCormicks in Toronto last week and meet the Toronto crew at Riverside Park on Saturday in the second game of the series, are Peterboro's best hope for an Ontario championship, and as Saturday's game is likely to be the last local game of this season, there should be a huge crowd out to see the two fast junior outfits clash.

Whitehouse and Rasson, the left-handers, who held the hitters at bay for 17 hectic innings last week, will go back at each other Saturday, and the duel should be just as thrilling as was last week's clash.

McCormick's have a fast fielding team behind Rasson, and they are confident of taking a fall out of the Lakeviews here.

Naturally Lew LeBarr's team can't see it that way and are determined to bring home the bacon.

The game will start at 2.30 o'clock in charge of Umpires Willy of Toronto, and Johnston of Peterboro.

SEES A SAD FATE FOR BOBBED HAIR

New Fangled Method Will Have Serious Effect on Cutting Down Marriages.

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—(United Press).—Bobbed hair in time is going to have a serious effect in cutting down the number of marriages, according to Charles Nestle, beauty specialist of New York, in an address here.

"That bobbed hair eventually will result in beards for women, is a prediction," said Nestle. "That it will rob women, in appearance at least, of womanly charm is a fact, and there is no doubt that this fact will reduce the marriage rate and may in time lead to a falling off of the world's population.

"Since the beginning of time, the glory of woman has been her hair. Shorn of her long tresses, she is shorn of much of her physical allurement. She appears mannish. Men do not care for mannish-looking women and will not marry them.

"Long hair enables a woman, by changing her coiffure, to add the charm of variety to her beauty. Bobbed hair deprives her of this varied attractiveness. She appears always the same. She attracts no more admiration than she might expect if she appeared every day in the same gown.

"As she grows mannish in appearance, she will grow mannish in nature. This will be an inevitable psychological consequence. Thus bobbed hair, with its tendency to subvert the womanliness of women, may become a source of tragic conditions in the future."

NEWS JANETVILLE.

New Bungalow Adds to the Beauty of the Village.

JANETVILLE, Oct. 2.—Mr. J. R. Burn has erected a magnificent new bungalow at the east end of the village, opposite his store, and the building is nearing completion. This will be one of the most comfortable and attractive homes in the community, and being situated near the park, will contribute largely to the beauty of the hamlet of Janetville.

Mr. Burn is to be congratulated on the splendid issue of such a noble enterprise.

Rest Room on the Park

The Woman's Institute are making plans for a rest room to be erected on the new park which will be the beginning of a larger building to be erected later on. About four hundred dollars will be spent as a beginning and the work will proceed as funds are received. So rapid has been the growth of grass during the summer, that an excellent sod is the result of the seeding to grass last spring. About forty dollars was spent in grass seed.

Heavy Frost.

On Tuesday and Wednesday nights of this week frost visited the community and left its mark on corn, potatoes and buckwheat, also on much of the late garden crops. However, the buckwheat and potatoes are pretty well on toward maturity and the damage will not amount to much.

Threshing is in full swing and the grain is yielding better than it has in years; fall wheat is turning out in some cases fifty bushels to the acre.

Big Corn Roast

The Y.P.S. of the Methodist church put on a corn roast and the pastor provided the fire. This will be the beginning of what we hope will prove a most successful year of Christian effort on the part of the young folks.

The enthusiasm is running high, and all are anxious to get busy in church work again. Next Friday evening the young people will reorganize.

Personal.

Mr. and Mrs. Rowe of Vancouver who have been speending their vacation with friends and relatives at Janetville, returned to their home in the West yesterday.

Miss M. Richardson, who has been teaching in North Janetville Public School with the greatest possible success, has gone to teach in Peterboro. Miss Richardson intended to rest for a year, but changed her mind, and in the meantime another teacher was engaged. Her place will be most difficult to fill, as she was most efficient worker in so many lines of activity beneficial to the community. She was a most valuable as a worker in the church having charge of the organ, prayer meeting, Y.P.S. and also working with great efficiency the Missionary Department of the Young People's Work.

Miss Richardson is one of the finest teachers in the country and Janetville will miss her efforts in so many religious and social activities. But Peterboro will richly profit by the loss to Janetville.

ONE OF THE CHARACTERS IN "THE GINGHAM GIRL," at the Grand to-night.

A BALL PLAYER WAS SUSPENDED

Cozy Dolan, of New York Nationals, Also Given the Hook.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—(Canadian Press.)—Commissioner K. M. Landis announced last night that Jimmy O'Connell and Coach Cozy Dolan, of the New York Nationals, had been declared ineligible after charges of bribery against them had been investigated.

Suspension was based upon the confession made by O'Connell and evidence furnished by Dolan and followed information furnished by "Heinie" Sand of the Philadelphia National League team. Sand stated that on Sept. 27th O'Connell had offered him $500 to throw a game between the Giants and the Phillies, played in New York on that day.

Sand refused the offer and immediately gave his information to Manager Fletcher of the Phillies, who brought it to the attention of Commissioner Landis. Investigation in which President Heyde, head of the National League, and officials of the New York club, also took part, followed.

The investigation, Commissioner Landis said, tended to trace instigation of the scheme to Dolan, whose testimony was of a nature to indicate that conclusion.

O'Connell's confession also implicated Capt. Frank Frisch, Ross Young and George Kelly, of the Giants, but Commissioner Landis stated that the testimony of the men had convinced the investigation committee, that they had no part in the scheme. O'Connell, a substitute outfielder, will be the only Giant player not eligible for the world series as Dolan is a coach.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

"THE GINGHAM GIRL."

"The Gingham Girl," a delightful musical comedy, will be presented by its producers, Schwab and Kusell, at the Grand Thursday evening, October 2. "The Gingham Girl" was produced at the Earl Carroll Theatre, New York, where it ran for one solid year; it also played five months in Chicago and ten weeks each in Boston and Philadelphia. The book is the work of Daniel Kusell, the music by Albert Von Tilzer, lyrics by Neville Fleeson, the dancing numbers were put on by Sammy Lee and the piece was staged by the celebrated director, Edgar MacGregor.

The story is refreshingly original, with a plentiful supply of wholesome humor that radiates throughout the action. It is a tale of two country sweethearts, Mary and Johnnie, who leave their homes in a little New England town and go to New York to win fame and fortune; it is a simple story, depicting the adventures of the pair until they finally attain their goal.

Through it all runs sixteen tuneful song numbers, the airs of which are so catchy that the melodies are universally whistled and hummed wherever the piece is presented and more than one million phonograph records, reproducing the numbers, have been sold. Among the songs are: "The Down East Flapper," "The Twinkle In Your Eye," "You Must Learn the Latest Dances," "As Long As I Have You," "When I Step With My Buddy," "Down Greenwich Village Way," "Tell Her While the Waltz Is Playing," "The Wonderful Thing We Call Love," "Plunk, Plunk," "Sweet Cookie," "Newlyweds," "Gingham Girls," and others. In addition to the songs, three big finales are sung by the strength of the entire company and six whirlwind dancing features are introduced. Only one company is touring this season in "The Gingham Girl," comprising the pick of comedians, vocalists and singing and dancing chorus selected from the two companies which played the piece in New York and Chicago.

The chorus of youthful beauties, each of whom is an expert dancer, in addition to possessing a melodious voice, is an important factor in the success of "The Gingham Girl." The piece is magnificently mounted with four elaborate scenic settings, 20 groups of modish costumes and many new and novel electrical novelties.

ROBERT B. MANTELL.

Thirty-five years of keeping faith with his public have provided a background for Robert B. Mantell, the world's foremost actor of classic roles, that reflects supreme confidence. Supported by the beautiful and highly intelligent actress, Miss Genevieve Hamper, and a capable cast, he comes to the Grand Opera House for two nights and Saturday matinee, beginning Friday, October 3rd. The repertoire as announced for this engagement follows: Friday night, Bulwer Lytton's colorful melodrama, "Richelieu"; Saturday matinee, Shakespeare's delightful romantic comedy, "As You Like It"; Saturday night, Shakespeare's thrilling historical tragedy, "Richard III."

The Robert B. Mantell Shakespearean organization is independent of any and every other producing company. But, notwithstanding its position in the theatrical field and the high quality of its productions, the management realizes that it can exist and thrive only on the actual good-will of the theatre-going public of the better class. Therefore, every care is rigorously exercised to maintain the high order of excellence that has always marked the Mantell stage offerings of previous seasons. Mantell is not only an actor of superlative ability, but he is as modest as they make them. He says that it is to the great name of Shakespeare, that bond of sympathy among all who speak his language, and to the subjects of his works, not to the actor's merits, that he owes whatever success has rewarded his years before the public. We do not wish to detract from the good work of others, but this notable organization, more effectively than any other in existence here or abroad, is keeping alive the interest in Shakespeare on the stage. The Mantell tours cannot go on forever, so let us welcome this famous actor on the occasion of his forthcoming engagement at the Grand, Friday and Saturday.

"THE TEN COMMANDMENTS."

There was a good attendance at the Grand last evening for the last performance of "The Ten Commandments," the massive DeMille production which has excited so much comment during its showing here.

With exceptionally fine photography, including much effective colored work, this is an unusual picture, with a modern version of the Ten Commandments following the presentation of the Exodus of the children of Israel from Egypt. The first portion is a remarkable delineation of the captivity of the Israelites, their pursuit, and the destruction of the Egyptian hordes in the Red Sea.

The second part is a modern tale, illustrating the retribution which follows swiftly in the wake of sin, and tells the story of a young man who flouts the dictates of conscience and the advice of his religious mother alike, to follow out his own desires and to inevitably reap the harvest of wrong-doing. The scenes are dramatically filmed, and the contrast between the Old Testament life of the first section and the very modern second half is striking and original. A notable feature of the production is the music which accompanies it, rounding out with harmony the silent lesson of the screen.

AT THE CAPITOL.

An exciting story plus capable acting plus picturesque settings combine to make "The Female," a Sam Wood Paramount picture, now showing at the Capitol Theatre, more than acceptble screen fare. For those who like vigorous drama seasoned with plenty of love-interest this screen play will fill the bill from soup to nuts.

Far from being obvious, "The Female," which was adapted by Agnes Christine Johnston from Cynthia Stockleys' famous novel, "Dalla, the Lion Cub", strikes out along new trails, vibrates with dynamic action, develops and maintains the love interest smoothly and winds up in eminently satisfactory style.

The story concerns Dalla, the uncultured but fascinating daughter of an African farmer. From her childhood days when we first discover her playing in a nest of lion cubs, she has been called "the lion cub." She grows up, wild, untamed, a primitive savage, handicapped by poverty and ignorance and proving the aptness of her nickname by the ferocity with which she repulses those men who are attracted by her natural beauty. Love comes to her at last, and in time she blossoms out as a cultured, refined faultlessly-gowned woman who routs her enemies and wins joy and happiness.

But not until the last few moments of the final reel are you absolutely sure how it's all going to come out, and this maintenance of suspense is one of the picture's outstanding qualities. It is largely due to good direction and artful molding of the various situations into a coherent whole.

Betty Compson fills the leading role admirably. Her performance is natural and appealing, and she is ably assisted by Warner Baxter, Noah Beery, Dorothy Cumming and Freeman Wood.

All in all, "The Female" is well worth a visit to the Capitol Theatre.

ROBERT B. MANTELL WILL BE SEEN ON CAPITOL'S SCREEN MONDAY AND TUESDAY

An example of timely booking, is shown in the announcement that the Capitol Theatre will offer the eminent legitimate actor, Robert B. Mantell, in Stanley Weyman's famous romance, "Under the Red Robe," next Monday and Tuesday. It will be recalled that Mr. Mantell is appearing in a stage production at a local theatre on Friday and Saturday. The offering of the famous star's first screen production will give theatre-goers an opportunity of comparing his work both on the screen and stage. Alma Rubens, supports Mr. Mantell in "Under the Red Robe."

WILLIAM FARNUM RETURNS TO SCREEN

'Man Who Fights Alone' First for Paramount

William Farnum's first starring picture for Paramount, "The Man Who Fights Alone," will be shown Friday and Saturday at the Capitol Theatre. The production, his first in over a year, is an adaptation by Jack Cunningham, who wrote the scenaorio of "The Covered Wagon," of story, "The Miracle of Hate," by William Blacke and James Shelley Hamilton. Lois Wilson and Edward Horton play opposite the star in featured roles.

The story is one of the great open spaces. Farnum is a power engineer—a silent, lone fighter of the western wastes—a pioneer of industry who has to overcome not only practically insurmountable physical obstacles but mental ones in the bargain. He has to master himself to win success.

Miss Wilson is the girl in the picture. Edward Horton the other man, who remains Farnum's loyal friend throughout. Others in the great cast are Lionel Belmore, Barlowe Borland, Frank Farrington, Dawn O'Day, Rose Tapley and George Irving.

If you like Farnum in the virile, 'he-man' roles of his previous productions, you'll like him in this one. Without a doubt, it's his greatest screen role.

AT THE ROYAL.

"HIT AND RUN," HOOT'S LATEST, PROMISES WELL

Baseball Story, Royal To-night.

Hoot Gibson's latest Universal production which promises to be a classic of the classical sport, baseball, comes to the Royal Theatre as the attraction beginning to-day.

Of course the title is "Hit and Run." That would be expected, for no phrase could better describe the fast action of a Gibson version of the great game. Edward Sedgwick and Raymond L. Schrock wrote the story and scenario, and Sedgwick directed the filming.

In the cast with Gibson are several popular players, including Marian Harlan, daughter of the character artist, Otis Harlan, Harold Goodwin, DeWitt Jennings, Cyril Ring, William A. Steele and Mike Donlin, once one of the world's most famous ball players.

With Donlin in the cast and with every player in the story naturally a rabid baseball fan, the technical end of the story practically took care of itself. In Los Angeles, ten miles from Universal City, a large number of baseball players "hibernate" during the winter, and thirty of these were employed.

"Hit and Run" will present Gibson in the role of a green "swat artist," a real Babe Ruth, of a team in some place in the western desert—where the ball park is merely a portion of the unending vista of cactus and sagebrush. He is found by a "scout"—played by Donlin—and sent to the big league, where his inability to catch a ball makes him the laughing stock until he caresses the pill one time after another against a veteran and wakes up to find himself famous.

BALLOONS FOR THE KIDDIES AT THE ROYAL SATURDAY MATINEE

In addition to Hoot Gibson's newest thriller—this time a story of the West and big league baseball, every child attending the Saturday matinee will receive a large balloon free. They are now on display in theatre window.

AT THE REGENT.

"Wildcat Rea" retains his position as leader in Chaparral, a small Western town, by putting on prize fights and rodeos. His mistress is Conchita, queen of his dance hall, but he is in love with May, the niece of David McGinn, the town drunkard. May, however, loves Bob Trent, a stalwart cowboy.

Red O'Hara, a fight trainer, drifts into Chaparral and recognizes Bob Trent as "Lightning Kid," a famous fighter. Bob tells Red he has given up fighting because two years ago—although fighting clean—he injured "The Weazel," another fighter so badly that he was maimed for life.

The Weazel follows Bob wherever he goes, to blackmail him, and when he comes to Chaparral, instantly becomes friendly with "Wildcat" Rea and the two decide to break Bob.

The big fight of the season arranged by "Wildcat" is to be held between Steve Benson and the "Tulare Kid," a protege of Wildcat's.

Red O'Hara recognized Steve Benson as "Battling" Benson, a well-known fighter, and realizes that the Tulare Kid whom he is managing, hasn't a chance. All Chaparral's money has been placed on the Tulare Kid on the advice of Wildcat, while Wildcat's own money has been placed on Battling Benson.

Red knows that his fighter must win. He knocks the Tulare Kid cold and begs Bob to fight in his place. Bob refuses.

Since his promise to his dying mother that he would never fight again, Bob cannot bear the sight of the arena. He sits in the cafe while preparations for the fight are going on.

Into the cafe comes Conchita, followed by the Weazel, who attempts to embrace her. She spurns him as a cripple, but he straightens up and tells her he has been playing Bob to wheedle money out of him. Bob sees this and happily hastens to the arena.

During the fight, Wildcat and the Weazel steal the stakes which Wildcat has been holding, by substituting the bag with one filled with papers, and leaving it in the care of David McGinn, who is intent on the fight. The two make for the border in Wildcat's Ford.

The loss of the money is discovered. Old David is accused of the theft and the raging crowd is for lynching him. . . . May rushes to her uncle. The angry men almost kill her.

Bob leaps on Silver King in pursuit of the two thieves. After a hot chase, he jumps into their car, and takes the wheel from Wildcat's hands. They fight, and Bob is thrown out of the car just before it goes over a steep embankment. Wildcat and the Weazel are killed.

WOMEN'S LEAGUE HELD CONVENTION

Fourth Annual Convention Of Catholic Women's League.

The fourth annual convention of the Diocesan Sub-division of the Catholic Women's League, was held yesterday in St. Alphonsus' Lyceum, with a business session in the afternoon followed by a banquet in the evening. The business session, held in the assembly hall downstairs, was attended by nearly 50 of the members of the League from the city, while the following out-of-town delegates were present:

Ennismore: Mrs. R. Kennedy and Miss Mary Twomey. Port Hope: Mrs. Julia Quinlan. Lindsay: Mrs. J. J. Walsh, Mrs. B. J. Gough, Mrs. A. D. Walsh, Miss M. R. Baker. Lakefield: Mrs. Charlton. Hastings: Mrs. T. A. Walsh, Mrs. R. Walsh. Kearney: Mrs. J. W. Brown, Mrs. E. McManus, Cobourg, Mrs. Flesch, Mrs. Mulhall, Mrs. Lalonde, Mrs. Flannigan, Miss Bulger.

Reports showing splendid progress were given by Mrs. F. A. Hodgson, for the Peterboro Branch of the League; Miss M. R. Baker for Lindsay, Mrs. T. A. Walsh for Hastings; Mrs. J. W. Brown for Kearney; Miss M. Twomey for Ennismore; Mrs. Charlton for Lakefield, and Miss Bulger for Cobourg.

Mrs. F. A. Hodgson also gave the report for the diocesan convention held in Cobourg last year, and Mrs. B. J. Gough, of Lindsay, reported on the annual convention, held in Edmonton. Mrs. J. J. Walsh, the diocesan president, spoke briefly, making an appeal for better support of the magazine, the League's official organ.

The local president, Mrs. C. J. Snider, who extended a gracious welcome to the visiting and city delegates, gave a splendid address on League work, which was later commented on very favorably by His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien.

A message from National President, Mrs. Lovering, of Hamilton, was read by Mrs. F. J. McFadden, regretting her inability to be present on account of a similar meeting being held in her own city. The next National convention will be held in Hamilton, the Diocesan president, Mrs. J. J. Walsh of Lindsay, being the delegate from this district.

It was decided to hold the district convention next year in Hastings.

Election of Officers.

Election of Diocesan officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President: Mrs. J. J. Walsh of Lindsay; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. J. W. Fitzgerald of Peterboro; 2nd Vice President, Mrs. B. J. Gough, of Lindsay; 3rd Vice-President, Miss F. Corkery of Lindsay; Corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. Hartnett of Lindsay; Recording Secretary, Mrs. W. Young of Ennismore; Treasurer, Mrs. J. Lalonde, of Cobourg.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, who was present at the afternoon session, after extending a welcome to the visitors, spoke briefly but eloquently on the good work to be done by co-operation among the members of the League. He said that organization was necessary, and spirituality the first consideration. He recommended the banding together of the members in the public questions of the day, and expressed the wish that the League would thrive and flourish in this diocese, saying: "It does not require genius to lead a successful organization, but it does require genius to pull up-stream."

Successful Banquet.

The afternoon session was followed by a very enjoyable banquet held in the upper hall, and catered for by Messrs. Hooper & Sons. The hall and tables were prettily decorated with flags and a quantity of flowers. Mrs. J. J. Doris acted as convenor. The guests numbered about a hundred ladies.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, and Rt. Rev. Monsignor McColl were also present and both spoke briefly on League work. Ladies who spoke during the evening included Mrs. J. J. Walsh and Mrs. B. J. Gough, of Lindsay, Mrs. C. J. Snider and Mrs. F. A. Hodgson.

An interesting musical programme was composed of vocal numbers by Miss Ernestine McManus and Miss Stella Brady, and an instrumental duet by Mrs. F. A. Hodgson and Miss Margaret McCabe.

WILLIAM PRICE MET HIS DEATH IN A LANDSLIDE

OTHERS ESCAPE.

QUEBEC, Oct. 2. — (Canadian Press.)—Sir William Price, President of Price Brothers Company, was killed this morning at Kenogami.

Sir William and two engineers named Munro and McDermott, were inspecting work being carried out at Kenogami when a landslide occurred. Sir William is said to have been buried under the debris. The engineers escaped with their lives.

Price was one of the most influential business men in Canada. He was associated principally with the pulp and paper industry and owned very large mills in North-east Quebec. Just at the present time he was engaged with United States' capitalists in completing a large scheme for developing water power for the provincial plants and factories near Kenogami.

Sir William was born at Talca, Chile, in 1867, the son of Henry F. Price. He was brought to Quebec when young and educated at Bishops College, Lennoxville and at private schools. He entered business with his father. Sir William was a Conservative member of the parliament for Quebec West from 1908 to 1912, but of late years he preferred to be considered as an independent in politics. Sir William went overseas as lieutenant-colonel of the One Hundred and Seventy-first Battalion, which he helped to raise. This unit was disbanded in England and Sir William then accepted a commission as captain in a Canadian railway corps.

Sir William married Amelia Blanche, daughter of Robert Smith, of Quebec, in 1904 and by this union there were four sons and two daughters. One son, John, is at present in Europe on his honeymoon.

Sir William Price resides in Quebec. He was ranked as a multi-millionaire in financial circles. He was knighted in 1918.

OBITUARY.

ANDREW N. WIGHT.

TRENT RIVER, Oct. 2.—After an illness of many months, Mr. Andrew Noble Wight passed peacefully away yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at his late home, Cedar Isle. The late Mr. Wight, who was in his fifty-third year, was widely known. He was a quiet and unassuming man, much beloved by a host of friends, whose sympathy goes out to his widow and family. Besides his sorrowing wife, four daughters and five sons survive: Mrs. P. Logan (Mary) of Havelock, Annie, Laura and Agnes at home, and Thomas, William, Norman, Melville and Charley, all at home. The aged father of the deceased also survives in his eighty-fourth year.

The funeral will be held, under the auspices of the Masonic Order, on Friday afternoon, at two o'clock, at the Methodist Church. Interment at Maple Grove Cemetery.

FRED M'GAUGHEY MAINTAINS STOICAL SILENCE AS JUDGE CONSIGNS HIS SOUL TO MERCIFUL GOD AND HIS BODY TO THE GALLOWS ON DECEMBER 5

Crowded Court Hears Insanity Plea Fail and Prisoner Sentenced To Die—Encouraged By Counsel During Ordeal of Death Sentence.

JURY COMMENDED ON DECISION.

Slayer of His Sweetheart Will Expiate His Cold-Blooded Crime Eight Months After Killing.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

LINDSAY, October 3.—Fred McGaughey was last night sentenced to die by hanging on being found guilty by a jury of the charge of murder.

His death will atone for that other lonely grave in Emily cemetery where his sweetheart, Beatrice Fee, lies dead at his hand.

The jury was out just four hours and twenty minutes, following a strong charge by Mr. Justice Logie. The court room was crowded to its utmost capacity, scores of people sitting on the floor. The corridors were packed so that court constables could not force their way through and were compelled to go around by the back door. The fire escape bore a spectator on every rung, and roofs of sheds creaked under the weight of dozens who gazed through the open windows. Many of the court habitues left hurriedly rather than remain near the dock as the inevitable outcome was announced.

Deathly Stillness

As the jury filed silently into the court room at 9.45 there was a stern light in every man's eyes, and a deathly stillness fell over the court room. His Lordship had just declared a ten minute intermission to enable Mr. Frost to arrange his evidence in the Bacon murder trial, which was progressing, and had to be recalled.

Fred McGaughey, hastily summoned from his cell, bore his usual downcast look as he was led to the dock by Governor Stone, and assumed the attitude on the bench there that has characterized him throughout the trial. His tie was awry and his black, wiry hair fell over his eyes in tangled masses.

As the foreman of the jury enunciated the word "Guilty" no flicker of animation was visible on the prisoner's face. A jerkiness developed as the court constable was despatched for a calendar, with its grim portent, and when His Lordship commenced to pronounce sentence McGaughey was quivering from head to foot, his head moving backward and forward jerkily and his hands clenching and unclenching.

Voice From the Dead.

The verdict had been expected since the momentous hour on Tuesday night when the dead girl told through the mouth of her dearest friend the story of that fearful night when she was mortally wounded by the man who must expiate on the gallows the deed that slayed her. When Helen Stewart, a very beautiful girl of seventeen, told in touching tones of Beatrice Fee's dying declaration to her as she lay on the blood-soaked bed in a room where her assailant raved about his craziness and his wounded hand, not a sound was heard in the usually noisy court-room, and the ticking of the clock punctuated in strident tones the sentences of the pathetic recital. The accused man maintained his granite-like pose, unmoved by the narrative that brought tears to the eyes of the jurymen and spectators to whom it was but a tragic story and not the recital of a harrowing experience through which they themselves had passed. The portent of the damning evidence given by the voice from the dead did not break through his armour of apparent indifference.

Then when, on Wednesday, the alleged catatonia asked for a cushion to make him comfortable, indicating, in the opinion of Crown alienists, that he was not suffering from the catatonic dementia precox on which his safety depended, the defence to the dastardly act was weakened and later swept away to the satisfaction of the jury. With no denial of the commission of the crime by the accused, there but remained the rapier play of the learned alienists, parrying and thrusting for ten hours. Refinement clashed on deduction as strange terms were bandied by the psychiatrics; this savant found insanity in the waking dullness and sleeping terrors of the prisoner while another mocked his grotesque attitude as a piece of clever acting; and there was always the inscrutable presence of McGaughey, terrifying in the unnatural attitude it suggested of mind and body, the centre of the storm that waxed and waned around. He made silence eloquent and lack of motion dramatic.

According to the jury's finding, McGaughey put up a marvellous effort in a titanic effort to escape the gallows.

Brilliance and Tension.

During the addresses of counsel yesterday the crowded court was held as in a trance. Brilliant as had been the efforts of the lawyers in the examination of witnesses, their genius was shown in the addresses to the court and jury in which they summed up and elucidated the evidence. The Crown prosecutor was particularly eloquent as he commented on the satifaction that must be felt by the jury if they were compelled to bring in an adverse verdict, in knowing that no stone had been left unturned by the excellent defence counsel to free the accused of the shadow that loomed over him.

Stigmatizing the crime as cowardly in its shooting in cold blood of a defenceless girl, he levelled the charge of cowardice at the prisoner as he sat with downcast eyes in the dock. "If any one of you is inclined to fail in his duty because of sympathy with the accused," he said, "just pause to think of a lonely grave out there in Emily Cemetery. Beatrice Fee's outlook upon the future was just as bright and life was just as dear to her as anyone here."

As Mr. White made his touching reference to the slain girl, Helen Stewart dropped her face in her hands and sobbed, and a woman in the rear of the court was taken out, hysterically weeping.

Counsel Exhausted.

The case against Fred McGaughey was presented by Crown Prosecutor Peter White, K.C., of Toronto, assisted by Crown Attorney J. E. Anderson, of Lindsay. Inspector John Miller of the Provincial Police was actively engaged in preparing the case and securing witnesses.

Leslie M. Frost, of Lindsay, as-

"The Sentence Of The Court Is That You Be Hanged."

Mr. Justice Logie: — "Prisoner at the bar, have you anything to say why sentence of this court should not be passed on you?"

McGaughey moved his lips soundlessly while Leslie M. Frost, his counsel, leaned on the dock speaking to him in low tones.

Mr. Justice Logie:—"Frederick William McGaughey, after a very fair trial and a very able defense you have been found guilty of the crime of murder.

Whether you really had the disease which your counsel has claimed for you, that you had, I am unable to determine. Whether the sentence I am about to pronounce upon you will be carried out depends upon the executive, and they, to whom I must make a report, will take into consideration the defense you have made and the reports of the doctors. I cannot hold out any hope of clemency or anything but that sentence will be carried out.

"I trust that a merciful God will have more mercy upon you than you had on Beatrice Fee.

"The sentence of the court is, that you be taken from the place where you now stand to the place from whence you came and there kept in close custody until the fifth day of December next, and that on that day you be taken to the place of execution and there hanged by the neck until you are dead, and may God have mercy on your soul."

"Turning to the jury, His Lordship said: "I think you could have come to no other conclusion on the evidence presented before you, and I think the county should be proud of twelve men, who have the courage to find a verdict in accordance with the evidence." His Lordship thanked the jurors for their services, which were arduous and rendered under difficult circumstances.

"Take away the prisoner," he said to the jail officials, and Fred McGaughey passed slowly through the court room door to the jail where he will remain until Friday, December 5, at daybreak. The date of his execution is fixed nine weeks from the day of sentence, in accordance with the law. It will be then twenty-seven weeks and six days since he killed his sweetheart.

MOTHER KILLS CHILD AND TAKES OWN LIFE

Had Brooded Over Death of Baby—"Nothing To Live For."

MONTREAL, Oct. 3.—(Canadian Press).—Depressed over the loss of her five months old baby a few months ago, and having told the neighbors that she "had nothing to live for," Mrs. William Brown, of Verdun, strangled her other child, a five-year-old girl Thursday afternoon, then went into the kitchen, turned on the gas and asphyxiated herself.

The tragedy was discovered by her husband when he returned from work. The child had been strangled with a piece of cotton.

The mother put her head into the oven of a gas range and turned on the gas, where she was found by her husband in a serious condition. He summoned a doctor but the women expired before he arrived.

Defense in Montreal Case Raise Technical Point in Bank Case.

WILL BE ARGUED

MONTREAL, October 3. — The case of Dr. Lucien Roch, Adam Parillo and Jack alias "Red" Miller, who are charged with holding up the cashier of the Bordeaux branch of the Bank of Hochelaga, was called yesterday afternoon before Judge Cusson, in the court of sessions, but was immediately postponed till next Monday for argument on a motion presented by Jos. Cohen, counsel for Parillo, who alleged that his client having been extradited from the United States for another alleged offence than that on which he was extradited.

His Lordship said that the point was important and fixed argument for Monday morning.

No further delay for the production of documents regarding promotions, arrests and other information concerning the police department will be asked by the city, as the clerks under Jules Crepeau, director of Public Works, have practically completed their task.

The papers required by the court by means of an order to the city issued last week, will be produced today.

FATHER OUSTED FROM BUSINESS BY ELDER SONS

Says He Made $500,000 as Ice Dealer—Happy at $15 a Week.

SCORNED BY SONS

Would Not Let Him Eat at Same Table With Them.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—A stocky, ruddy-faced man with a stubby brown moustache streaked with gray, founder of a $500,000 ice business in Brockton, Mass., started yesterday to work in a Brooklyn grocery store at $15 a week.

Not so long ago Edward W. Washburn was known as one of Brockton's wealthiest citizens, active in the civic life of the city and in business circles.

Yesterday, after, as he claimed, repeated disagreements with two of his three sons, he bravely tackled the job of a clerk in the corner grocery of Benjamin Shapiro, at Seventh street and Sixth avenue, Brooklyn.

To his new job he brought the same business talent which led him to accumulate seven ice manufacturing plants in Brockton which he said are worth $500,000.

Happy In New Work.

Washburn said he was happy in the new work and would "make good at it just as I made good in the ice business." But tears fell from his eyes as he spoke.

He declared he has no grievance against his wife, his twenty-eight-year-old invalid daughter or his youngest son. His hostility seemed to be centered against his two elder sons. Washburn said:

"They have given me a terrible time for years. For four years they would not let me eat at the same table with them. They would not recognize me. They scorned me in every way. Now that they have all my property they are welcome to it, but I will never go back to them, no matter what they offer me."

Has Five Grandchildren.

Washburn was identified at a Salvation Army hotel at No. 225 Bowery, by Patrick Callahan, the hotel engineer, when he showed clippings from a Brockton newspaper telling of the efforts of forty policemen to find his body in local swamps. Callahan notified the police, who brought Washburn to Headquarters and examined him.

After leaving Headquarters the ice man went to Brooklyn and accidentally found his way into the Shapiro grocery. Shapiro needed help and agreed to pay Washburn $15 a week and allow him to prepare his meals in the rear of the store.

Washburn declared yesterday he "never was so happy in his life." He is fifty-seven, and said he has five grandchildren.

CIVIC WELCOME TO KING AT WINNIPEG

Premier and Party Devote Two Days of Tour To Manitoba Capital.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 3.—(Canadian Press).—A civic reception was tendered Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King in the council chamber of the city hall here last night on his arrival from Fort William and Port Arthur, where he opened his western tour. Mr. King, who was accompanied by Hon. Charles Stewart, Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, Hon. Hal B. McGivern and Senator Haydon, was welcomed officially by Mayor Farmer.

The Prime Minister's programme calls for two busy days in Winnipeg. Today he is to address a luncheon of the Women's Canadian Club, and in the evening there will be a public reception in his honor. Saturday evening he and his colleagues will address a mass meeting here. At intervals he will be asked to receive many delegations with cases they wish to present for official consideration. The "On to the Bay" Association executive, which is endeavoring to secure the completion of the Hudson Bay Railway, will ask for a hearing and for an assurance of early action in the matter.

RICH BOY WHO YEARNED FOR LIFE OF COW PUNCHER MISSING FROM NEW YORK HOME

Franklin Rosbek, 14, Disappeared Without a Trace More Than Week Ago.

POLICE BAFFLED

Mother Prostrated By Anxiety — Father Expects Him Home When Meals Fail.

NEW YORK, Oct 3 — Franklin Rosbek, fourteen has been missing more than a week from his luxurious home at 219 West Eighty-First street. Police found that he had become acquainted with a vagabond hunchback and at first expressed the opinion that he had become tired of being babied and had gone out to see the world.

The boy's mother is prostrated under the strain of uncertainty and of fear that he has been kidnapped. She refused to believe that he has run way with a vagabond.

"My baby an associate of a cheap hunchback? Never!" she exclaims. "These persons are not in his class."

Meanwhile the father says: "Franklin will turn up as soon as the meals become irregular I am sure he is on the road somewhere. He wanted to go west and punch cows."

Captain Agnes, in charge of the Missing Persons Bureau, at Police headquarters said yesterday:—

Thirty detectives at work on the case have failed to turn up a single live clue. They did explode, however, many reports that the boy had been seen at various places in the city."

One theory considered the possibility of Franklin having hired as a bell-hop on an ocean liner. He is about the age and size to get a job aboard a liner.

COURT UPHOLDS SERUM MANDATE

Sarnia Children Must Be Vaccinated or Remain Home From School.

NO EPIDEMIC NOW

SARNIA, Ont., Oct. 3.—(Canadian Pres).—Sarnia children who were refused admittance to the City schools for non-compliance with the vaccination order issued by the local board of health must remain away from school until such time as the order has been compiled with or until the matter has been finally settled in the courts in event that opponents of the vaccination order decide to proceed further with legal action.

Justice Rose, presiding at the Assizes here, declined to grant an interim mandatory order for which application was made by F. P. Dawson acting for Oliver Leneve, a ratepayer, and others. John Cowan, jr., of the Board of Education and P. R. Gilbert and M. T. McCrodie, school principals, opposed the granting of the interim order. His Lordship was somewhat noncommittal in his remarks on the application, following the submission of evidence by affidavit. He said the vaccination order of Dr. Wm. Logie, apepared to be valid as far as he could see, but commented on the doubtful necessity of the order being enforced while there was no smallpox existing. The case may come before the next Assizes in December if those opposed to the vaccination order continue their opposition.

WILDEST GRAIN MARKETS SINCE THE WORLD WAR

Wheat Crossed the $1.50 Line in Chicago Pit's Hectic Trading.

EUROPE BUYING

Corn, Oats and Barley Advanced in Sympathy With Wheat Movement.

CHICAGO, October 3 (Canadian Press). — It was a red letter day for higher prices of farm produce on Thursday. The star role was taken by wheat, which overtopped $1.50 0a bushel, and reached $1.51 1-2 for May delivery, a record unequalled since 1921.

In one of the wildest markets since the World War, all grain values went skyward. The impelling force was a tremendous volume of speculative and export buying based largely on indications of severe shortage of crop production in Europe, a result of persistent unseasonable weather, and of other untoward conditions.

Closing prices were at virtually the tip-top figures reached,

LIFE.

Is what you make it. Neglect often makes it dull. Especially when you fail to heed the warning from 'heavy' aching eyes. "Nervous debility" often arises from poor vision, your efficiency is reduced—things do not seem bright. Eye strain does this. See W. H. Lacey, Optometrist, 410 George street. Phone 1160.

A country landlord was walking through his extensive grounds one day when he was surprised to see a stranger fishing in a strictly preserved stretch of the river.

"Look here, sir," snapped the owner, "what d'ye mean? Don't you know you're catching my fish?"

"You're quite mistaken, sir," he replied blandly. "I've been three hours: I haven't landed a single one, and all my bait's gone. I'm feedin' 'em, sir, not catchin' 'em."

Law Enforcement and Government Control

THE experience of British Columbia, Quebec, Manitoba and Alberta proves that it is more difficult to enforce the liquor laws, where liquor is sold under government control, than it is where there is prohibition.

The Manitoba Free Press said, Nov. 1923:

"Police are prepared to admit that liquor is being sold in hundreds of suites and homes in Winnipeg and they are powerless to do anything."

The law amendments committee of the Manitoba Legislature discussed during the 1924 session, the case of houses connected with stores. The Crown Prosecutor, who was present said:

"There are a 100 such in Winnipeg and from 90 of them liquor is being sold today."

Illicit sale has been encouraged and emboldened in Manitoba and cannot be checked while the provision is wide open to "have, keep, give and consume liquor" in one's "temporary or permanent" residence. Law enforcement is very largely a farce in Manitoba.

A FOOLISH ARGUMENT

"You can't enforce the O.T.A.", say some. "Therefore it should be modified or repealed."

That the law is violated is admitted. In Toronto for instance with its population of over 500,000 in 1922 there were 1372 convictions for breaches of the O.T.A. But that same year there were 13,806 breaches of the Motor Vehicles Act. By a parity of reasoning that Act should be modified or repealed. Indeed the argument for such modification or repeal would be ten times stronger, for there were ten times more citizejns who refused to obey that law.

What would be said of the man, who because of this violation of the Motor Vehicles Act, would advocate the raising of the speed limit for motor vehicles in the City of Toronto from 20 to 25, 30, 40 or 50 miles per hour?

The higher the speed limit the less the margin of safety. The greater the facilities for obtaining booze, the less margin of safety.

ANOTHER COMPARISON

Moderationists argue that because there were 1372 convictions for breaches of the O.T.A. in Toronto in 1922 the O.T.A. is a failure and should be voted out But inToronto in 1914, under license, there were 16,981 convictions for "drunk and disorderly." Which law has been the greatest success?

THE TEST OF GOOD CITIZENSHIP

One of the foundation principles of good citizenship is respect for law, and, as disregard to law leads to anarchy, we appeal to you, as citizens of this Province, to maintain a spirit of true patriotism by giving your loyal support to the enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act, and by showing your disapproval of everything which tends to the lowering of the dignity of the law.

WAR POSTPONED BY RAIN

A terrific rainstorm halted fighting between the Chekiang and Kiangsu armies west and northwest of the city today. Chinese military traditions provide for suspension of hostilities when the weather is bad. —Associated Press despatch from Shanghai.

The Chinese army knows enough to come in when it rains. Whenever there is a heavy downpour in a Chinese war the generals call it on account of wet grounds and give both armies rain checks entitling them to come out and resume fighting again on the next clear day. They don't see any sense of having a war when they can't enjoy it.

Possible Future War Bulletins.

Serbia—What promised to be one of the best battles of the Balkan season was called off today by heavy showers just before the time set for the launching of the first offensive. The forces on both sides were prepared for a desperate encounter and a great crowd of spectators had assembled when clouds that had been hanging over the battlefield since early morning broke and sent armies and witnesses scurrying to shelter.

The generals held a conference with the grounds-keeper and decided to wait 15 minutes. At the end of the time it was still raining and the war was postponed until Tuesday afternoon at the same hour.

Mexico City—At a conference of the committee in charge of revolutions held at the committee headquarters it was decided not to begin this month's struggle between the federalists and insurrectionists Saturday afternoon as advertised.

The heavy rains of the past 24 hours have left the fields in very bad condition and even with a day of hot, clear weather it is unlikely the grounds would dry out sufficiently for a war of the calibre the public has a right to expect.

Constantinople—The war begun here last spring has turned out to be a flat failure due to continued rains. "It has been the worst season for wars in many years," said General Ismet Pasha today as he sent out a call for 200,000 able-bodied umbrella members. The weather over the week-ends and on holidays has been particularly annoying."

It is understood the general is being severely criticized for starting a war and not taking out any rain insurance.

Washington, 1936.—Under the sunniest of skies and with the mellowest of autumn breezes blowing, the long awaited war between America and Japan at last got under way today, after a long series of postponements that threatened disaster. Typical artillery weather is now prevailing and the generals and men are inspired by the fact the weather forecast is fair Wednesday, with slight drop in temperature Thursday.

In order to avoid any misunderstanding in the event of further wet weather the War Office announced today that should rain fall the war would have to go five and a half innings or not count.

THE GUMPS—RIDE 'EM, COWBOY

FRED M'GAUGHEY MAINTAINS STOICAL SILENCE AS JUDGE CONSIGNS HIS SOUL TO MERCIFUL GOD AND HIS BODY, ETC.

sisted by his brother, Cecil G. Frost, defended the accused.

The jury was composed of William Stoke, Roy Sprole, William Golden, James Endicott, W. Hazelton, J. N. Campbell, W. Graham, Isaac Naylor, Joseph Short, Thomas Alsister, J. B. Roger and James Robson.

Defence Address.

Leslie M. Frost expressed his appreciation of his responsibility in addressing the jury and remarked that the final responsibility rests with the jury.

"The verdict you must give is your verdict. Each one of you must give the verdict. You have taken the jurors' oath: 'I will render a true verdict. So help me, God.' That oath has the power to raise the man who takes it to a high plane, and you must consider carefully the evidence adduced in Court before you."

After explaining the charge of murder, stressing the fact that the slayer must have the guilty mind, Mr. Frost pointed out that culpable homicide may not amount to murder. One case is where the accused person, by reason of intoxication, is incapable of forming the intent to do the act.

The defence of insanity is not a new defence. It is nearly a hundred years old. It means that no person shall be convicted of murder committed while labouring under a disease of the mind that rendered him incapable of knowing the nature and quality of the act and knowing the difference between right and wrong.

Insanity takes away the guilty mind; it makes it so that a person is so demented that he is incapable of appreciating what he is doing. Insanity may be produced by intoxication as well as by any other cause.

"All the onus of proving insanity is upon the defence. You must be clearly satisfied that the accused was insane at the time of the commission of the deed; but it is not necessary that every reasonable doubt should have been removed from your mind."

In recounting the history of the accused's life the speaker pointed to his slowness at school and his neglect of work. "He abandoned the heritage left him by his pioneer father."

Meeting Miss Fee, the accused learned to love her and she returned his love. She went to Toronto where she took a position, probably to earn money to buy furnishings for her home and her wedding clothes. In the meantime McGaughey commenced to drink.

"Was the accused mistaken that Beatrice Fee loved him and promised to marry him. Were these protestations prompted by badness? I don't think so."

His grandmother suffered from senile dementia and his mother had delusions. Fred McGaughey showed all through his life that he was not suffering from evilness but from a form of mental disease, and it was progressing steadily.

On 21st May Beatrice Fee wrote a letter to Fred—the ordinary letter a young lady might write to a young man for whom she cared, arranging to meet him on 24th May.

On 23rd May Fred was very intoxicated. On Saturday he took the girl to Lindsay where he got some liquor. He drove out in the country and stopped the car, appearing vicious. Beatrice searched his pockets in the playful way a young lady might go through the pockets of the man she loved, and found pearl earrings and a compact. She asked where he got them, and he replied "Goodness only knows."

After driving back to Lindsay and getting more liquor Fred took the young ladies home. There Miss Fee held Miss Stewart's hand and refused to be left alone with Fred in the car.

On Sunday Fred and Beatrice started off for a drive, apparently all right.

The next we see of Fred and Beatrice is at the McGaughey farmhouse in the evening. Lawrence walks into the house and hears Fred and Beatrice talking loudly in the garage.

The picture painted by Mr. Frost was that of a normal pair of young lovers enjoying themselves although Fred had been drinking. There is nothing to indicate anything unusual.

What transpired after that must be judged by the statements made by the girl Mr. Frost said, reading the several statments made to Helen Stewart, Wilbur Fee, Dr. Moir, and Dr. Rich.

"You saw that little girl, Miss Stewart, in the box, and she appeared to be nervous. She said she was not nervous in the house that night, but can you believe that? She went into the room where her girl friend lay bleeding and kneeled down beside her. Isn't there every possibility of a mistake having been made with Fred McGaughey tearing about the house and Dr. Rich rushing about attending the wounded girl?"

In the hospital with nurses flitting around and doctors attending her, Beatrice Fee realised her position and made a statement in full contemplation nof death. Then she says under those circumstances that Fred McGaughey made no improper proposals or attempts, which story is the more credible? One was taken by an excited young lady under abnormal circumstances — the other by two level-headed men. There seems no other explanation open to me than that Miss Stewart made a mistake.

Sick from Poison.

In the statement to Miss Stewart the dying girl is said to have said: "He shot me without reason." In the statement to Wilbur Fee she said he shot her in a fit of temper when crazy drunk; to Dr. Moir she said they quarrelled about the date of their marriage. Does anything there furnish a motive for the killing of this girl? If there was anything wanting to show Fred McGaughey was bereft of his senses, this is the best possible evidence.

McGaughey had been drinking, and the dying girl told Miss Stewart "I never knew one man could drink so much." Is it natural that a normal young man who loved a girl who loved him would indulge in liquor to that extent while out with her? It was surely an indication that he was so diseased mentally that he had no control over himself.

Mr. Frost explained McGaughey's statement to Dr. Rich over the telephone that he was ill was probably true, he having taken paris green and expecting to die beside his sweetheart over whom he stood.

This man shot this girl on the roadside. The road is the shortest way from his home to Omemee. If he had wanted to do the deed at a lonely place, what lonelier place could he have found than his own home? He did not throw her body in the swamp and drive away in his car. He made the deed public himself. He told the doctor, "I believe I have shot a girl." Was it merely his consciousness awaking to the fact that the girl was wounded and something should be done? He had lots of time to escape if he had the guilty feeling. If he had the guilty mind surely he would have got his car and driven away. He was excited and threw things around the house. Is not that the action of a man who has not the mentality to appreciate the nature and quality of the act he had committed? The whole circumstances taken together indicate a man whose reason is so dethroned that he does not know what he is doing.

All McGaughey wanted was to escape from this world. The indentation of the firing pin in the shell in the chamber of the revolver indicates that McGaughey was only prevented from taking his life by a defective shell.

Lack of motive is an indication of insanity, Mr. Frost said. He shot her without reason.

Referring to the testimony of the alienists, Mr. Frost enlarged upon their ability and standing and recalled how they declared the accused was suffering from catatonic dementia precox. They arrived at this decision on the investigation they made immediately after the crime. He said the evidence of the Crown experts and witnesses differs almost entirely from the evidence of the defence experts. If Dr. Ryan had wanted to examine the man, surely he could have asked the man's counsel for permission? McGaughey did not say anything to him which was natural after he had been warned to silence by his counsel.

"You have to choose between the examinations made by Dr. Beamer, Dr. Ryan, and Dr. English close to the crime and those made by Dr. Armour and Dr. Clare several months afterwards."

Regarding the attitude of the accused in Court, Mr. Frost said it is an indication that he is not mentally right.

"Can a man with McGaughey's alcohol drinking, his Fourth Form education, and his wild life, sit there in the box, as he does, and not leave the impression that he is not mentally right?

I submit to you that there is clear evidence before you which would entitle you to bring in a verdict of not guilty on the grounds of insanity. From the circumstances surrounding the crime and the evidence adduced before you, I think you can find that he did not realise the nature and quality of the act and did not know it was wrong.

My responsibility in the matter is practically over, and the responsibility will become yours.

Stirring Appeal.

This autumn of the year reminds us that some of the leaves fall early on quiet afternoons and some hang to the trees late into the gales of winter before they drop. So it is with us. Some day we must fall—some early—some in the sunset of a completed life. Sooner or later we all must leave the tree of life. Then the material things of this life don't count. It is only the acts and things we have done. One of the acts will be to bring in a verdict in this case, and when the sum total is added, the King versus McGaughey may not be the least of those deeds.

Your position is an honorable one. You represent the people of this great country and our institutions of justice. You have sworn that you will render a true verdict, "so help you, O God." It will add up in your sum total of deeds to be presented at the last day when you stand for judgment, as we all must. It has lifted your deciding power in touch with the Almighty.

In view of your duty to the people, and of your sublime oath, it is consistent that you bring in a verdict that Frederick William McGaughey did not wilfully murder Beatrice Fee."

The Crown's Address.

Crown Prosecutor Peter White, K.C., remarked on the splendid attention given his learned friend during his excellent address. He congratulated his learned friends on the very excellent efforts they had made on behalf of their unfortunate client. "It will be a source of satisfaction to you to know that no stone has been left unturned to free the accused of the charge now levelled against him," he told the jury.

"Sympathy for the person accused of a cowardly crime like this is natural. It is a cowardly crime, to shoot down a defenceless girl. But in a court of British justice sympathy has no part, and if any of you is that kind of sympathetic person inclined to fail in his duty because of sympathy, just pause to think of a lonely grave out there in Emily Cemetery. Beatrice Fee's outlook upon the future was just as bright and life was just as dear to her as anyone here.

"This is the kind of justice typified by this picture of the Goddess of Justice who is blindfold so that she cannot see who is putting the weight in the scales, and that she may do justice between the parties," Mr. White said, referring to a picture on the court-room wall.

Ample Motive.

Correcting, as he said, some wrong impressions given by the defence counsel, Mr. White said there was the very best motive in the world for the slaying, voiced by the accused weeks before the tragedy, when he said he would prevent the girl living in the city and he was going to have her or no one would have her.

"Hasn't the lust of a man for a woman been the cause of killings, murders, even the upheavel of Empires?" he asked. "It is the strongest passion in the human breast. Could there be a stronger motive?

"When the temptation came he was powerless; not because of mental disease but because he had pictured it in his mind. Why else did he carry the revolver?

"I tell you, gentlemen of the jury, when you allow a sinful thought to linger in your mind, when the time comes you will carry it out.

No Alcohol Defence.

"It is not intended to suggest that this man was insane because of alcohol. But there has been a suggestion that you might find a verdict of manslaughter because the man was so drunk he was incapable of forming an intention.

"There is no evidence from which twelve men could reasonably come to that conclusion, but let me suggest that, to do so, would not be keeping faith with your oath.

"The man was not so drunk he did not know what he was doing when he drove down this road and fired two shots; then fifteen minutes later, three more shots; took the girl to the house and laid her on the bed and called the doctor.

Insanity No Defense

That criminal code does not mention insanity as a defense It says a man may be excused if he was suffering from mental disease to such an extent that he did not know the nature and quality of the act and that it was wrong

A man may be as mad as a march hare and still be guilty. Mental disease is no defense unless it deprived the man of knowing the nature and quality of the act and that it was wrong. If he knew either, he is guilty.

If when that man shot Beatrice Fee he knew it was wrong or he knew the nature and quality of the act he did, he is guilty.

All you have to do in this case, and it's very simple, is decide: Did he shoot her. There is no denial of that. Then here is your way of approach: Fred McGaughey shot Beatrice Fee with that gun by putting four bullet wounds in her chest. All you have to ask yourself is, "did he know he was doing wrong?" You don't have to ask "was he insane".

"Did he know the nature or quality of the act—did he know what he was doing?"

If you answer yes to either of these two questions then the verdict must be "guilty".

The juryman must not think of the consequences of his verdict, because he cannot render a true verdict between himself and his God if he is biased.

There is an overwhelming mass of evidence showing beyond a peradventure, beyond any shadow of doubt, that he knew it was wrong.

Premeditation Alleged

Why was he packing a gun three weeks before the event?

Why did he have the discussion with Lawrence Madill if he hadn't a moral sense?

What a senseless position it is to say a man could worry because of the dangers of the city to the girl he loved and then kill her without knowing what he was doing!

Why did he go to that lonely road to commit the deed?

A man doesn't want to live in a house where he had killed a girl. He had many reasons for taking her down this lonely road to where he had this pasture land. If there wasn't some sinister purpose in going there, why did he leave the house at all?

There were two shots, and then after an interval three shots. During that interval didn't he realize what he was doing?

When he did shoot her he didn't run away, it is true. He brought her back to the house in the hope of hope that he would not have to pay the penalty.

He had too much brains to run away. He realized if he ran away he would only be caught. Another man might have got into a panic, a frenzy anyway. He did better than that. He said, 'I'll say I'm crazy.' A few hours later he said, 'I'll get Frost and he'll try to prove I'm crazy,' and for two hours this afternoon Frost has been trying to prove to you that he is crazy.

Do you see the ludicrous position in which my learned friend places you?

If you find the accused insane you say, 'You didn't run away; you said you were crazy; you were right.'

No one has ever said he attempted to commit suicide. I will say he made a bluff at it because a crazy man often does that, and he wanted to convey the impression that he was crazy.

McGaughey always wanted to live. He asked for Frost to defend him. He could have said, 'I am guilty,' and that would have ended it. But he wanted Frost to fight for him.

Don't you say that that is a deliberate lie calculated to deceive?

And they say that man is crazy!

Don't you know the rarest of all things, ordinary common-sense, is worth ten times all the expert testimony in the world? You know if I slap you in the face you will be angry; if I tell you a funny story you will laugh.

Of all the testimony in this case from medical men, the attitude of Dr. White and his display of common-sense, place him in the best position to give a common-sense opinion as to this man's condition.

Remember it is not for the Crown to prove this man did know it was wrong. Can you conceive this man did not know it was wrong when he knew the commandment, 'Thou shalt not kill'?

Power of Selection.

He telephoned for Dr. Rich, selecting him from all the doctors in Lindsay. I tell you, a man who can do that knows what he is doing. He drove the car with a dying girl in it with blood all over the car, the girl wearing a torn waist with a broken button; her hat on the back seat; and with bullets in the car.

These are the silent witnesses as to whether there was an assault.

Would a dying girl say the words, 'Absolutely no; no such thing,' as Dr. Moir said? The fair meaning of her shaken head is that the accused had not succeeded in his attempt.

This man had a bad mind, the kind of mind a man would have to carry a revolver in one pocket and a bottle of liquor in the other; driving a car with one hand, with the other wrapped around the girl who loved him.

Expert Testimony.

Regarding the expert testimony, Mr. White said it must be considered in the light of its presentation. The Crown subpoenaed these three witnesses and brought them to court. They were favorable to the defence. The experts for the Crown knew they were to exercise an impartial judgment, whereas the experts for the defence approach it in just the way Dr. Beamer frankly admitted. He said he suggested the answers in his questions. "Can you wonder the information the doctor suggested was forthcoming when the accused knew the doctor might save him from an awful fate?

Here is a man who is said to be so foolish he did not know what he was doing, said to have discovered his own insanity. Neither man, woman, child, nor angel, doctor nor layman, had ever suspected there was anything wrong with McGaughey until he shot Beatrice Fee, and discovered his own insanity.

Might do in Chicago.

Perhaps a story like that might do say in Chicago, but where will we be if the time ever comes in the province of Ontario when a jury of 12 men will render a verdict of insanity on the man's say so, and a concocted story like this?

Drunkenness not Enough.

A man has no right to go and make himself blind drunk and go and shoot a person and say he did'nt know what he was doing. If that ever becomes the law you may as well take the law against murder off the statute books.

It was cowardly to shoot Beatrice Fee and McGaughey was too cowardly to shoot himself. Perhaps that is what is wrong with him now as he sits in the dock—he is afraid.

Difficult Task.

One of the prides and boasts of our great civilization is that justice is administered fairly and fearlessly. It would be easy for me to say "Let him off," but if I did, what would you think of me? You would say I was not fit to occupy the position the Crown has put upon me.

That is the standard required of you, that you will fearlessly do your duty, and if you want peace, you must unflinchingly satisfy your consciences.

There is no repose so restful and no sleep so sweet as that which follows a duty well done."

Mawkish Sentimentality.

"In these days of mawkish sentimentality," said His Lordship, in summing up, "I think it is an insult to a Canadan juryman to hold out to him the threat of the hereafter if he comes to a decision adverse to the client whom he represents. I don't like to think there are weak kneed jurors who can be terrified in that way. I look to you to come to your decision on the evidence alone."

In the ordinary criminal case the prisoner is entitled to the benefit of the doubt inasmuch as if there is a reasonable doubt such as would affect the mind of a reasonable man upon the evidence as to the fact of the crime, the prisoner is entitled to the benefit of the doubt. But where the defense is insanity, so called, the prisoner must prove that himself, and if he fails to prove it to your satisfaction you may convict him because he is presumed to be sane."

His Lordship explained again the import of the charge of murder and continued: "Drunkenness was not put forward as a defense, but a great deal was said of it in the address of counsel. Drunkenness may induce insanity, but it is not suggested that he was a maniac from drink. The evidence is the other way.

In the case of Frederick McGaughey there is no suggestion that he was an idiot, or that he had delusions. A man, though insane, may be convicted unless he is so insane that he does not comprehend the nature and quality of the act and that it was wrong. Brainstorm, homicidal mania or sudden impulse does not excuse.

"If every intoxicated man is to be allowed to plead insanity when there is no insanity, I am afraid the foundations of society will be overturned," His Lordship said.

The jury retired at 5.30 o'clock.

Current Baseball Scandal May Develop Other Sensations.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—(Canadian Press).—Current baseball scandal, confession of an attempt to "buy" a crucial game, and ousting of Jimmy O'Connell and Coach Alva J. "Cozy" Dalon of New York Giants promised last night to develop other sensations. Judge K. M. Landis, to whom O'Connell confessed, declares matter is closed incident. But Ban Johnson, president of American League, declares he will demand an investigation by Federal Judiciary. He declares world series scheduled to be played between New York Giants and Washington senators starting on Saturday, should be called off.

"We must find out al facts," Ban Johnson said in Chicago, "and bring into lime light every individual who may know of this attempt to bribe Heinie Sand of Philadelphia team to throw last Saturday's game.

"The integrity of baseball seems to be menaced."

OBITUARY.

MR. HOWARD KEEGAN

(Contributed)

A week ago we laid him to rest in Gods' Acre. We left him literally embanked with flowers, facing the sunrise. We turned away with a keen human sense of great personal and community loss. Yet we know the grave does not enfold him, but his spirit forges on.

For a whole year Mr. Keegan had known that the Angel of Death was hovering near him, yet he made no reference to his failing strength or shortening days, gave no murmur of complaint, which in itself testifies to his high courage and firm faith.

He was a man of few words. He lived his creed. His name and integrity stood for the same thing, as scores of men who met in in business in this community know well. The following incident tells it all. A man stood leaning against a marble stone, quietly watching, upon that golden September day in the white silent city. One near by remarked to him, "You do not often see so large a company of people in a small country grave-yard." His reply was brief but eloquent—"No, this was one of the straight men." What higher tribute could one wish!

It is a real truth that what we have once had we can never lose. And while our good friend has gone from our sight, yet the influence of his rare spirit will remain, and our lives must be braver and better, sweeter, and more charitable, more honest and square, as we remember him. There was much in his life to emulate, and while we shall sorely miss his quiet, courageous, reassurring presence, his call to us from the Other Shore is to higher endeavor and truer living.

"Dead? No, don't speak of him that way!
Don't think of him as dead!
He's only just gone on a piece
A little way ahead.

He's travelling still the same high-way
That he, with us, has trod;
Merely out-distanced us a bit
Upon the road to God.

Dead? Never with a thought like that
The smallest moment spend
He's simply gone beyond our sight,
He's just around the bend."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

GOVERNMENT CONTROL.

To the Editor of Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Government control, as we have it, and as they had many trials of it in the United States, has turned out, in every case, to be a great disappointment. The words "Government control" would lead one to expect some reasonable measures to lessen the drink evil. But it does the very opposite. It turns on a flood of liquor worse than we ever had, multiplies the number of places where it can be bought and increases the number of bootleggers who go round peddling it.

The worst evils of the traffic are that it causes insanity, degeneracy, and increases disease. Men are getting weaker, smaller and more subject to disease. Both French and English commissions agree that a man may never be really drunk and yet may injure his brain and leave behind him a delicate, nervous, complaining family. It is plain to be seen that the white race is doomed unless the drink evil can be conquered. Prohibition has been doing great work along that line, but we must have patience. No other law on the statute books has ever done one-half as much good as prohibition.

Government control in Quebec and Montreal seems to have gone mad. Think of a man being permitted to purchase fourteen bottles of whiskey in one day. The powers of evil seem to have got control of the situation. Or think of a Government, in a small country like Quebec, selling fifteen million dollars worth of such death-dealing stuff to their people. Drunken or drinking people cannot compete with sober people. No use blaming the Government. They will do what the people demand. The responsibility rests on the voters. If they won't come out and vote we will all have to suffer for years for their neglect. Hold on to what we have till we get something better.

UNEMPLOYMENT.

The Federal Government declares that the unemployment problem is not an Ottawa question, but is a question for Provincial and municipal authorities to worry about.

Premier Ferguson informs a deputation of civic representatives that he is flatly opposed to any system of doles.

So there you are.

The season of greatest unemployment is almost at hand, and it looks as if the municipalities will be left holding the bag with little or no assistance from either Ottawa or Toronto.

With Premier Ferguson's views on doles the Examiner is in accord, but the Province has a certain amount of responsibility that might be discharged by the opening out of as much public work as can be carried on during the winter months, a policy that would be of considerable assistance in solving the problem.

The same thing applies to the Federal Government.

It has encouraged immigration to Canada in the face of conditions that indicated that a large number of newcomers would mean a proportionately large amount of unemployment.

In view of that fact, it cannot get rid of its duty by merely attempting to shift the onus to the Provincial and municipal authorities.

THE HONESTY OF SPORT.

The school of critics who profess to believe that sport in general and professional sport in particular is operated on a crooked basis will find fresh ammunition in the announcement that two members of the New York Giants have been expelled from baseball because of an attempt to "fix" one of the players of the Philadelphia club to throw a crucial game to New York.

The episode will be deeply regretted, but unpleasant as it is it does not condemn all sport—just as it does not condemn professional baseball.

When the amount of money that hinges upon the result of one game sometimes is considered the wonder is not that among all those engaged in baseball there should be men weak enough to yield to temptation, but rather that cases of the kind that has cast its shadow over the New York Giants are not more numerous.

It has to be or it could not survive.

The old saying, "You can fool some of the people all the time, etc.," complies to baseball just as much as it does to anything else in this world, and no sport could deviate very far from the straight and narrow path of honesty and retain the confidence of millions of people.

THE EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

The Dominion Government has asked the courts to decide whether eight-hour legislation comes within Federal or Provincial jurisdiction.

It is probable that the only interest of the Federal administration in this course is to pass the buck to the Provinces, while it is equally certain that the Provincial authorities are by no means anxious to have the matter thrown upon their shoulders.

Whether or not the Provinces have any jurisdiction in regard to such legislation there is little doubt that until there is some assurance of its adoption on a national scale no Province would be wise in endeavouring to inaugurate the eight-hour day.

Unless all the Provinces are bound by such legislation it would be suicide for one of them to hamper itself in this manner.

The passing of an eight-hour day by Ontario, for example, would mean the loss to the Province of many industries, which would be shifted to Quebec where no such restrictions upon industry are contemplated.

The wisdom of the eight-hour day policy at all may be a debatable question, but there does not seem to be much chance of making a strong case in favour of its adoption by any particular Province.

If it comes it will have to come in all the Provinces at once—because no Provincial administration will surely be foolish enough to saddle itself with legislation of this nature so long as the rest of the Dominion is without such laws.

"ROUNDING OUT OUR EXISTENCE."

In his address of welcome to the members of the victorious Washington baseball club, President Coolidge made use of a sentence that should be remembered by civic administrations everywhere as indicative of a policy that might well be a part of every city's programme.

"We recognize," said the chief executive, "that there is something more in life than the grinding routine of daily toil, that we can develop a better manhood and womanhood, a more attractive youth and a wiser maturity by rounding out our existence with a wholesome interest in sport."

That is the doctrine the Examiner has endeavoured, albeitlamely, to preach in Peterborough.

We firmly believe that a community that has plenty of facilities for indulging in healthful recreation is the best kind of a town in which to live.

The city that gives its boys and its young men—and its girls, too—plenty of playing grounds has no crime wave to worry about and its public health bill is small.

"A wholesome interest in sport" by the civic authorities is an intimation to the outside world that that particular community is alive and progressive.

Manufacturers seeking a site for the location of their business like to select such a town because they know that they'll be able to count upon retaining their employees, for most workmen like to live in a place where there are opportunities for recreation.

In fact, the majority of them will not stay where such facilities are lacking.

President Coolidge's words should not be forgotten; they offer a valuable tip to most communities.

A ROMAN SKYSCRAPER.

Maestro Mussolini, conductor of the Italian National Orchestra in the Roman Parliament and Director-General, pro tem., of the destinies of the Italian nation, has conceived an idea that is well calculated to startle Rome, says the Montreal Star. He would build a skyscraper a thousand feet high, that would tower out every historic edifice in the Eternal City and look down upon the top of the cross that crowns St. Peter's itself. It would be a monument visible for miles around, for it would surmount the Seven Hills, and see the Capitoline height as a mole-hill.

There is something big about the scheme—something that would naturally appeal to a man like Mussolini. It will bring Rome up-to-date, and even Montreal may join the procession. Apparently the only difficulty in the way—so far—is the impossibility of securing a site within the city that would be large enough for the erection of such a building without pulling down some ancient palaces or other historic monument. Hitherto the Roman has been very jealous of his storied past. There is a special body in Rome to which is entrusted the conservation of the city's historic buildings, and that body has done its work in the past with a reverence almost amounting to fanaticism.

But what is such a matter to the creator of the Facisti? He will deliver a speech in which he will convince his hearers that it is in the highest interests of Rome, commercially, spiritually and otherwise, to have a building one thousand feet high, the highest in the world, from the top of which the whole of the world's most famous city may be taken in at a glance, —though you can do that now from more than one height,—and which shall stand as a monument to the modern genius that has set Italy upon its feet—meaning Maestro Mussolini himself. Or—if he fails to convince—he will issue a blackshirted mandate. And then, be very sure, there will be a great hurry to start digging the foundations. Mussolini is not dictator for nothing. The Palazzo Mussolini will doubtless figure in the guide books ten years from now. But let the builders beware lest they disturb the ghost of Tiberius!

A COSTLY WEAPON.

Lloyd George, who has the journalistic instinct for touching drab and sombre facts with the tint of romance, argues against the wastefulness of strikes by telling his hearers that 36,000,000 days have been lost to British industry, during the last five years, through this destructive agency, says the Montreal Star.

Britain goes back to the year 1765 in her strike history, for in that year the Northumberland miners refused to work for several weeks in protest against the prevailing practice of annual contracts of service. These conflicts grew in intensity and in the number of men affected. In 1884 forty thousand miners in the North of England were out for eighteen weeks, while in 1892 came the great struggle when more than 300,000 men were affected. For violence no British strike can rival the disorders of the Chicago strike of June and July, 1894, when riots, intimidations, assaults, arson and burglary were unwelcome attendants and the loss to the country was estimated at $100,000,000.

Today, however, there is growing up a body of intelligent and humanitarian opinion that sees only waste, hopeless conflict and class hatred in the present methods of settling disputes. This body of opinion is firmly convinced of the fundamental soundness of the capitalist system and its productivity. It believes that there is much waste through competition, but it holds that the sum total of this waste is less than the unavoidable wastes of a Socialistic system. It insists that the law of supply and demand must be the basic governor of wages as well as of merchandise; that forced increases in wages only result in increase in prices and the benefitting of one group of workers at the expense of the other. It believes in a frank discussion of industrial problems with employes, but it would share profits only with those who are willing to share the risks of the enterprise by investing in its securities. Finally it seeks within each industry to insure regularity of employment and protection against sickness, incapacity and death.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Chicago has a homicide daily, so they say. Well, a murder a day will keep the wolf away—from the alienist's door.

There is one good thing about the Canadian climate anyway. If you don't like the brand where you are you can always find something else. Thus while Southern Ontario had rain and the Prairie Provinces summer weather, North Bay reported three inches of snow.

Hon. W. E. Raney says that the present Government is not enforcing the Ontario Temperance Act. And he forgets to add the word "either."

In Washington today the question is not who'll be the next President, but who will win the first game of the World's Series tomorrow.

If the wishes of the whole Continent go for anything, they might as well hand the World's Series honours to Washington now.

AMALGAMATION OF TWO CANADA BANKS

Standard Bank and Sterling Bank Have Been Converted Into One Institution.

TORONTO, October 2 (Canadian Press). — The amalgamation of the Standard Bank of Canada and the Sterling Bank of Canada, subject to the approval of the shareholders of both institutions at meetings called for 17th November, was announced last night.

The Acting Minister of Finance has given his consent, according to the bank's official statement, to an agreement being entered into between these two organisations which will be consummated as soon as the ratification is given by the shareholders of the institutions interested and approved by the Governor-in-Council under the provisions laid down in the Bank Act.

The agreement provides for the exchange of two shares of the Standard Bank stock for three shares of Sterling Bank stock.

The combined organisation will be known as the Standard Sterling Bank of Canada.

Both banks occupy strong positions and the reason for the amalgamation is the recognition on the part of the boards of the two institutions of the greater ability to meet the needs of the banking public through the combined resources and the greater earning power through the reduction of overhead charges.

Arthur F. White president of the Standard Bank, will be president of the amalgamated banks, G. T. Somers will be chairman of the board of directors, and Thomas H. Wood, vice-president.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, October 3 (Canadian Press). — There was some demand from foreign buyers for grain here yesterday, but as the prices were below those asked, no business was transacted.

Sales of Manitoba and No. 1 spring wheat were made to local exporters in the domestic market at 8 cents per bushel over the Winnipeg October option, and No. 3 Northern at 1 cents per bushel under the same option c.i.p. bay ports for the first half October shipment.

There was no change in the condition of the market for Ontario barley yesterday.

A decidedly stronger feeling prevailed here for spring wheat grades of flour, and millers yesterday announced a further rise in prices of 25 cents per barrel. Prices in winter wheat flour moved up 10 cents per barrel.

An improved demand from United States buyers featured the millfeed trade, and prices were well maintained. The volume of business was large. Standard grades rolled oats were advanced 15c to 25c per bag, with an active business transacted.

Moderate sales took place in baled hay, and prices showed no change.

A feature of the local egg market was the strong feeling that developed for fresh extras, and prices were marked up 2 to 4 cents per dozen, and the prospects were that all grades of storage eggs will be advanced in the near future. There was an improved demand from foreign buyers.

The local butter situation was featureless, and prices were steady.

There was no change in the cheese market.

In the bean market good supplies of old crop were on hand at $2.95 to $3.10 per bushel for one-pound pickers. The demand was moderate.

STERLING RATES

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, October 3 (Canadian Press). — For the first time since 1921, wheat yesterday rose above $1.50 a bushel, the May delivery here soaring to $1.51 1-2. Urgent foreign demand for breadstuffs gave a big lift to all grain values, rye especially. Maximum jumps in price yesterday were 8 cents for rye and 5 cents for wheat.

The wheat market closed strong 3 1-4 to 4 7-8 cents net higher, December $1.46 1-4 to $1.46 3-8 and May $1.51 1-4 to $1.51 3-8, with corn 2 1-2 to 4 1-8 cents up.

Oats showed 2 1-2 to 2 7-8 cents advance, and provisions a gain of 25 to 50 cents.

It was estimated that as much as 4,000,000 bushels of wheat was bought yesterday for shipment to Europe from the United States and Canada, half the total being from this country and the other half from Canada. About 800,000 bushels of rye was also purchased for trans-Atlantic use, although rye was selling at about equal cost with wheat on a pound-for-pound basis. Scarcity of rye was said to be acute, that five days of foreign buying as the recent fast pace would exhaust the entire available domestic stock, aside from the new crop receipts.

Even barley came into view yesterday as a possible substitute, and went above $1.00 a bushel in price, some barley selling at $1.01. Unusual activity on the buying side extended to all the grain pits, and new high price records for the season were scored not only in wheat, but for rye and barley as well.

A THOUGHT.

HOW TO JUDGE MEN.

George Horace Lorimer, editor of the Saturday Evening Post, gives this advice on sizing up men:

"Look in a man's eyes for honesty;

"Around his mouth for weakness;

"At his chin for strength;

"At his hands for temperament;

"At his nails for cleanliness;

"His tongue will tell you his experience and prove or disprove his statements as it runs along."

It is interesting to try this test out on our friends and others that we know. So many times these physical characteristics check up with the qualities of a man that it is not necessary to ascribe every man's success to "pull."

COLD WINDS AND RAIN REDUCED KEENE FAIR ATTENDANCE TO 400

Track Was Muddy and Races Were Cancelled—Seventy-Two Exhibitors Competed In Various Classes—Big Display of Horses—Pipers Had Chilly Engagement.

(By Staff Reporter.)

KEENE, Oct. 2. — The annual Exhibition of the Otonabee Agricultural Society, held at Keene yesterday, with an opening day on Tuesday, was marked by rain and chilly weather that kept the attendance down to about four hundred people, instead of the large total that usually greets the Keene Fair. The list of exhibitors this year held 72 names.

The races were called off, on account of the condition of the track, and the crowd divided its interest between the judging in the ring, where Keene's traditional fine display of horse flesh was on view, the exhibits, and a few amusement centres, including a "kill the cat" game, a stand where ostrich-feather clad kewpies braved the cold in their scanty garb, and Billy Bowman's exposition of splendid variety of pen-point. There were some complaints heard from would-be concessionaries over a five dollar fee charged. There were two refreshment stands. The iced lemonade had a very slow sale, and even the "hot dogs" had a chilly appearance, swimming in a sea of slowly congealing fat.

In the exhibit section, the live stock showing was lower than at other years, on account of the bad weather, but the grains and roots and ladies' work exhibits were in advance of other seasons.

In the building near the entrance heated comfortably, was housed the ladies' work. There was a fine display of home-made bread, biscuits, cakes and pies, children's penmanship, collection of weeds and of snapshots, and a quantity of very pretty fancy work, in finely stitched embroideries, a number of quilts of excellent workmanship and some woollen socks.

Produce Display.

In the long building inside the gate were flowers, fruits and vegetables. There was a nice collection of preserved fruits and vegetables and some dressed fowl, apples ranged in prim rows on side shelves, companioned by enoromus Savoy cabbages, and farther on, there was a very good display of cut flowers and potted plants, with several pretty window boxes, and one towering red geranium, in flower. High corn stalks stood at one end, and there was butter in prints and crocks ranged on a side table.

On the ground were potatoes in boxes, and symmetrical arrangements of large mangolds and pumpkins.

Wire cages ranged also along the ground, in the centre of the big building, held the poultry display. The entries for fowl this year were far ahead of other seasons, and forty extra wire cages had been requisitioned from Norwood to hold the overflow, but yesterday's weather kept many of the birds at home, and there were only about a hundred on view, with Barred Rocks and White Leghorns predominating, John and Peter Robinson, and H. Fletcher of Keene, and Robert Hope of Villiers, having the biggest displays. There were a few white and bronze turkeys, one big gobbler having trouble with his extended tail-feathers in the small coop, and a few Rouen ducks and Toulouse and Emden geese.

Bags of grain occupied one side of the hall, and there were a number of decorated sheaves of wheat and oats on view also.

Outside, against the fence, were pens holding the sheep and swine. A pen of good bacon hogs was shown by Enos Kent, of Otonabee, Charles Nelson and S. Redmond had Shropshires, and Thomas Beatty, of R.R. No. 6, Peterboro, exhibited a few Berkshires and Tamworths, also a number of the Leicester sheep that comprised the main show in this section. The sheep were the only things that seemed to be impervious to the weather. At the Campbellford fair, the sheep sweltered in the sun. At Keene, they were comfortable in their woollen coats.

In the cattle exhibit, Holsteins and Durhams had the biggest showings. Mr. George E. Foster, of Honeywood, who judged the sheep and swine, was also judge of the cattle. S. Comrie, Edgar Wood and M. Pimmett of Indan River, were the biggest exhibitors. W. Drummond, of Keene, had a few Jerseys.

Horses a Feature.

Judging in the ring was done by Simon Ault, of Spencerville, who considered Keene's showing of horses as among the best seen by him this year. Agricultural purpose beasts were the biggest class, while the carriage horses also were good.

The Singer machine people of Peterboro, had some machines on view in the big hall, and the automobile exhibit consisted of one car, a "Fordor," shown by Peterboro's Ford Agency.

Car Parked In Front Of Bar Had Signal Device

WINNIPEG, Oct. 3.—(Canadian Press).—Law enforcement officers of the Winipeg Mortality squad, checkmated efforts of the proprietors of a "concealed' bar yesterday when they accidentally stumbled across an ingenious device used to block the activities of the authorities.

In raiding a local hotel, which for some time had been under suspicion, the police officers found a man sitting in an automobile parked in front of the premises. Investigation revealed a communicating wire from the car to the "bar" which served to give warning by means of bell signals to those inside. The device, it was admitted, had operated with success until the police pounced upon the law breakers, giving them no time to "clear the bar" in response to the look-out's warning.

The Caledonian Band from Peterborough, added a touch of color and life to a somewhat bleak scene. Arrayed in all the glory of their tartan kilts, with small Joe Leith leading the van, they played during the afternoon on the grounds and gave a concert at the end of the afternoon in the hall, when Messrs. R. Hendry and J. Smith delighted their audience with several humorous selections. A concert in the evening by home talent ended the day.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

HUNTING BY DOGS BEING DISCUSSED

Nimrods Are In Session at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, To-day.

TORONTO, Oct. 3.—Nimrods and anglers who are members of the Ontario Hunters' Game and Fish Protective Association met at the King Edward Hotel Wednesday in annual sesion to confer on matters of interest to those who seek recreation in the waters and wilds of Northern Ontario. G. G. Green, president, of Bradford, called the gathering to order shortly before eleven o'clock. Although the attendance at the morning session was not large, Mr. Green said the annual meeting this year had been called prior to the hunting season in the hope that it would bring a larger attendance of those interested in the sport.

J. C. Richardson, secretary-treasurer, presented the report to the executive committee, and reviewed the efforts made by the association at the last session of the Legislature to have the fish and game laws of the province improved.

Five Points To Gain.

The five points which the association took up, and toward which it will continue to work, were; (1) The licensing of all persons who carry firearms; (2) the creation of more and smaller game sanctuaries; (3) prohibition of the sale of all game; (4) an increase in the minimum penalties for contravention of the fish and game laws of the province; (5) the open season for deer, moose and cariboo to be limited to 15 days in all parts of Ontario.

There was some discussion over the adoption of a new set of by-laws. Objection was taken by William Pears to polling members of the association by mail. "I object to the referendum," he said. "Let those who come to the meetings decide matters of policy. They at least are the one who show interest.

Aubrey Davis of Newmarket, stated that he had been requested by several members to oppose the holding of the annual meeting prior to the hunting season. He thought better results would be obtained if the annual meeting was held after the hunting season, and before the sitting of the House, so that the experiences of the year could be used to help discuss matters of interest with the Government and members of the Legislature.

Letter From Sam Harris.

A letter was read from Sam Harris, president of the Ontario Sportsmen's Game and Fish Protective Association, suggesting that as the aims of both bodies were practically identical, a great deal more might be accomplished if they unite.

The point at issue between the two bodies, it was stated, was the question of hunting deer with dogs. Members present said that, with the great number of hunters going into the woods every fall, it was much safer to use dogs. The question of uniting was left over for further discussion.

Hon. Chas. McCrea, Minister of Mines, spoke to the association at luncheon.

MAX PHAFF HAS SAVED HIS LIFE

Gave Names of New York Smugglers To the French Government.

CHARGE CHANGED.

(By John De. Gant, United Press Staff Correspondent)

BREST, France, Oct. 3.—Max Phaff has saved his neck and started two Governments on a world-wide search that may lay bare the entire business of rum running and deal a death blow to the biggest smuggling ring of the lot.

French authorities have postponed for a week further examination of the American whom they first accused of piracy in connection with the raid on the French steamer Mulhouse, which netted the pirates two million dollars worth of liquor last June they will proceed to press a slighty less serious charge—conspiracy in piracy—against Phaff, after they have made an effort to capture some of his alleged accomplices. The men wanted were named by the young New Yorker yesterday. It is the only desire of the authorities to avoid international complication that hinders the French in the chase. They hope to provide the United States authorities with valuable information about rum running in exchange for asistance in capturing the Mulhouse pirates.

MOTION DROPPED.

Prosecution Against Editor of Worker Weekly Has Been Dropped.

LONDON, Oct. 3. — (Canadian Press).—Decision of Conservative members of House of Commons to censur government instead of confining themselves to their motion condemning Sir Patrick Hastings, Attorney-General from dropping prosecution agains teditor of Workers Weekly, Communist organ, on charges of sedition, has caused great surprise in political circles, says Reuters' lobby correspondent.. It was klown that liberal members were prepared to support motion condemning Attorney-General in connection with matter but opinion was expressed last night that Liberals would abstain from voting on motion that censured all members of government. In consequence it is expected that there will be very close division when vote on motion is taken.

He pointed up the hillside to the nearest olive tree, a hundred paces distant.

"Yonder," he said, "is a man's mark. Put me a shaft through the long branch of that first olive tree."

Asad and his officers voiced approval.

"A man's mark, indeed," said the Basha, "so that he be a marksman."

But Marzak shrugged his shoulders with make-believe contempt.

"I knew he would refuse the mark I set," said he. "As for the olive branch, it is so large a butt that a child could not miss it at this distance."

"If a child could not, then thou shouldst not," said Sakr-el-Bahr, who had so placed himself that his body was not between Marzak and the palmetto bale.

"Let us see thee hit it, O Marzak."

And as he spoke he raised his crossbow and scarcely seeming to take aim he loosed his shaft. It flashed away to be checked, quivering, in the branch he had indicated.

A chorus of applause and admiration greeted the shot, and drew the attention of all the crew to what was toward.

Marzak tightened his lips, realising how completely he had been outwitted. Willy-nilly he must now shoot at that mark. The choice had been taken out of his hands by Sakr-el-Bahr. He never doubted that he must cover himself with ridicule in the performance, and that there he would be constrained to abandon this pretended match.

"By the Koran," said Biskaine, "thou'lt need all thy skill to equal such a shot, Marzak."

"'Twas not the mark I chose," replied Marzak, sullenly.

"Thou wert the challenger, O Marzak," his father reminded him. "Therefore the choice of mark was his. He chose a man's mark and by the beard of Mohammed he showed us a man's shot."

Marzak would have flung the bow from him in that moment, abandoning the method he had chosen to investigate the contents of that suspicious palmetto bale; but he realized that such a course must now cover him with scorn. Slowly he leveled his bow at that distant mark.

"Have a care of the sentinel on the hilltop," Sakr-el-Bahr admonished him, provoking a titter.

Angrily the youth drew his bow. The cord hummed, and the shaft sped to bury itself in the hill's flank a dozen yards from the mark.

Since he was the son of the Basha none dared to laugh outright save his father and Sakr-el-Bahr. But there was no suppressing a titter to express the mockery to which the proven braggart must ever be exposed.

Asad looked at him, smiling almost sadly.

"See now," he said, "what comes of boasting thyself against Sakr-el-Bahr."

"My will was crossed in the matter of a mark," was the bitter answer. "You angered me and made my aim untrue."

Sakr-el-Bahr strode away to the starboard bulwarks, deeming the matter at an end. Marzak observed him.

"Yet at that small mark," he said, "I challenge him again." As he spoke he fitted a second shaft to his bow.

"Behold!" he cried, and took aim.

But swift as thought, Sakr-el-Bahr—heedless now of all consequences—leveled at Marzak the bow which he still held.

"Hold!" he roared. "Loose thy shaft at that bale, and I loose this at thy throat. I never miss!" he added grimly.

There was a startled movement in the ranks of those who stood behind Marzak. In speechless amazement they stared at Sakr-el-Bahr as he stood there, white-faced, his eyes aflash, his bow drawn taut and ready to launch that death-laden quarrel as he threatened.

Slowly then, smiling with unutterable malice, Marzak lowered his bow. He was satisfied. His true aim was reached. He had drawn his enemy into self-betrayal.

Asad's was the voice that shattered that hush of consternation.

"Kellamullah" he bellowed. "What is this? Art thou mad, too, O Sakr-el-Bahr?"

"Aye, mad indeed," said Marzak; "mad with fear."

And he stepped quickly aside so that the body of Biskaine should shield him from any sudden consequences of his next words.

"Ask him what he keeps in that pannier, O my father."

"Aye, what, in Allah's name?" demanded the Basha, advancing toward his captain.

Sakr-el-Bahr lowered his bow, master of himself again. His composure was beyond all belief.

"I carry in it goods of price, which I'll not see riddled to please a pert boy," he said.

"Goods of price," echoed Asad, with a snort. "They'll need to be of price indeed that are valued above the life of my son. Let us see these goods of price." And to the men upon the waist-deck he shouted:

"Open me that pannier."

Sakr-el-Bahr sprang forward, and laid a hand upon the Basha's arm.

"Stay, my lord" he entreated almost fiercely. "Consider that his pannier is my own. That its contents are my property; that none has a right to—"

"Wouldst babble of rights to me, who am thy lord?" blazed the Basha, now in a towering passion. "Open me that pannier, I say."

They were quick to his bidding. The ropes were slashed away, and the front of the pannier fell open on its palmetto hinges. There was a half-repressed chorus of amazement from the men. Sakr-el-Bahr stood frozen in horror of what must follow.

"What is it? What have you found?" demanded Asad.

In silence the men swung the bale about, and disclosed to the eyes of those upon the poop-deck the face and form of Rosamund Godolphin. Then Sakr-el-Bahr, rousing himself from his trance of horror, reckless of all but her, flung down the gangway to assist her from the pannier, and, thrusting aside those who stood about her, took his stand at her side.

CHAPTBR XXV

THE DUPE

For a little while Asad stood at gaze, speechless in his incredulity. Then to revive the anger that for a moment had been whelmed in astonishment came the reflection that he had been duped by Sakr-el-Bahr, duped by the man he trusted most. He had snarled at Fenzileh and scorned Marzak when they had jointly warned him against his lieutenant; if at times he had been in danger of heeding them, yet sooner or later he had concluded that they but spoke to vent their malice. And yet it was proven now that they had been right in their estimate of this traitor, whilst he himself had been a poor, blind dupe, needing Marzak's wit to tear the bandage from his eyes.

Slowly he went down the gangway, followed by Marzak, Biskaine and the others. At the point where it joined the waist-deck he paused, and his dark old eyes smoldered under his beetling brows.

"So," he snarled. "These are thy goods of price. Thou lying dog, what was thine aim in this?"

Defiantly Sakr-el-Bahr answered him: "She is my wife. It is my right to take her with me where I go."

He turned to her, and bade her veil her face, and she immediately obeyed him with fingers that shook a little in her agitation.

"None questions thy right to that," said Asad. "But being resolved to take her with thee, why not take her openly? Why was she not housed in the poop-house, as becomes the wife of Sakr-el-Bahr? Why smuggle her aboard in a pannier, and keep her there in secret?"

"And why?" added Marzak, "didst thou lie to me when I questioned thee upon her whereabouts?—telling me she was left behind in thy house in Algiers?"

"All this I did," replied Sakr-el-Bahr, with a lofty, almost disdainful dignity, "because I feared lest I should be prevented from bearing her away with me," and his bold glance beating full upon Asad drew a wave of color into the gaunt old cheeks.

"What could have caused that fear?" he asked. "Shall I tell thee? Because no man sailing upon such a voyage as this would have desired the company of his new-wedded wife. Because no man would take a wife with him upon a raid in which there is peril of life and peril of capture."

"Allah has watched over me, his servant, in the past," said Sakr-el-Bahr, "and I put my trust in Him."

It was a specious answer. Such words—laying stress upon the victories Allah sent him—had aforetime served to disarm his enemies. But they served not now. Instead, they did but fan the flames of Asad's wrath.

"Blaspheme not," he croaked, and his tall form quivered with rage, his mellow old face grew vulturine. "She was brought thus in secret out of fear that were her presence known thy true purpose too must stand revealed."

"And whatever that true purpose may have been," put in Marzak, "it was not the task entrusted thee of raiding the Spanish treasure-galley."

"'Tis what I mean, my son," Asad agreed. Then with a commanding gesture: "Wilt thou tell me, without further lies, what thy purpose was?" he asked.

"How?" said Sakr-el-Bahr, and he smiled never so faintly. "Hast thou not said that this purpose was revealed by what I did? Rather, then, I think it is for me to ask thee for some such information. I do assure thee, my lord, that it was no part of my intention to neglect the task entrusted me. But just because I feared lest knowledge of her presence might lead my enemies to suppose what thou art now supposing, and perhaps persuade thee to forget all that I have done for the glory of Islam, I determined to bring her secretly aboard.

"My real aim, since you must know it, was to land her somewhere on the coast of France whence she might return to her own land and her own people. That done, I should have set about intercepting the Spanish galley, and never fear but, by Allah's favor, I should have succeeded."

"By the horns of Shaitan," swore Marzak, "thrusting himself forward, "he is the very father and mother of lies. Wilt thou explain this desire to be rid of a wife thou has but wed?" he demanded.

"Aye," growled Asad. "Canst answer that?"

"Thou shalt hear the truth," said Sakr-el-Bahr.

"The praise to Allah" mocked Marzak.

"But I warn you," the corsair continued, "that to you it will seem less easy to believe by much than any falsehood I could invent. Years ago, in England, where I was born, I loved this woman and should have taken her to wife. But there were men and circumstances that defamed me to her so that she would not wed me, and I went forth with hatred of her in my heart. Last night the love of her, which I believed to be dead and turned to loathing, proved to be still a living force. Loving her, I came to see that I had used her unworthily, and I was urged by a desire above all others to undo the evil I had done."

On that he paused, and after an instant's silence Asad laughed angrily and contemptuously.

"Since when has man expressed his love for a woman by putting her from him?" he asked in a voice of scorn that showed the precise value he set upon such a statement.

"I warned thee it would seem incredible," said Sakr-el-Bahr.

"Is it not plain, O my father, that this marriage of his was no more than a pretence?" cried Marzak.

"As plain as the light of day," replied Asad. "Thy marriage with that woman made an impious mock of the True Faith. It was no marriage. It was a blasphemous pretence, thine only aim to thwart me, abusing my regard for the Prophet's Holy Law, and to set her beyond my reach."

He turned to Vigitello, who stood a little behind Sakr-el-Bahr.

Bid thy men put me this traitor into irons," he said.

"Heaven hath guided thee to a wise decision, O my father" cried Marzak, his voice jubilant.

But his was the only jubilant note that was sounded, his the only voice that was raised.

"The decision is more like to guide you both to Heaven," replied Sakr-el-Bahr, undaunted. On the instant he had resolved upon his course.

"Stay" he said, raising his hand to Vigitello, who, indeed, had shown no sign of stirring. He stepped close up to Asad, and what he said did not go beyond those who stood immediately about the Basha and Rosamund, who strained her ears that she might lose no word of it.

"Do not think, Asad," he said, "that I will submit me like a camel to its burden. Consider thy position well. If I but raise my voice to call my sea-hawks to me, only Allah can tell how many will be left to obey thee. Darest thou put this matter to the test?" he asked, his countenance grave and solemn, but entirely fearless, as of a man in whom there is no doubt of the issue as it concerns himself.

Asad's eyes glittered dully, his color faded to a deathly ashen hue.

"Thou infamous traitor——" he began in a thick voice, his body quivering with anger.

"Ah no," Sakr-el-Bahr interrupted him. "Were I a traitor, it is what I should have done already, knowing as I do that in any division of our forces numbers will be heavily on my side. Let then my silence prove my unswerving loyalty, Asad. Let it weigh with thee in considering my conduct, not permit thyself to be swayed by Marzak there, who recks nothing so that he vents his petty hatred of me."

"Do not heed him, O my father" cried Marzak. "It can not be that—"

"Peace" growled Asad, somewhat stricken on a sudden.

And there was peace whilst the Basha stood moodily combing his white beard, his glittering eyes sweeping from Oliver to Rosamund and back again. He was weighing what Sakr-el-Bahr had said. He more than feared that it might be no more than true, and he realized that if he were to provoke a mutiny here he would be putting all to the test, setting all upon a throw in which the dice might well be cogged against him.

If Sakr-el-Bahr prevailed, he would prevail not merely aboard this galley, but throughout Algiers, and Asad would be cast down never to rise again. On the other hand, if he bared his scimitar and called upon the Faithful to support him, it might chance that, recognizing in him the exalted of Allah, to whom their loyalty was due, they would rally to him. He even thought it might be possible. Yet the stake he put upon the board was too vast. The game appalled him, whom nothing yet had appalled, and it scarce needed a muttered caution from Biskaipe to determine him to hold his hand.

He looked at Sakr-el-Bahr again: his glance now sullen.

"I will consider thy words," he pronounced in a voice that was steady. "I would not be unjust, nor steer my course by appearances alone Allah forbid!"

CHAPTER XXVI

SHEIK MAT

Under the inquisitive gaping stare of all about them stood Rosamund and Sakr-el-Bahr, regarding each other in silence for a little spell after the Basha's departure. The very galley-slaves, stirred from their habitual lethargy by happenings so curious and unusual, craned their sinewy necks to peer at them with a flicker of interest in their dull, weary eyes.

Sakr-el-Bahr's feelings as he considered Rosamund's white face in the fading light were most oddly conflicting. Dismay at what had befallen and some anxious dread of what must follow were leavened by a certain measure of relief.

He realized that in no case could her concealment have continued long. Eleven mortal hours had she spent in the cramped and almost suffocating space of that pannier, in which he had intended to do so more than carry her aboard. The uneasiness which had been occasioned him by the impossibility to deliver her from that close confinement, when Asad had announced his resolve to accompany them upon that voyage, had steadily been increasing as hour succeeded hour and still he found no way to release her from a situation in which, sooner or later, when the limits of her endurance were reached, her presence must be betrayed.

This release, which he could not have contrived, had been contrived for him by the suspicions and malice of Marzak. That was the one grain of consolation in the present peril—to himself, who mattered nothing, and to her, who mattered all. Adversity had taught him to prize benefits, however slight, and to confront perils however overwhelming. So he hugged the present slender benefit, and resolutely braced himself to deal with the situation as he found it, taking the fullest advantage of the hesitance which his words had sown in the heart of the Basha.

He hugged, too, the thought that as things had fallen out, from being oppressor and oppressed, Rosamund and he were become fellows in misfortune sharing now a common peril. He found it a sweet thought to dwell on. Therefore was it that he faintly smiled as he looked into Rosamund's white strained face.

That smile evoked from her the question that had been burdening her mind.

"What now? what now?" she asked huskily, and held out appealing hands to him.

"Now," said he coolly, "let us be thankful that you are delivered from quarters destructive both to comfort and to dignity. Let me lead you to those I had prepared for you, which you would have occupied long since but for the ill-timed coming of Asad Come."

And he waved an inviting hand toward the gangway leading to the poop.

COBALT CUT OFF.

Heavy Snow Storm Crippled Telegraph and Telephone Wires at Cobalt.

COBALT, October 2 (Canadian Press). — The snowstorm that swept down on this district over night was at once the cause of the telegraph office at the T. and N. O. Station here catching fire and provided the means of extinguishing the flames.

A high voltage wire of the Northern Ontario Light and Power Company broke under the weight of the snow falling across the telegraph and long distance telephone lines of the railway.

The switchboard in the office caught fire and the flames were spreading up the walls, when the section men working nearby threw snow on the blaze and had it under control when the town brigade arrived.

The damage to the T. and N. O. property will approximate $400.00.

For a time Cobalt was cut off from the outside world, both telephone and telgraph services being crippled.

The switchboard was rendered useless, and was replaced from North Bay during the afternoon.

WORK PROGRESSING.

Official Roster of the Y.M.C.A. Shows Increase in Membership.

Data available on 1,693 Young Men's Christian Associations in the United States and Canada, reporting for the 1924 year book and official roster, just issued, show the past association year to take rank with, and in several important directions to exceed, the record year of 1921. George B. Hodge, who has directed the collection and classification of association information for many years, states that "the reported volume and quality of association work as a whole has been the largest and best in association history, and much larger than was anticipated."

The largest annual increase in membership yet recorded is shown in a gain of 9.5 per cent. The total membership of the reporting associations is 988,522, of which 244,529 are boys.

A gain of 11.6 per cent. to 134,977 in the number of men and boys in swimming and life-saving classes, and a gain of 10.3 per cent. to 11,784 in the number of men under leadership instruction in physical education classes, are the features of an expanding year in the physical work of the associations. There was a total of 349,307 different men and boys in gymnasium classes, a gain of 3.1 per cent.

The rapidly increasing interest in organized outdoor activities is indicated by the total of 90,092 men and boys who spent two weeks or more in Y.M.C.A. camps. "his is an increase of nearly 16 per cent. If there were added to this the men and boys in camps in countries abroad where the service is under the North American Y.M.C.A. leadership, the total would be largely increased.

Marked increase in the number of men and boys affiliated with Y. M. C. A. Bible classes is reported. A total of 232,943 for the year is a gain of 24,000, or 11.5 per cent. Aggregate attendance at Bible and religious meetings reached approximately 9,549,000, an increase of 11.6 per cent.

Endowment funds increased by 8.3 per cent. to $17,308,000, while the property debt increased by only 6.6 per cent. An increase of net association property to $159,521,000—8.1 per cent. in the year—indicates the volume of property additions and is believed to mark the end of the deflation period of 1922-23.

In a foreword Dr. John R. Mott, general secretary of the International Committee, Y.M.C.A., states that at the present time the building bureau of the committee is retained on some 75 building projects, and points to the multiplication of branch buildings both in large and middle-sized cities and the evolving of building plans and projects for cities or isolated communities of under 15,000 inhabitants. The financial service bureau of the committee, he says further, reports campaigns for funds for new buildings and for clearing off building indebtedness, aggregating over $14,000,000. "It is a striking fact," Dr. Mott adds, "that in spite of all criticism and other handicaps, the associations today are raising sums which before the war would have seemed absolutely impossible." The latest "impossibility" is $3,000,000 subscribed by St. Louis citizens of all ranks and creeds for a city-wide Y.M.C.A. development program.

Most of the Y.M.C.A. work in many of the countries of Europe is an outgrowth of war-time activities. In some places, the association work has been entirely transferred to national control, American secretaries acting largely in an advisory capacity. In foreign countries outside of Europe and the Near East, the 384 associations directly related to the American movement have a total membership of 125,000.

"The various local boards and national committees in many of these foreign lands," says Dr. Mott, "have achieved such strength that it may be truthfully said that the early vision which commanded us when we entered upon the foreign work—that of developing autonomous, independent, self-supporting movements—is fast being realized."

LOWLY ANIMALS HIDES HELPING TO MAKE COATS

Cats, Rabbits and Skunks Yield Their Hides For Milady's Winter Outfit.

OLD KINDS GONE.

Sealskin Coats and Wraps Are Becoming More Common Every Day.

By HEDDA HOYT.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Oct. 2. — (United Press).—

"This life is getting punk,"
Said the lowly little skunk,
"And life is just a skin game after all
Since all the lovely women
Are wearing fur as trimmin'
The sweets of life have turned to bitter gall!"

Not content with the usual types of furs which have been utilized for women's apparel for many years, furriers are turning towards some of the more lowly animals, including skunks, weasels, household cats, ordinary goats, rabbits, etc.

When these less expensive furs are turned out in the finished garments they are sights to behold. Goat fur which looks as though it has been permanently waved and dyed a chocolate brown, forms many of the winter jacquettes and is used as trimming on suits of heavy cloth type. Rabbit fur and cat fur is clipped and dyed to resemble sable, squirrel and other more costly furs. Sometimes one sees a gorgeous wrap which looks as though it were made of tiny chipmunk skins, but on close inspection it turns out to be clipped cat fur.

Seal-skin wraps have become so common in recent years that many women are prefering inexpensive duplicates of more costly furs to the durable seal-skins. Of course, there is no fur which wears as well as seal-skin, unless one wishes to spend a great deal of money on a coat. This season, however, the vogue seems to be turning towards brownish furs and this will diminish the smartness of seal.

Among the unusual trimmings used on long coats and wraps we find the breast of the albatross used in band effect. It has been many years since albatross has been used on garments, although in our grandmother's day the feathers of this bird were considered quite chic. It combines beautifully with black cloth or heavy silk surfaced materials. Recently several long, straight-lined coats of heavy satin edged from neck to hem with albatross have appeared.

Shawl-shaped collars are being featured by many furriers and sleeves are generally wide at the wrist and slightly flaring. Belts of any description are a minus quantity.

Many women are turning from the coat which is made entirely of fur and demanding cloth coats of unusual lines with striking fur trimming. Black cloth coats trimmed in brownish fur is quite effective and is a combination found on many of the higher priced wraps. Light tan coats of heavy bolivia cloth, trimmed in tannish raccoon are quite lovely for the younger miss. The racoon may form collar, cuffs and hem border.

All coats seem to be shorter than they were last fall and winter, the reason being that skirts are shorter than they have been during the past two years.

Plaid and Furs.

Heretofore we have considered the plaid coat a sports coat, but this season we find the most striking plaids trimmed in fur and some of them are really lovely. One of the most conservative shops on Fifth avenue is displaying a coat which combines henna, orange and brown in plaid effect and has a huge collar of brown skunk and three rows of skunk at the hem. This coat is one of the five-eighths length garments and flares slightly as it reaches the hem-line. The frock which will be worn beneath this will undoubtedly be quite short and with a very scant skirt since all of the shorter coats demand frocks showing short, scant hem-lines.

Frocks with coats to match will be very important this winter and the majority of these are fur-trimmed. Most of these "gown and coat" combinations are very lovely to look upon, but unless one can afford several changes, one is liable to tire of the "dress and coat" idea. Where one has a fur coat of last season, to begin the new season a smart fur-trimmed suit makes a lovely change, as there are always many days when the weather is too warm for heavy furs.

CEREAL PUDDING.

One cup cold cooked wheat cereal, 2 cups hot milk, 2 eggs, 1-2 cup of sugar, 1-2 cup chopped dates, 1-4 teaspoon salt, nutmeg.

Add milk slowly to cereal, heating until smooth. Add sugar, salt and dates, and mix well. Beat whole egg and yolk of second egg until light and add to first mixture. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven until firm to the touch. Beat remaining white of egg until stiff with 1 tablespoon cold water. Beat in two tablespoons sugar and spread over top of pudding. Bake eight minutes in a moderate oven.

If a meringue is not wanted the whole egg should be used in the pudding.

The pudding can be spread with jelly if dates are not used in it before the meringue is added.

BUYS WHOLE TOWN AND WILL TURN IT OVER TO CHILDREN

MAIN STREET OF ASHLAND, MD., AND MANO SWARTZ WHO BOUGHT IT.

ASHLAND, MCd., Oct. 2—"Make Ashland your landing field," is today's best advice to storks.

After more than a century of existence, this village in Baltimore county has a population of only 130. But it will grow.

Everything to make a baby happy and to make the town attractive to the parents of young families will be provided here. The town has just been purchased, all 34 of its houses and the land they stand on, for $43,000 by Mano Swartz.

There will be a new playground adjoining the little schoolhouse, and in remodelling the houses special provision will be made for nurseries.

"It's going to be a refuge for families who have been hounded from apartment to apartment by the slogan 'No Children Admitted,'" says Swartz. "All the breaks will go to families with children."

CONSTANCE WILL WED WHEN SHE FINDS MAN SHE LIKES BETTER THAN HER WORK

Will Have to be Rapturously in Love, Says Miss Talmadge.

DESERT THE FILMS

Enjoys Vicariously the Domestic Happiness of Mother and Keatons.

BY JACK JUNGMEYER

HOLLYWODD, Oct. 3.—Constance Talmadge, probably the most proposed to girl in flickerdom—when is she going to get married again?

There is apparently as much curiosity about her romantice proclivities —whetted by the many reports and denials of engagements — as there is about her new pictorial undertakings.

C. Talmadge

"I will marry," is Constance's answer, "when I find the man for whom I shall be glad to give up acting, if that is necessary.

That, as one may variously infer, may be soon or never. And so it isn't much of an answer after all. Obviously, however, if one counts discarded suitors, the hypothetical husband has a formidable competitor in Miss Talmadge's valuation of her career.

At this writing, the vivacious and flirtatious comedienne feels that for her there must be a definite choice between a domestic and professional life when the moment for decision arrives.

"You know I have such a happy-go-lucky way with my friends. If I like anyone I call him 'dear' and 'darling' even though I'm not a bit in love. But husbands are apt to be funny about such things."

For years Constance Talmadge has been cast in plays dealing with matrimonial tangles. Many times she has played the insouciant, carefree wife. Is it that the general trend of these roles, so often assumed, has biased her viewpoint? That a comedy turn and a laugh with which her film dilemmas are usually settled have given her a sense of the instability, the unreality of marriage?

She says no—and waits for the man who is strong enough to take her away from the screen.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN.

The Main Ingredient Is Good Health and Intelligence.

Women always have and always will desire beauty above all other endowments of gods or men.

But there has never been a time in the history of civilization when women have been so intelligent in their quest of beauty as now.

We have analyzed the elusive thing we call beauty and found that the main ingredient is health.

The beauty we admire today is not the negative, passive quality that once charmed beholders. It must have vitality, sparkle and glow and be a positive, compelling force.

This type of beauty can not be coaxed out of a powder box or simulated by any cosmetics. It has to be the direct result of healthful living, exercise in the open air, and self-control in the presence of rich and abundant food.

Health Beauty's Foundation.

We admit that health alone is not necessarily beauty, but it is the foundation for it. Character, personality, and the forces of heredity and environment mold our features as well.

But if a woman has physical health she has the foundations of beauty. And the two foundations of health are diet and exercise.

In the summer time, exercise is no great problem. Golf, tennis, swimming, riding, hiking and all sports that may be enjoyed in the open air are available.

An hour on the tennis court or golf links will not only give you the fresh air and the exercise that will brighten the eye, and bring the color into your cheeks, but it will give you the happiness that is also a great beautifier.

Walking Great Exercise.

If you haven't the facilities for golf or tennis or swimming, don't despise the early morning hike as a beauty exercise.

All you need for that is a pair of good sensible shoes that fit and a tweed or jersey outfit that is loose and hangs from the shoulder. You don't even need a companion. You get all kinds of stimulation alone if you keep your eyes open. Don't just saunter along aimlessly. Quicken your step, exert yourself and fill your lungs with good fresh air as you go.

Always exercise in the open air if you can because you can get more and greater pleasure that way. And as you exercise think of registering your enjoyment in your face. For mental happiness is as necessary to beauty as health.

-AND PERFUMES WON.

CannotKill Deer From Which the Musk Is Taken.

In mysterious Tibet, the ruler forbid the killing of the deer from which the musk is taken. Tibet is a long way from here, but this ban will have its effect locally. For musk is used in the manufacture of high grade perfumes amost without exception.

Trading has ended national isolation, for us and for all other countries. A hunting law in Tibet, an earthquake killing Japanese silkworms, a Brazilian revolt interfering with the coffee supply ....and the list is endless. Nothing of importance can happen in any part of the world without effecting all other parts.

Tibet, like China, practices drastic penalities. Hunters who defy the ban and kill musk deer will have their hands chopped off and nailed to the doors of temples.

They will not need many game wardens.

Perfumery is probably the oldest of woman's artificial lures. The cave girl decorated her hair with sweet-smelling jungle blossoms. Crafty orientals figured out how to extract the powerful scent. They started the perfumery industry.

Perfumes have reached their highest development in the orient, where water is usually too scarce for frequent bathing. It was a problem of inventing perfumery or gas masks, to enable filthy people to get within speaking distance of each other—and perfumes won.

The first perfumes, after musk, were frankincense, myrrh and other dried gums obtained from trees in India and Africa. The trading of these scents was one of the earliest forms of commerce. Perfumes and jewels and witchcraft tokens were transported by camel caravans over long and stifling desert and in primitive frails boats over the stormy seas.

As transportation was developed, the trades began to carry other wares. But perfumery was one of the first, and the history of this industry abounds with romantic adventure.

Today the industry is "scientific" —and correspondingly dull. Last year, for instance, 11 million pounds of rose petals were taken out of the Valley of Roses in Bulgaria—and this stupendous amount yielded only 470 ounces of oil of roses. An ounce of oil of roses, of course, makes a vast quantity of perfumery

LET BABY ALONE.

Visitors Cannot Resist the Temptation to Paw the Baby Over.

Here's a beautiful baby, in excellent health. The proud mother exhibits him to visitors. Their instant tendency is to take hold of the baby's fingers. They do not realize danger of transferring germs.

Within a few seconds after baby's fingers have been pawed by grown-ups, his fingers go to his mouth.

Lucky for baby, if visitors toy with his fingers outdoors. Mother is naturally afraid to offend by cautioning about transfer of germs. If she is wise, she will expose his fingers to the sunlight.

And, by the way, one of the best remedies for a sore throat is to open your mouth so the sun will shine into the infected parts.

More disease germs are "caught" by contact with the hands than any other way. Except, possibly, kissing.

The danger is especially acute when there is a cut or a chapped crack in the skin of the hands.

The League Against Hand Shaking is doing excellent work.

Hand shaking, after all, is rather a ridiculous custom. It's a stupid survival of the days when men extend their right hand to instil confidence by showing they carried no weapon.

ARE YOU TRAVELING IN HIGH?

If Not We Want You To Use Phospho-Cod Just Thirty Days and Get the Surprise of Your Life in the Improvement You Will Make.

These are the days of speed, the "Get There Days." Only a few centuries back it took months to cross the ocean—now it takes less than a week. Only a few years ago doctors were bleeding poor, starved bodies for almost every ailment flesh was heir to—fever patients were refused water—the sick and ailing were shut up in closed rooms with the windows sealed shut and all God-given air and sunlight carefully excluded. But thanks to modern science and a wise Creator, a few rays of intelligence are now filtering through, and while the knowledge of how to fight disease and death is but in its infancy, yet all intelligent medical men admit that prevention is by far the most effective weapon in the fight for better health, strength and physical perfection. A new Tonic Health Building Formula has been perfected which is accomplishing results that are making thousands glad. It has brought absolutely satisfactory results to many who were frail weaklings in search of health and strength who had spent years in trying first one thing then another. We have files full of letters and photographs showing the remarkable improvements of these people and telling of the satisfaction and help they have had from Phospho-Cod —this new Tonic Health Builder— and, best of all, it is not a secret or patent medicine, as we freely give the formula to any one enquiring and publish it herewith and on every package. Phospho-Cod is the name we have given this formula and we make it from a Solution of Hypophosphites of Lime — Sodium — Potassium — Manganese — Quinine and Strychnia, together with Iron Peptonate, Blood Root, Wild Cherry, Glycerine and Rich Port Wine and a tasteless Extract of Cod Livers which has no unpleasant taste, grease or odor.

We Do Not Need to Tell the Well Informed Physician

that this formula is remarkably efficient, for the ingredients speak for it and prove that it is the most effective Body Building, Blood Making and Nerve Vitalizing Tonic ever offered to run-down, ailing men and women. That is the reason we say that if you are not bubbling over with the joy of living we want you to use Phospho-Cod for thirty days and get the surprise of your life in the improvement you will make. It is our belief that with the good, rich, red blood and the powerful, steady, steely nerves others have reported from the use of this splendid tonic that we can rebuild your health as we have done theirs. — That we can build up your resistance to disease and all the numerous germs that attack the human body. — That you can become strong, vigorous and healthy as your Creator intended health, strength and vigor you will become more successful and ambitious with a desire to enjoy life to its fullest. Maybe this doesn't appeal to you, and if that should be so, you have our apologies for having wasted your time in reading this ad. Also, we wouldn't want you to try our treatment, as we think you would not use it fairly, which would make it useless to you and harmless to us, because you could not recommend it. But if you are sincere and need help such as we have described, go to one of the dealers listed below and start Phospho-Cod today with our assurance and guarantee that it will do exactly as we claim, for what we claim, or you may return it and we will pay the dealer ourselves.

PHOSPHO-COD is for sale in Peterborough by Bond's Drug Store; Campbellford, Fred. Wood; Warsaw, A. F. Choate; Norwood, K. G. Thompson; Marmora, J. P. Martin; Millbrook, Henry A. TO DIVERT THAMES

Bold Plan Advanced By Sir Robert Baden-Powell in London.

LONDON, Oct. 1.— (Canadian Press).—A remarkable story lies behind Sir Robert Baden-Powell's reference in The Times to bold plan he has recently seen for diverting the London section of the Thames to the south side of its present course, and converting the present bed of the river into a great road through the heart of London.

This proposal, says a writer in the Daily News, which at first sight would appear to be impracticable, because of its great cost, was put forward by Sir Robert's brother—Major B. F. S. Baden-Powell, Scots Guards.

It was first given to the public in a book "London's Transformation," published some years before the war. "The book," says Major Baden-Powell, "did not sell well. I hoped that by turning the idea into a story, with characters and plot, it would get talked about, but I failed. My scheme was to dam the Thames at Hammersmith, take the river round by canal, first to link up in part with the Wandle at Wandsworth, and then cut the canal across the lowlying country south of the Crystal Palace, and finally rejoin the Thames about Woolwich.

"The Thames bed, raised and well drained, would make an excellent and magnificent roadway right through the heart of London. The chief character in my book was an American financier. He gets the idea, forms a syndicate, raises the money and transforms London.

"But personally I think my idea was about 50 years premature."

ALASKANS RAISING ANIMALS FOR FURS

Most Costly Furs Are Now Raised in Pens Along the Lakes and Streams.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (By mail to the United Press).—Plucking wild things from their native haunts, domesticating them and adding them and adding them to the list of regular accessories to the farm and commerce is a work being performed in Alaska.

Gauged by the progress made in fur propagation the time is rapidly approaching when hardly any animal valued for fur or meat will be excluded from the list. Already the variety has grown until the majodity of fashionable furs are being reared in pens, along streams and lakes.

There is yet one fur no man has been able to conquer and that is the wolverine. But there are trappers familiar with the habits of the animal that aver they will soon transform him from the scourge of the trap-line to a revenue producer.

So far have the exigencies of commerce advanced that even the fishes of the sea are included in the item of conservation and scientific preparation.

Among the novel exhibits shown at the Western Alaska Agricultural Association, Inc., fair, in August and September were live foxes, reindeer, yak, marten and sable, muskrat and beaver, all from the pens, farms and ranges of domesticators of furs and ruminants.

Fur farming has become recognized as the "little fellow's" haven through the ability of the ordinary trapper to embark in business on small capital.

The same source of food utilised by the fur-bearing animal is resorted to by the trapper. The ptarmigan of the hills helps with his marten, the salmon of the streams supplies his fox feed and helps out with other carnivori. A suitable lake, with abundant forage for acquantic animals, such as muskrat and beaver, only needs a fence and a plot of carrots and other vegetables to start a trapper out as a farmer in these varieties.

The mink and marten offer the hardest nuts to crack, owing to their instinct for ranging and great variety of its food. Over-coming this wandering habit has not been fully achieved. Being climbers it is necessary to pen the animals.

MENUS FOR A FAMILY

Breakfast—Orange juice, poached eggs on whole wheat toast, corn oysters for adults, broiled bacon, popovers, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Fresh lima beans, cottage cheese, apple jelly, whole wheat bread, butter, milk, tea, peach shortcake.

Dinner—Broiled beef steak, twice bake potatoes, buttered beets, marshmallow salad, toasted crackers, milk, coffee, whole wheat bread and butter.

Poach the eggs in milk and use the milk as a sauce for the toast.

Instead of adding the cheese and egg to the twice-bake potato for the four-year-old child, merely scoop out the potato, season with butter, salt and pepper and hot milk and return to the oven just long enough to brown the top with the rest of the potatoes.

As long as fresh corn and tomatoes and the other succulent vegetables are in sesaon use them lavishly. You will like these corn oysters and they are quite as good for luncheon or dinner as for breakfast.

Corn Oysters.

Six ears sweet corn, 2 eggs, ½ cup milk, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, rolled cracker crumbs.

Grate corn. Beat eggs with salt and pepper until light. Add corn and enough cracker crumbs to make stiff enough to drop from a spoon. Fry in a frying pan in half butter and half lard. Brown first on one side and then on the other.

Whole Wheat Bread.

One cup boiling water, 1 cup milk, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon salt, 1 yeast cake, 4 tablespoons lukewarm water, 5 cups whole wheat flour.

Add boiling water to milk. Dissolve yeast cake in lukewarm water and when milk is lukewarm add yeast. Add salt and sugar and beat in enough flour to make a batter stiff enough to drop from the spoon. Beat well, cover and let stand in a warm place until double its bulk. It will take about three hours to rise. Stir in the rest of the flour, kneading lightly in the bread bowl. Pour into well greased bread pans, making the pans about half full. Cover with a towel and let stand in a warm place until the loaves are not quite double their bulk. Bake in a moderate oven for 1½ hours.

If preferrd the bread can be started the night before baking. In this eevnt use ½ yeast cake in place of a whole one.

BY-AND-BY—HE WILL TELL US WHY!

In the following verses a writer in "The Spectator" many years since showed us the life of Faith in actual practice. Here it is;

Do not hurry, do not flurry!
Nothing good is got by worry.
Bide the hour to make the spring!
Take life easy; that's the thing.

Do not trouble, do not trouble!
Heavy hearts make toiling double.
Groans the back with loaded pain?
Laugh, and 'twill grow light again.

Do not sorrow, do not sorrow!
Grief to-day is joy to-morrow;
Life flows smoothly after fears;
Eyes shine brightest washed with tears.

Watching, wond'ring, yearning, knowing,
Whence the stream, and where 'tis going
Seems all mystery. By-and-by
He will speak, and tell us why!

A SPLENDID STEP.

This Is The Way T. A. Low Characterizes New Trade Agreement.

TORONTO, October 3 (Canadian Press). — "A splendid step forward in the efforts the Government is making to open up new markets for Canadian products,' is the characterisation given by Hon. T. A. Low, Minister of Trade and Commerce, to the Canadian-Australian preferential tariff agreement, announced from Ottawa last night.

Canadians of all classes, the Minister believes, should experience distinct benefit while certain industries were assured of an important stimulus.

While the Government, in receipt of a cable from its Trade Commissioner in Australia, understands that the treaty has been ratified by the Australian Parliament, the agreement, and consequently the new tariff schedules, cannot come into effect until the final approval is given by the Cahadian House of Commons at its next session, according to Mr. Low, who was in Toronto yesterday.

Asked for his opinion as to specific industries in Canada which would receive most benefit from preferential tariff with Australia, the Minister mentioned the automotive and paper trades. These articles, which are manufactured to a large extent in Canada, would now, he explained, have direct access to a large Australian market.

THE HIGH COST OF FIRE VS. THE LOW COST OF FIRE PROTECTION.

Nearly $10,000,000 Saved By Fire Protection in 1923

In spite of the fact that only 33 1-3% of Canadian dwellings are constructed of brick, concrete or other fire-resistent materials property destroyed by fire in Canada last year was nearly ten million dollars less than in 1922—the exact figures, compiled by the Monetary Times, being $34,277,550 in 1923, as against $44,206,405 in 1922.

The absorption and application through building trade channels of this enormous quantity of fire-resistant material undoubtedly accounts for some, at least, of the reduction in fire loss. It has reduced the deadly spread of fire by wind-blown sparks and in many cases has blanketed the flames so that they were quickly and easily controlled.

Mineral-surfaced roll roofing and shingles can now be purchased in any town on the American continent. An official of The Barrett Company, Limited, with plants at Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Halifax and Vancouver, states that mineral-surfaced roll roofing has never been sold in Canada at such low prices as in 1924. It can be purchased retail for approximately $3.50 a roll. The cost of applying it to the roof should not run more than two-thirds the cost of wooden shingles or more than one-half the cost of metal shingles.

Because mineral surfaced roll roofing can be marketed at such low cost—because it does not rust, rot or crack, never requires painting—and above all because it is fire-resistant and carries a lower rate of insurance, it has replaced both wooden and metal shingles to a great extent in all parts of the Dominion.

Based on the cost per year of service, it undoubtedly shows a lower roofing cost than any similar product on the market today!

THEN MOTHER TOOK A HAND!

The small boy's head bobbed up over the garden wall, and a meek little voice asked: "Please, Miss Brown, may I have my arrow?"

"Yes, dear, certainly," the next-door neighbor answered, beaming. "Where did it fall?"

"I fink," was the reply, "it's stuck in your cat."—Reynold's Newspaper (London).

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

A HEAD OF CABBAGE.

To the woman who is cooking for two or three a simple head of cabbage often causes much perplexity.

A quarter of a head is often more than enough for one meal and after the cabbage is cut it must be used soon or wasted. Perhaps cooked cabbage is taboo in the family and raw cabbage for four or five meals in succession seems too much of a good thing.

If the odor of the cabbage is the main objection, try cooking it uncovered. Parboil and carefully drain before dressing for the table. Cabbage really has a more delicate flavor than cauliflower or brussels sprouts if it's carefully cooked and served.

In cold weather a cut head of cabbage can be kept for several days if wrapped in oiled paper and freshened in cold water before using.

With cabbage at 5 cents or more per pound none should be thrown away.

The story of this head of cabbage may help you with your next week's menu planning.

With the fish dinner of Friday serve a cabbage salad.

For Saturday luncheon use the leftover fish with cabbage in a salad. The menu might be something like this:

Fish and Cabbage Salad
Hot Cheese Sandwiches
Cookies Tea

Serve cabbage au gratin with the Sunday roast.

Monday plan to have a vegetable soup and use cabbage, carrots, tomatoes and onions for the vegetables. The tomatoes and carrots seem to absorb the disagreeable pungency of the cabbage and the soup is really delicious.

Cabbage Salad.

One cup finely shredded cabbage, 1-2 cup diced celery, 1 apple, 2 tablespoons nuts, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 4 tablespoons oil, paprika.

Add salt and sugar to cabbage and crush slightly with a wooden potato masher. Add celery and apple diced and mix well. Add vinegar, stirring well with a silver fork. Add oil and continue stirring. Sprinkle with paprika and arrange on salad plates. Sprinkle with nuts and serve.

If you happen to have a slice of canned pineapple add this, cut in small pieces. The tartness of the pineapple is quite an addition to the salad.

Fish and Cabbage Salad.

One cup cold flaked fish, 1 cup cabbage finely shredded, 1 green pepper, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, mayonnaise, 1 teaspoon minced parsley.

Remove seeds and white ribs from pepper and cut in shreds. Mix fish and cabbage and pour over lemon juice. Let stand half an hour. Add pepper, salt and parsley. Make moist with mayonnaise and serve on lettuce. Sprinkle with paprika before serving.

Cabbage au Gratin.

Two cups finely shredded cabbage, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 1-2 cups milk, 1 tablespoon grated cheese, 1-4 cup coarse bread crumbs, salt and pepper.

Put cabbage into slightly salted boiling water and boil, uncovered, for 15 minutes. Drain and rinse in cold water. Drain. Put in a well buttered baking dish and pour over the sauce made by melting butter, stirring in flour, slowly adding milk and cooking until thick and smooth. Add cheese and stir until melted. Cover with crumbs, dot with bits of butter and bake in a moderate oven until crumbs are brown.

Cabbage cooked this way will not fill the house with a disagreeable cabbage odor.

This one head of cabbage is used in four different ways, providing nourishing food at a low cost and without monotony.

PEPALL MAY REMAIN.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(Special.)—The authorities may yet allow Andrew Pepall to stay in the United States.

CHOCOLATE PUDDING.

One and one-half cups scalded milk, 4 tablespoons cornstarch, 6 tablespoons sugar, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-4 cup salt, 1-4 cup cold water, 1 square bitter chocolate, 1-2 teaspoonful vanilla, 1 egg white.

Mix cornstarch, sugar and salt with cold water. Shave chocolate and add to milk while it is scalding. Add first mixture to hot milk and cook over hot water for 10 minutes, stirring constantly. The mixture should be thick and smooth. Cook 10 minutes longer, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat and pour slowly into the white of egg beaten until stiff and dry. Add vanilla, pour into mold and let stand on ice until cold and firm.

THE WAY IT GOES!

"How long will it take us to get through with our case, Mr. Lawyer?"

"Well, I suppose I shall be through with it in six months, but I doubt whether you will be in six years."—Klods Hans (Copenhagen).

The Purity Defence League

Not long ago an American minister made a special trip to Moscow to plead with the Bolsheviks to prohibit the making and consumption of vodka.

Ah! So you have adopted our good Bolshevik methods in America, have you? It is the only way. Appealing to people is useless. Just decide what is best for them and then make them do it. We may apply our method as you suggest to vodka one of these days, but we must go easy. Popular opinion and liberty is a curse. I am glad you have found it out in America. Now you see also why we abolish religion where possible. When religion adopts our plan in matters of religion, we will bring it back. You are going that way in America. If it is wise to prohibit a bad thing, it is just as wise to compel the people to adopt a good one."

A GOOD SURPLUS.

Chippawa Development Has Been Source of Large Earnings.

TORONTO, October 3. — Canadian Press. — Estimated in its inception stages to provide sinking fund and renewals after ten years operation Hydro-Electric Chippawa development plant at Queenston, in conjunction with the whole Niagara system, has done this after two years.

Notwithstanding reductions in the power rates to a large number of municipalities during the year, the Niagara Hydro-Electric system, including the Chippawa development, says an official statement from Sir Adam Beck, has earned net surplus of $216,699.39 for the ten months period from Nov. 1, 1923, to Aug. 31, 1924, after providing for all contingencies.

With earnings from two of best hydro business months a year, still to be added in, on ten month total, official expectation is that the surplus on the year will exceed a quarter of a million dollars. This surplus is obtained after allowing $1,375,529 for sinking fund on all Niagara properties, and $696,430 for renewals.

MUST WASH THEIR FACES.

"I am sending out cards for a children's party. What would you say?"

"Say?"

"I think R.S.V.P. sounds stilted for a kid's affair."

"I'd just say, 'Come clean'."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

TRY AGAIN!

Sandy McIntyre, one of the oldest prospectors of northern Ontario, Canada, stumbled on a rich gold mine. But he sold it for $125. Later it developed into the McIntyre Porcupine Mines with a capital stock of $3,690,000. Sandy will keep right on trying to find mines, and the next one will not slip through his fingers so easily, he says.

BRITISH DOCTORS OPPOSE INSURANCE

Union Maintains That Panel System Leads to Inferior Doctoring.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The National Medical Union, which claims to speak for some 16,000 British physicians, is on the warpath against the panel system of medical treatment under the National Insurance Act.

The National Medical Union is now hard at work completing the case which it hopes to establish against the panel system which is to be investigated in October by a Royal Commission whose membership includes Lord Lawrence, chairman; Sir John Anderson, Sir Humphrey Rolleston, Sir Alfred Watson, Sir Arthur Worley and Sir Andrew Duncan.

The union maintains that the panel system leads to inferior doctoring, that panel doctors are unable to give adequate attention to their long lists of patients and that the system is demoralizing and involves pauperization. The forthcoming attack will, it is expected, be the most vigorous yet launched against this phase of the National Insurance Act. Its importance may be gauged by the fact that there are now 15,000,000 panel patients in Enggland, Scotland and Wales.

One charge against the panel system is that the panel doctor, with an enormous list of panel patients, is usually too busy to give them adequate attention. He has private patients, it is charged he must take his panel patients at high speed.

ONLY ONE WAY OF HANGING PICTURES

Pictures Should Conform With the Furnishings of the Room.

There is only rule for hanging pictures:

Pictures should conform with the furnishings of the room, in color, in motive and in size.

Yet many homes may be found with pictures hanging without regard to the rest of the room. The picture in itself may be a beautiful work of art. Yet, if it does not conform with the furnishings and hangings in that room, it is out of place.

Many decorators take a picture as the basic motive for the entire room and build the furnishings, hangings and color combination about it. It cannot but remain the chief attraction in that room on that account, and be in keeping with the other pieces at the same time.

However, it is easier to get a picture for a room than a room for a picture. Therefore, here is some advice on the proper choice of such wall decorations, whether they be tapestries, paintings or plain pictures.

How to Choose

First, decide on the general type of furniture you have, and fix the dominant colors in your mind. Then notice the size of the wall on which you want to place the picture and consider the most proportionate size for the hanging. The size should be decided upon not only with respect to the wall, but to the pieces of furniture as well.

With type, colors and size in mind, even though vaguely, it will be easier to choose the best kind of tapestry, painting or picture for the room.

In doing so, the subject of the picture should be considered. You would not want to place a dark-toned, sombre, heavy piece of art on a wall facing furniture and hangings of light, graceful and delicate design. Nor would you want to select one with a bright, fantastic, jump motive in a room with more dignified furniture about it. It is altogether out of place.

Atmosphere

If you know the atmosphere of the room, you may be able to choose the picture conforming with that atmosphere more easily. Even this is difficult in a store that has pictures of all kinds hanging together for the purpose of sale only.

But, once attracted to a picture, have it taken off the wall and into a small room—the office, perhaps where you may hang it up temporarily and inspect it of itself. Forget its existing surroundings, and picture the hanging where you expect to put it, with your own furniture hangings, rugs in the scene.

It is a difficult process, but it can be done.

FOUR WERE SHOT.

Lotien Outrage Attributed To Agents From Kiangsu Province.

LONDON, Oct. 3—(United Press)—Incendiaries have fired and partially destroyed the village of Lotien, on the Liuho front, according to the Daily Mail's Shanghai correspondent. Four of the incendiaries were captured and summarily shot.

Chekiang headquarters attributed the outrage to agents from Kiangsu Province.

The charge of General Chi Hsieh Yuan that Lung Hsiang has purchased large quantities of kerosene with which to set fire to Shanghai in case he is defeated was generally discredited yesterday.

Oil companies in Shanghai professed ignorance of any such purchase.

A lull in the fighting was reported from all fronts to-day.

STRANGE PILGRIMAGE.

Celebration of the 700th Anniversary of the Coming Of the Franciscans.

LONDON, Oct. 3— (Canadian Press).—Not since Geoffrey Chaucers' pilgrims passed beneath the city gates of ancient Canterbury has this, the mother-city of England, seen a stranger pilgrimmage than that which took place the other day in celebration of the 700th anniversary of the coming of the Franciscans to England.

A Cardinal in scarlet robes in procession through the streets. Behind him were two mitred bishops of the Church of Rome, and then a long file of Franciscans in their brown cowled robes, with sandalled feet and shaven crowns, Dominicans in black and white habits, Capucines, Benedictines, white coiffed nuns in flowing robes of black and grey, and a great following of the laity from all parts of England.

Before a Cardinal walked white-surpiced acolytes, one of whom bore aloft a great silver crucifix. They chanted as they walked, and the sun, filling the ancient streets with light and shadow, invested the spectacle with an illusion of mediaeval splendor.

On arrival the pilgrims, numbering about 700, proceeded to the Catholic church of St. Thomas, where Mass was celebrated by the Bishop of Brentwood in the presence of Cardinal Bourne. A civic welcome was accorded by the Mayor of Canterbury.

From the church the pilgrims marched to the ruins of the old Franciscan Friary, where seven centuries ago the Little Brethren of St. Francis found a haven in a skeptical land. In this perfect setting of old brick walls, framing one of the loveliest gardens in England, a solemn Te Deum was sung.

JAPANESE SHOW INCREASED NAVY

The Last Japanese Naval Manoeuvres Were Held In 1919.

TOKIO, Japan, Oct. 3.—(United Press).—The Grand Naval manoeuvers of the Japanese Navy began in the Japanese Pacific waters today and will end Oct. 24. They are under the direct supervision of the Prince Regent.

They are significant in view of the fact that they show the fighting strength of the Japanese Navy, restricted by the Washington Disarmament Conference.

The last Japanese Naval manoeuvers were held in 1919, with the Emperor, now ill, in command. The war crafts engaged in the last manoeuvers numbered 134. Since then there has been an increase of 54 warships.

As a result of the Naval Treaty made at the Washington Conference, the number of battleships was cut from 12 to 6, battle cruisers from 7 to 4 and cruisers from 20 to 16. Torpedo boats, though, have been increased from 57 to 105 vessels and submarines from 10 to 26.

One hundred eighty-eight vessels, including 63 from the combined squadron and the remaining ships attached to the Yokosuka, Kure and Sasebo naval stations and Mako, Maezuru, Chinkai and Ominato naval depots, will participate in the operations, which started today.

Owing to the increase in the number of auxiliary ships and the length of the maneuvers, the expense to the Government will be five million yen. However, owing to depleted finances, the Grand Naval review, which usually follows the maneuvers, will not be held this

JOHNNIE GILL DEFEATED.

Berlenbach, Knockout King, Failed to Land Sleeper Blow.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., October 3—Canadian Press. — Paul Berlenbash, of New York, gained the newspaper decision over Johnnie Gill of York, Penn., light weight, in their ten round bout at Boyle's Thirty Acres, last night.

Although the knock out king floored Gill twice in the fifth and fourth times in the ten rounds, he failed to put over the sleep producing blow and the New Yorker stayed the limit.

"LOVE IS OF GOD."

This is why Love can enter in
Through dismal streets to haunts of sin;
Where Faith would fear to show her face,
And Hope would scarce expect a place.
Yet bolts and bars all slip aside,
And every door flies open wide
When Love, with simple home-spun dress
Draws near, in all her loveliness.

This is why Love may sit in state
Amid the dwellings of the great.
Not shy, nor timorous, to be
In such exalted company.
At home with merchant, prince, or sage,
Too queenly far for patronage.
Yet with a pilgrim heart and hand
Discoursing of her own dear Land.

This is why loving takes away
The tiredness from a toilsome day,
And all the strain, and all the sting.
For oh, the love of anything,
Lover, or child, or bird, or less,
Is ever trying to express
Its holy origin, but we
Are slow—how slow!—of heart to see.

NEW COATS

Many of the new coats have flounces that are higher in the front than in the back.

SPARKLING EYES FOLLOW GOOD HEALTH

Toronto, Ont., "From the time of my earliest girlhood I had always heard my mother speak in highest praise of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for women's ailments, so it is not at all strange that after I married and had backaches, nervous spells and other distresses that I should remember what my mother had always said of this Prescription, and I found it relieved me of my aches, pains and nervousness. It gave me renewed health and strength and so greatly benefited me that I have no hesitancy in saying that Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription is absolutely perfect as a tonic and nervine for women who are ailing or nervous." Mrs. Rose Craig, 257 Sackville street.

You'll soon feel better if you obtain this Prescription of Dr. Pierce's at your nearest drug store, in tablets or liquid, or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Laboratory in Bridgeburg, Ont., for trial package tablets. Write for free medical advice.

BANKER DEMANDS DECREASE IN TAX

Fewer Laws Are Also Needed by the Present-Day Banker.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3. — (United Press).—Lower taxes and fewer laws were demanded today by Thomas R. Preston, president of the National Bank division of the American Bankers Association, in convention here. Preston is head of the Hamilton Bank, at Chattanooga, Tenn.

After discussing the general subject of banking and agriculture, Preston said:

"A subject of more importance than that of agriculture is the decentralization of the federal government—the giving back to the people and the States some of the rights and privileges that have been taken from them, and the lessening of the burdens of taxation. It would be helpful if we could stop the never-ending avalanche of new laws. Once we kicked against taxation without representation; now we have too much of both.

"The greatest barrier to real prosperity in this country is the item of taxes. Millions are annually drawn from the people in the shape of taxes that ought to go into productive industry. Congress at the last session made a small reduction in income taxes, but at the same time increased the debt on the American people at least three billion dollars. This is going on the assumption that the way to get out of a hole is to dig deeper in.

To Solve All Problems.

"There is a perfect mania for the Government to attempt to solve all problems. Many of our laws are forced by special interests, by treasury raiders and meddlesome reformers. There are now located in Washington more than five hundred offices representing over five hundred groups of special interests, some to prevent, but most of them to promote some kind of special legislation and calling for increased government expense.

"Not laws are, in part at least, responsible for our burdens of taxation. In the past sixteen years there have been more than one million new laws proposed in Congress and in the forty-eight State legislatures. Most of these proposed laws are intended to regulate the life and business of the people and call for for enormous expenditures. About thirteen per cent of the laws proposed have found their way upon the statute books. This does not include thousands of regulation promulgated by the hundreds of bureaus and commissions in Washington, nor does it include the countless ordinances of cities and counties. There were pending at the last session of Congress 170 measures proposing to amend our Constitution. For the one hundred years ending in 1909 it was amended four times since then it has been amended four times in fourteen years.

People To Blame.

"This situation has been brought about largely by the neglect or indifference of the American people themselves. Forty years ago eighty per cent of the people voted; now less than forty per cent vote. The man who neglects his responsibilities as a citizen has no right to complain of prevailing conditions. What the pepole out to do is to lift the yoke from the necks of the American people and let them stand erect once more as law-abiding, self-respecting men and women. Let America be America."

ONIONS SHOULD BE USED FREQUENTLY

They Are One of the Best Nerve Foods That Can Be Eaten.

This simple garden vegetable can hardly be valued too highly or used too freely. From some peculiarity of the onion, its nourishing properties more than double those of the potato. Without regard to its peculiar flavor, the onion should be much more eaten than it is. An eminent physician once said, "If health is desirable, and if you wish to live long, eat onions."

Onions are said to be the best nervine and tone up the system of one suffering from nervous prostration as nothing else can do.

Another physician says: "The safest and quickest prescription for clearing the blood, is to eat raw onion finely minced, at breakfast. Finely chopped onions, eaten with salt and vinegar as a salad, are an excellent tonic to the stomach and especially beneficial to those suffering from dyspepsia. Its value, too, as a poultic, in cases of inflammation, is well known.

If onions are so valuable and the above are facts which cannot be disputed, not one is eaten where 10 ought to be.

An old lady who had lived to the remarkable age of 104 years, when asked, a short time before her death, to what she causes she attributed her long life, among other simple and healthful rules given, one was that she had eaten onions every day of her life since she could remember. The onion certainly should have a prominent place to $9.00 a cwt. and a few choice among our garden vegetables and upon our table.—L. R. S.

MUST PAY LIQUIDATORS.

MONTREAL, October 2. — Acting Chief Justice Martin, Superior court, this morning gave judgment condemning the National Sporting Club, Ltd., and T. J. Duggan, president, to pay the Home Bank, through its liquidators, Clarkson and Weldon, the sum of $410 on a note with interest, costs of protest and court disbursements.

DANCE QUEEN.

Thamar Karsavina is called the "Queen of Modern Dancing" in Europe. She is one of the leading exponents of that school of Russian dancing which produced Pavlowa, Fokine and others. And what is most important, this talented dancer is soon to make her American debut.

FABLES ON HEALTH

Most boys come in with bruised or cut fingers, particularly during the baseball and football season—and the Mann youngster was no exception.

So Mrs. Mann generally was prepared with a liberal assortment of finger stalls or covers.

They should be made to fit all sizes of fingers. White cotton or wash gloves may be used. Sew on narrow tapes for tying around the wrist and place in the medicine chest for emergency.

When the finger it cut or mashed or bruised, wash it very clean and place a small piece of absorbent cotton over the wound, draw on the finger pocket and deluge with spirits of turpentine. Keep the hand up, but resting easily for 15 minutes. Unless inflammation appears have the finger alone—otherwise see that it gets attention.

Teach the children, particularly boys, to take immediate precaution when they wound themselves in the hands and feet. Sucking a wound is a good immediate remedy, but should be followed by a thorough wash and a solution of carbolic acid or iodine.

'LONG LOST SISTER' FINDS BROTHER ON DEATHBED

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Oct. 3. —A newspaper account of an accident in which Edward A. Althouse, of Cadillac, was probably fatally injured a few days ago, led Mrs. Perry Hannithan, "long lost sister" of Althouse, to his bedside in Blodgett Hospital here.

Althouse had believed his sister resided in California, and not having heard from her in years, expected he would not live to see her. Physicians had determined his back as broken when the sister, on a visit here, took her part in the strange reunion.

PEASANTS HEAVY LAND OWNERS

BREMEN, Oct. 3.—A German investigator of Russia, Dr. Adolph Grabowsky, declares that prior to the war the peasants of Russia owned 35 percent of the land, while the family and the state owned an equal amount. Today the peasants possess 97 percent and the state 3 percent of the land within the boundries of the country.

FASHIONS & FOIBLES

by Shirley Sharon

Little coats of gay colored woolens take kindly to the idea of the scarf and flare out above plump bare knees.

HAVE you ever noticed that you can usually tell the age of a child's mother by the color of the child's coat? Sober, practical colors generally mean the youngest child of a family of middle-aged parents. Gay colors, a mother still young enough to be frivolous and impractical. One envies the bit of femininity in a French coat of powder-blue cheviot, geranium homespun, soft green kasha or an amazing green and lilac plaid. She may be a bit short on vitamins, but you may be sure she'll have stray buttons, socks and the new scarf collar and that her tiny flared coat will be as brief in length as those you see on smartly dressed children in the Bois, in Hyde Park, on Fifth Avenue and other delightful places.

HUNTS 'RED-HEAD' WIFE WHO WOULDN'T COOK

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 3.—Last Sunday Harry Conley and his wife, Leona, had an argument about who would get up and get the breakfast. Mrs. Conley got up, but she didn't get the breakfast.

Instead she packed her clothing and left home. Ever since Harry has been eating in restaurants and he's tired of it. He's asked the police to aid him in the search for his wife whom he describes as being "red headed."

FIND EARTHQUAKES FOLLOW HIGH TIDES

Earthquakes Can Be Foretold By Excessive Rises or Falls of Tides.

TOKIO, Japan, Oct. 3.—Japanese seismologists are engaged in a discussion as to whether there is connection between earthquakes and high tides along the coast.

Naokichi Maeda, chief of the Choshi meteorological observatory, has brought forth observations covering several years to prove that earthquakes can be foretold by excessive rises or falls of the tide. Early on the morning of Aug. 14 Tokio and the districts were shaken by a fairly severe tremor. For several days previous tides along the Choshi coast, northeast of Tokio, where Mr. Maeda makes his observations, had been abnormally high and he had predicted a shock. That a shock came he claims is proof of his theory that abnormal tides mean the approach of an earthquake.

Mr. Maeda quotes figures for the tides just before the disastrous earthquakes of Sept. 1, 1924. At that time, he says, the tides were so high that the fishermen along the coast, who eke out a living by gathering seaweed in the shallows, complained that the water was so deep in their accustomed hunting grounds that their industry was sadly crippled. Then the big quake came. Mr. Maeda also recalls that excessively low tides preceded an earthquake which did considerable damage in Tokio an the surrounding country in April, 1922.

Dr. Meiko Imamura, head of the seismological department of the Imperial University of Tokio, admits that there may be some delation between tides and earthquakes, but declares that Mr. Maeda's theory is borne out in only one case in five and is not yet acceptable.

ITCHING ECZEMA DRIED RIGHT UP WITH SULPHUR

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment and disfigurement. Sufferers from skin trouble should get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like a cold cream.

Lord Dewar Hands Over Kinnoull Hill to Native City

WITTY SPEECH

Donor Plants Memorial Oak Tree on Scottish Landmark

The deeds of Kinnoull Hill, the famous beauty spot, and a landmark which commands a fine view of the City of Perth and the Tay Valley, were handed over to the city by Lord Dewar.

The donor referred to the days he spent on the hill, getting more fun out of a rusty hoop off an old oil barrel than many men got today out of a six-cylinder car.

"Fun to a boy," he said, "is as essential as sunshine to a cabbage."

He then jocularly attacked the cynicism of the age, and said:

When a child is born into the world everybody wants to kiss him; before he goes out many want to kick him.

If he does not succeed in his calling he is a failure; if he makes money he is a profiteer.

If he goes to church on a Sunday he is a hypocrite; if he does not he is a sinner.

If he gives it is for advertisement; if he does not he is stingy.

If he rides in a Rolls-Royce he is extravagant and encouraging Socialism; if he rides in a Ford he is a joke.

Where there is a will there is a law suit, and man's inhumanity to man makes countless lawyers mourn for more of it.

When a doctor makes a mistake he buries it, but when a judge makes a mistake it becomes the law of the land.

The city had a half-holiday, and a large crowd was present when the Lord Provost and magistrates, dressed in regalia, drove to the entrance of the hill with Lord Dewar.

Here the Lord Provost called upon the town clerk to take possession of the land from the hands of Lord Dewar's representatives.

The bailiff of the property gave the clerk a quantity of earth and stone representing the land, and a quantity of grass and corn representing its product.

Kinnoull Hill is about 800 ft. high, and from the summit is a view which Pennant describes as the glory of Scotland.

SOCIALIST CANON FOR WESTMINSTER

Cleric Who Led Out-of-Works to Lambeth Palace

PREMIER'S FRIEND

Took Side of Suffragettes and Worked for Social Reforms

The King has approved the appointment to the vacant canonry at Westminster Abbey of Canon Frederic Lewis Donaldson, Canon Residentiary of Peterborough and rector of Paston, Northamptonshire.

The Canon is a Socialist and a friend of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald. He first came into prominence in 1905, when he was vicar of St. Mark's, Leicester, and headed a march of the unemployed from Leicester to London.

He took his out-of-work flock to Lambeth Palace, rang the bell, and invited the Archbishop to come out and shake hands with the men.

St. Mark's, Leicester, was then regarded as a kind of Labor Cathedral. Pictures of workmen in rough clothes replaced those of saints and martyrs.

Seven large panels behind the altar were filled with paintings setting forth the evils and cures of modern industrialism. Here is Canon Donaldson's description of one of them:

Labor is seen either carrying massive material or carrying some unseen weight, without hope or expectation, with bowed head and back.

No face can be discerned looking upward, but all seem absorbed in the mere burden of existence.

In the foreground is the figure of a fallen man, symbolising Labor overwhelmed by its burden.

The quiet, watchful figure above represents Mammon oblivious to all but his personal aggrandisement; bags of money are on his lap, and a grim callousness to the pain around him is expressed on his countenance.

More than ten years ago, Canon Donaldson spoke of the growth of Socialism in the Church, and emphasized the Church's part in Labor's progress.

"We must realize that the poor are the Church," he said.

"It is not so much for the poor to hear the Church's message as for the Church to hear theirs.

"The Church must not sit in judgment on the poor—the poor now occupy the judgment seat."

The Canon was one of the founders of the Church Socialist League, took the side of the suffragettes, and wrote and lectured in the cause of social reform.

Before he went to Leicester he had held appointments in the East-end of London, at Hammersmith, and at St. Peter's, Piccadilly.

Last year he organized and headed a memorial of 600 clergymen to Mr. MacDonald, welcoming the advent of Labor.

DEATH PUZZLE SOLVED.

The mystery of the death of Mrs. Irene Appleby, of Pontefract, who turned blue and died after being unconscious for ten days, was explained at the inquest.

An infirmary doctor said that he had treated Mrs. Appleby for jaundice, but a post-mortem examination showed that death was due to chronic nephritis. A verdict of "death from natural causes" was recorded.

Floating Mine Nearly Blows Up Channel Steamer

Floating mines are still a menace to cross-Channel steamers.

That is evident from the experience of the Belgian mail steamer Stad Antwerpen, as told on arrival at Dover from Ostend.

Near the Goodwin Lightship the skipper suddenly saw a floating mine, but by splendid seamanship the steamer's course was changed just in the nick of time.

But for this immediate action the ship, which was carrying a large number of passengers and mails, would have been blown up. Several mines have been seen recently.

FROCKS TREATED WITH OLIVE OIL

Jumpers and Skirts Made of Doeskin This Season's Fashion

GAZELLE TRIMMED

Washable Like Gloves is Advantage Claimed for Them

Doeskin frocks will be attractive items in woman's wardrobe for the coming season.

They will wash like gloves. The smartest have collars, cuffs, and pocket flaps of vivid gazelle suede—orange, flame, cardinal, or forester green.

They are usually made in jumper and skirt form, the jumper being fashioned out of four large skins and the skirt of three. The fine texture of the leather gives it a dirt-resisting quality.

Doeskin dresses are warm and soft. A white suede hat, with pipings to match the contrasting color on the dress, is generally worn with it.

A pretty model seen was made of white skin trimmed with patent leather and had a belt of the same material, and the wide, boat-shaped neck was laced on the shoulder with cire ribbon that reached the cuff of the long sleeve.

A tablespoonful of olive oil is a useful addition to the soap flakes in which these dresses are washed, as the oil keeps the doeskin soft and prevents it from shrinking.

Girl Stowaway Gets to Scotland; Happy Experience

A remarkable story of a girl stowaway came to light on the arrival of the White Star liner Homeric.

A few hours before the vessel left New York, a young Scots girl, named Mary Mahon, crept on board and mingled with the other passengers until the ship put to sea. The loss of her employment as a clerk and news that her mother was seriously ill in Glasgow had reduced her to despair, and with little money and no friends, she took the only means, as she thought, of returning home.

She gave herself up to the purser when the vessel was clear of the American coast and told him her story. It became known to the passengers, who at a meeting in the smoke-room collected for her nearly £125. Her passage as a third-class passenger was paid, and the balance handed to her. She landed at Southampton to catch the train for Glasgow radiantly happy.

Two Frisky Scots Want to Wrestle, Run Or Climb at Eighty

Two Scottish councillors, each over 80 years of age, are anxious to prove their athletic prowness.

Councillor Finlay Ferguson, of Calander, Perthshire, who recently claimed to be the oldest town councillor in Scotland, has received a challenge from another claimant to that honor—Councillor Anthony White, of Peebles.

Councillor White states that he is prepared to engage in a wrestling match to decide the question. Councillor Ferguson evidently scorns a trial of strength of that kind and has proposed a race to the top of Ben Ledi, 3,000 feet high, and, on descending, a further test in climbing a greasy pole, 20 feet high.

The suggested stakes are a holiday at Wembley—the expenses not to exceed £200, to be defrayed by the ratepayers of the burgh of the successful contestant.

IRISH ASYLUM STAFF ON STRIKE

Civic Guards have been summoned to the Ballinasloe Mental Hospital, where all the men attendants, with the exception of thirteen, went on strike.

An appeal to the general public for assistance has also been issued by the resident medical superintendent.

The strike is a protest against the appointment of a man from outside the institution to the position of back gate porter.

Six hundred starving lunatics made dashes for freedom last April when 100 attendants at the Donegal County Asylum at Letterkenny went on strike.

Violent patients escaped and caused great alarm among the inhabitants of the district.

MODERN CAVE-DWELLERS.

Owing to the housing shortage several old caves in the cliffs around Blackhall Rocks, near Hartlepool, are being used as human habitations. Children are among the occupants.

Old bags and tarpaulins hung from the cliff sides protect the inmates, and the entrances are partly built up with stones and turf.

FAST MOTOR-BOAT THAMES SERVICE

Luxurious Craft Equipped With Licensed Restaurants Will Ply

LOW DRAUGHT

Former Efforts to Establish Passenger Service Failed

London's new fleet of fast and luxurious motor-boats will start its service on the Thames at Easter next. The fares will be at the rate of a penny a mile.

Twenty-five vessels of the latest type, 100 feet long, and capable of carrying 300 passengers, will maintain a fifteen-minute service between Hammersmith and Woolwich.

The craft will be equipped with writing-rooms, saloons, promenade decks, and fully licensed restaurants. They will be driven by powerful British-built semi-Diesel engines developing 192 horse power.

SPEED.

Their speed will be nine miles an hour against the tide, and during the rush hours will make non-stop runs. Twelve of the twenty-five stations on the Thames are already installed. The sanction of the London County Council is awaited for the building of the other thirteen.

The draught of the Thames boats will be 3 ft. 9 ins. This will allow the vessels to play at any state of the tide in the Thames. The piers will be built out into the river for enough to give 4 ft. of water at low tide.

The idea of the Thames Express Motor Fleet was originated by Sir Samuel Instone, the shipowner and pioneer of air travel, in conjunction with Lord Montagu of Beaulieu. Four former efforts to place passenger boats on the Thames met with failure.

KNUCKLE-DUSTER FIGHT IN LONDON

Rival Gangs Battle in Street and Disappear Suddenly

Amazing scenes were witnessed in Oxford street, London, when gangs of men, armed with knuckle-dusters, suddenly engaged in a free fight.

Prior to the extraordinary incident, it was noticed by the Sunday afternoon crowds that two light, covered vans were being driven along Oxford street at a rapid pace.

Suddenly the leading van slowed up and a band of men jumped out. Each man was equipped with a knuckle-duster.

Pedestrians were bewildered at what followed. The second van stopped, and a similarly armed crew lept down into the road.

In a moment the two gangs had come to grips, and the men fought furiously for several minutes.

Police whistles were blown, women screamed, and for a time there was general uproar and alarm.

When the panic was at its height, and the police whistles were screeching insistently, the rival gangs rushed back to the vans, one party carrying a bleeding man, who had been knocked down in the strange encounter.

The vans then drove off and disappeared from sight before the police arrived.

Scotland Yard officials are unable to throw any light on the mysterious affair.

Emily Hickey, Founder Of Browning Society, And Poetess, Dead

Emily Henrietta Hickey, the Irish poetess, died in the Hospital of St. John and St. Elizabeth, St. John's Wood, in her 79th year.

She was the daughter of Canon Hickey, of Macmine Castle, Wexford, and granddaughter of the Irish writer, "Martin Doyle."

Educated privately, she afterwards lectured on literary subjects, and was one of the founders of the Browning Society.

Miss Hickey was one of the exponents of the new school of Irish poetry, in which Mr. W. B. Yeats, Mr. George Russell ("A. E."), and others have played a prominent part. Her first publication was "A Sculptor and other Poems," in 1881, and since then she has written many volumes of poems, stories, and articles. An ardent member of the Roman Catholic Church, most of her work has been of a religious character.

LEADS KING IN CHORUS

At a command performance given by Sir Harry Lauder at Balmoral Castle, the comedian sang, at the King's special request, his song "I love a lassie." When I got to the chorus," said Sir Harry to a reporter, "the whole company joined in, the King and Queen singing as lustily as any, and obviously enjoying every line of it." The audience included ghillies, tenants, and household servants.

Here is the famous comedian tossing the caber at the Highland Games at Braemar recently.

FACTORY BURNS, 100 ARE IDLE

Over 100 workers are idle, and £20,000 damage has been done by a fire which burnt out Stebbutt and Garrett's boot and shoe factory at Hinckley, Leicestershire.

Flames, rising to a great height, were visible for miles around.

WOMAN'S LOAN PROVES COSTLY

A woman told the Walsall magistrates that five years ago she borrowed $13.00 from a neighbor. She had paid $3.00 a week ever since and still owed the sum she borrowed.

The Magistrate's Clerk: You have paid more than $750.

The woman was advised not to pay any more.

WOMAN ATTACKS INFURIATED BULL

Hearing her father's distressing cries Miss Harrison, of Hurley Village, Warwickshire, hurried to a shed on the farm, and found he was being gored by an infuriated bull.

Procuring a fork, Miss Harrison attacked the animal and drove it off. As she helped her father into the house the bull dashed from the shed to renew its attack. Mr. Harrison was badly mauled.

CAST IRON HOUSES FOR GREAT BRITAIN

A Rotherham iron founder proposes to erect houses of cast iron plates covered in concrete and plaster.

It is said that coffins of cast iron found in the vaults under St. James' Church, Sheffield, showed no signs of decay after nearly a hundred years.

The inventor declares that patterns could be standardized and duplicated at nominal cost, and that the scheme would not only solve the housing problem but keep all iron foundries busy and provide work in kindred industries.

LORD BEAVERBROOK BOOSTS CANADA

Lord Beaverbrook, returning from a visit to Canada says in the Express:

"Everywhere in Canada I have found manifest signs and indisputable proofs of progress and prosperity in banking and commerce, in industry and railway management, and most of all in the very temper and abilities of the people themselves. They feel instinctively that they are as yet but standing on th threshold of their future wealth and greatness. My advice to hard-working and venturesome lads in the Old Country is this: 'Go to Canada and grow up with the country.'"

VILLAGE "SPOOK" NEAR WEYMOUTH

The mystery of ghostly visitations in the village of Chickerell, near Weymouth, is believed to have been solved by a discovery made by workmen.

When digging clay from an old pit they came across the skeleton of a man of enormous build, over 6 ft. in height. The skull was not broken and the teeth were well preserved.

It is an out-of-way spot where the remains were found, and the place has been carefully avoided by villagers at night time. The apparition which is said to haunt the lonely lane is that of an old preventive officer.

HUNDRED-YEAR-OLD CEMENT PATENT

Among those who were present at the centenary celebrations at Leeds of the invention of Portland cement was the 17-year-old great-grandson of Joseph Aspdin, the inventor.

At the unveiling in Leeds Town Hall of a tablet to the memory of Aspdin, his great grandson carried the certificate of the original patent taken out by the inventor a hundred years ago.

The Americans, who attended the celebrations, were greatly interested in young Aspdin, and he received several offers of a post in America. His mother and five other descendants of the inventor were also present.

EXCHANGE ON WHEEL USED BY "SIGNALS"

At the signals exercise which the Second Division is holding between Havant and Bordon, Hants, in connection with the Army manoeuvres, a new mobile "station" has been tried in Britain.

The "station," which is about six feet square, runs on two wheels and can be drawn by a light lorry. It contains a ten-line telephone exchange, as many telegraph instruments, and a number of telephone sets. It can be linked with wires faster than the engineers can lay them.

The lanes and paths for miles north of Petersfield, at which is Divisional Headquarters, were lined with miles of telegraph and telephone wires.

Offertory boxes in several churches in East Kent have been robbed recently.

MUST KEEP SOBER FOR 12 MONTHS

A man, described as a good fellow when sober, was bound over at Exeter for using threats to his wife, on condition that he did not visit a public house for 12 months.

The man, considered the prohibition as "hard lines," but the justices, presided over by Lady Radford, insisted upon it.

GERMANS POURING INTO ENGLAND

Out of 350 passengers arriving at Folkestone by the Flushing route on one night more than one hundred were Germans.

They were nearly all commercial travellers representing large German firms, and were well supplied with money. They travelled first class on the boat, and most of them used the Pullman cars on the train to London.

COW SWALLOWS VIPER AND DIES

A farmer of Fairley, near Beauly, Ross-shire, has lost a valuable cow, which died as a result of eating a small serpent.

The viper was taken into the cow's mouth along with grass. Poisoning ensued, and the cow died in a short time.

BEGGAR WHO HAD GOOD BANK ROLL

An old man named Newton Bartlett, when charged with begging at Birmingham, was stated to have bank books showing over £700 to his credit.

He also had in his possession £5 in Treasury notes and some silver.

Bartlett protested against the charge, saying he had enough to live upon without seeking assistance. He was fined £1 and he voluntarily put a pound note in the poor box.

LONDONER'S WEEK-END IN CANADA

A Londoner has succeeded in making a week-end visit to Ontario in manner following: Travelling to the States on a famous liner, he hastened to Ontario, where he spent from Saturday to Tuesday with a son, reaching New York again in time to catch the same boat home. The son had no idea that his father had crossed the Atlantic until he greeted him in his Canadian home.

SECRET NOOK IN OLD SURREY INN

During alterations to one of the oldest public houses in the South of England—The Plough Inn, Old Malden, Surrey, which dates back over six hundred years—a secret hiding-place leading from one of the bedrooms to the roof was discovered.

The oak timbers supporting the roof were found to be in a splendid state of preservation. It has been decided that the quaint old-taproom, with its stone floor, low beamed ceiling, ingle nooks, and great open fireplace, is to remain in its original state.

DAUGHTER'S KEEP AFTER MARRIAGE

The case in which a father was summoned under a law passed in the reign of Queen Elizabeth respecting the maintenance of his married daughter in a lunatic asylum was again mentioned at Old-street Police Court, London.

Mr. Jenkins, for the Whitechapel Guardians, said that the magistrate previously made an order for the payment of sixpence weekly by the woman's husband. The summons against the father was then adjourned, and he had now consented to an order for twenty-four shillings a week.

GIRL'S ADVICE TO DROWNING BROTHER

"Keep your mouth shut, Arthur," was the advice shouted by a little Chertsey girl when she saw her three-year-old brother fall from the edge of a punt into the water near Chertsey lock. The child remembered what her father had told her to do if ever she fell into water.

The boy, Arthur Shepherd, whose parents reside in a bungalow near the lock, followed his sister's advice, but sank in deep water.

He was, however, rescued by H. Ariett, the lock-keeper, who raced to the spot in a dinghy, and with grappling irons brought him to land. After artificial respiration the child recovered.

GOSPEL IN BUS.

Four gospel preachers entered a bus at Camberwell Green last evening, and, to the surprise of the other occupants, opened hymn books, unfolded a banner, and sang several hymns, at the top of their voices. They were on their way to conduct a street corner service.

In connection with rat repression in Battersea, the expenditure for 1923 works out at 2s. 4½d. per rat killed.

CANADIAN HEIR TO LARGE FORTUNE

Windsor Hotel Employe Searching Records in England

BROADWAY ESTATE

Could Not Be Distributed for Seven Generations

There has just arrived in Torquay a Canadian bootblack, named William Montague Perrin Brayley, and members of his family who are diligently searching for particulars of their descent from William Webber, the founder of an immense fortune.

Webber came from Germansweek, North Devon, and on his death over a hundred years ago his money was so willed that until the seventh generation it could not be distributed.

The estates, which comprise practically the whole of Manhattan Island, including New York's Broadway, are estimated to be worth fifteen million pounds.

Brayley's mother came from Barnstaple, North Devon, and her mother was a Webber of Germansweek.

The bootblack was employed in a hotel at Windsor, Ontario, when a visitor mentioned that he was travelling to England to discover claimants to the Webber millions. Brayley had heard from his mother that the family had a claim to the estate, and he decided to leave at once for England.

PENSIONER'S CLAIM TO RIPON TITLE

Coventry Inhabitant Unable to Pursue Matter for Lack of Funds

Henry Robinson, an old-age pensioner of 74, living at 5 Greyfriars lane, Coventry, claims to be the 3rd Marquis of Ripon, in succession to the 2nd marquis, who died suddenly last September while shooting, and with whose death the title lapsed, as he left no issue.

"I am a grandson of Philemond Robinson, of West Bromwich, who was brother to George Frederick Robinson, born in 1782, and who became Viscount Goderich and afterwards Earl of Ripon," Mr. Robinson told a Daily Mail representative. The earl's son was created a marquis for his services in connection with the Washington Treaty of 1871.

Mr. Robinson states that his claim has long been known in the family, but that he is unable to pursue it owing to lack of funds.

MAYORESS, AGED 12 FOR SURREY TOWN

Schoolgirl Daughter of Mayor-Elect, Youngest Official of Kind

Mayoress of Richmond, Surrey, at 12! That is the experience which befell little Betty Howitt, daughter of Councillor Arthur Howitt, a hotel proprietor and the mayor-elect of Richmond.

Miss Betty is a dark-eyed, serious little girl, who seems to think that greatness has been thrust upon her.

"They say that I shall be the youngest mayoress in the country," she said to a press representative, "but really it is all due to daddy. Everybody has been very kind to me, and the retired mayoress has promised to chaperon me for the first few months.

"AWFULLY AFRAID."

"Sometimes I feel awfully afraid I won't be able to fill the office properly. Still," she said, with a laugh, "I can only do my best and I am certainly not going to get frightened before I start.

"Opening bazaars and things like that will be very funny to begin with, because I have only been in the Town Hall twice in my life.

"I have already had my hair bobbed, and that makes me feel a lot older. And then I always liked reading in story books how good mayoresses take things to the poor, and it is fine to think I shall have a chance of doing so."

As the little mayoress is still in her schooldays she is not sure how much time she will have to devote to her official duties.

Horses are Coming Back for Haulage Work in England

Commenting on the increasing reversion of horse traction for haulage purposes, which he says is taking place, Mr. A. B. Charlton, secretary of the Shire Horse Society, stated that the reasons for this are substantial.

Mr. Charlton enumerated economy in working, special adaptability to short journeys with frequent stops, and the pulling capacity of the horse, which has been demonstrated by the official tests of the Shire Horse Society in London and in America by the dynamometer.

"These important factors," added Mr. Charlton, "have not been overlooked by transport and cartage firms. Metropolitan boroughs are now buying horses to reinforce their depleted studs."

CANON HUGHES DEAD.

The Rev. Canon James Hughes, Roman Catholic priest, who in 1921 travelled on a secret visit to Ireland with Lord Derby, died at Liverpool, aged 57.

On that occasion Lord Derby adopted the name of "Mr. Edwards," and under the guidance of Canon Hughes was able to speak with some of the Irish leaders. Canon Hughes, a native of Newry, was a noted linguist.

RIVAL TO WHEAT COMES FROM INDIA.

The current number of the Miller mentions a cereal known as "Adlay," cultivated in Asia and India, which may become a rival to wheat.

"A cereal chemist informs us," says the journal, "that from his investigations he considers it equal to wheat as a food and a great deal superior to maize, rice or rye. The grain as now cultivated is very hard and tough, and the correct method of milling has yet to be discovered."

ROYAL ALMSMAN'S STORIES OF ABBEY

Official Retiring After 48 Years' Service is Reminiscent

Many stories of Westminster Abbey were given by Thomas West, the senior Royal almsman, who, after 48 years' service, is retiring at the age of 75.

He is not entirely to sever his connection with the Abbey, for he has been invited to assist in the summer work of looking after visitors.

"I am told I should not be able to rest in complete retirement, so thoroughly has the service here become part of one's life," Mr. West smilingly said.

"Americans often come in groups of 40 or 50, and are surprisingly versed in Abbey matters; while some are so keen after momentoes that they have asked for old chairs and cushions.

"In the early morning we occasionally have parties of excursionists who have travelled through the night, some getting so tired that they have gone to sleep in the pews.

"I have taken thousands of people round, often including famous visitors. One day a plainly-dressed lady turned out to be the aunt of the King of Spain.

"An outstanding incident of past years was a suffragettes' visit, when the Archbishop of Canterbury preached at the Abbey. The suffragettes caused some trouble, and about 30 had to be turned out.

"Then there was once a little bother with one or two anti-ritualists when a Bishop preached."

A Londoner, Chelsea born, Mr. West recalled having been at all the Abbey's most memorable services dating from Queen Victoria's Jubilee, with Royalties figuring in imposing ceremonial and the historic building aglow with color and pageantry.

His appointment as Royal almsman—a reward for service which comes only to a man who has passed 60—was the last made by King Edward.

Little Dorrit's Church To Perpetuate Dickens Memorial Scheme

The announcement of a proposal to erect a Dickens Memorial in the Church of St. George the Martyr, Southwark, suggests the question why it has not been done before? St. George's is the church of "Little Dorrit," the child of the Marshalsea. She was christened there one Sunday afternoon, "when the turnkey being relieved was off the lock," the said turkey being sponsor; she slept in the vestry on the night she and Maggie were locked out of the Marshalsea; and here too she was married to Arthur Clennam.

To this day hundreds of American visitors go to Little Dorrit's church, and it is difficult to make some of them believe that she was only the child of a novelist's imagination. Whatever form the Dickens Memorial in the church should take, Little Dorrit should be represented.

Walks Five Miles In Sleep; Wakes Up But Loses Memory

Hatless, barefoted, wearing pyjamas with a broad red stripe and carrying under his arm a parcel resembling a banjo, a middle-aged man named Frank Humby, of Brighton, was found in Woking, Surrey, about 4 o'clock in the morning.

He was at first taken to be a street performer, and not interfered with until a railway worker informed the police that the man was apparently walking in his sleep.

Humby was found to be in a semi-conscious condition, and was taken to hospital suffering from loss of memory.

He had walked five miles from Woodham, where he had been staying while engaged on alterations at St. Nicholas Homes, Pyrford.

Postcards Arrive 22 Years Late; No Extra Charge

The Post Office has this week beaten its own record.

There have been many instances of long delayed letters and postcards being delivered, sometimes after 10, 15 or 20 years, but a Wandsworth resident has just received two such cards by the same post.

One card was posted at Newry, Ireland, on July 15, 1902, and the other at Barmouth, North Wales, on July 25, 1904.

With a difference of two years in the dates of posting, it is extraordinary that they should have arrived 20 and 22 years late by the same delivery.

The first was addressed "Miss Tilly, 405, Fulham-road, London, S.W.," and the other "Miss Tilly, Fulham-road, Walham-green, London, S.W.," with a foot-note "opp. Town Hall," the writer evidently not knowing the number of the house.

The addressee (Mrs. R. A. Ness) is now married, and lives in Lebanon-gardens, Wandsworth.

Until recently on the practice, the Post Office made a surcharge of 1d. on cards which for years had been undelivered, the argument being that the present postal rate was 1d., and, as the card only bore a halfpenny stamp, the postage was insufficient.

It is interesting to note that in neither case was Mrs. Ness surcharged. The absurd practice in such instances has apparently now been stopped.

Towards a parsonage for the new mining village of Clipstone, near Mansfield, the Duke of Portland has given £1,000.

BOGUS CURATE IN YORKSHIRE PULPIT

Officiated at Two Marriages and Christened Babies

GOOD PREACHER

Unable to Produce His Credentials to Bishop Starts Trouble

The "Rev. W. A. Barbour, B.A.," who, in the role of a curate, conducted baptismal and wedding services in a Yorkshire parish, is now wanted by the West Riding police, who hold a warrant for his arrest.

It is alleged that he was not in Holy Orders, and a charge has been preferred against him of obtaining money by false pretences.

Barbour held positions in two parishes. He went to Leeds last May as a lay reader at the church of St. Agnes. Burmantofts, a position he held for a month.

He is then said to have assumed clerical clothing and to have blossomed out as the "Rev. W. A. Barbour, B.A." In that name he took a position as temporary curate at the parish church of Pudsey. He performed the church services and preached for five Sundays, but did not officiate at any marriages at Pudsey. His sermons are said to have been unusually good.

While at Pudsey he represented that he had served some years with a well-known missionary society in the Congo, a statement which is now questioned. He wore the hood of a Bachelor of Arts of London.

The vicar of Pudsey was in need of a permanent curate and offered the position to Barbour, who agreed to accept it. He had then, however, to produce to the Bishop of Bradford, certain credentials.

ENGAGED TO BE MARRIED.

Instead of doing so he left his lodgings in Leeds, and the last that was heard of him was a postcard from Down, Ireland, purporting to come from a Miss Jones, a Liverpool girl, to whom he was engaged, which stated that he was very ill and not expected to live many days.

Serious complications have followed another curacy which Barbour is alleged to have held temporarily at Queensbury.

Here it is stated he not only preached, christened babies, administered the Holy Communion, but also conducted the marriage ceremony on several occasions.

While in Leeds, Barbour represented that he was the author of several books of sermons, and explained the frequent arrival of letters containing money by saying that the money represented royalties on his books.

He is described as being 5 ft. 2 ins. in height and of slender build. He has a dark complexion, grey eyes and light brown hair. When he disappeared from Leeds and Pudsey he was wearing grey clerical clothes and a fawn velour hat.

PENNY GIFTS TO BURY EVANGELIST

People of Reading Pay Tribute to Man Who Died Penniless

The poorest people in Reading, England, brought their pennies and twopences to the graveside to prevent Richard Jones, a prominent local evangelist, from being buried in a pauper's grave.

He died penniless in a lodging house, and subscriptions had been invited to defray the cost of a grave for him, arrangements meanwhile being made in anticipation that the money would be forthcoming.

No relatives followed the coffin, but a large number of townspeople were present to show their respect for him.

THIRTEEN GUESTS ARE TAKEN ILL

Ptomaine Poisoning Believed Cause of Peer's Party Sequel

Thirteen out of 14 members of a dinner party given by Lord and Lady Terrington, at The Gables, Frinton-on-Sea, Essex, were taken seriously ill shortly afterwards. Lady Terrington, who is Liberal M.P. for the Wycomb division of Buckinghamshire, is still very ill, Lord Terrington will be unable to get up for several days, his brother, Mr. Woodhouse, has been seriously ill, and five members of the house party are only now recovering. Five of the guests not staying in the house were also attacked, and only one of those who sat down to dinner was unaffected. Some of the servants also complained of illness.

The food remaining from the dinner, which might have enabled the mystery to be solved, had been disposed of before any trouble was suspected.

Dr. Tench, of Frinton, who was called to the house, said it appeared to be a case of ptomaine poisoning.

A member of the house party told a reporter that they first suspected the oysters, but some of these had been eaten by the only guest who escaped. As the same dishes were not taken by all, it was thought that the cooking vessels might have been the cause of the trouble.

A London specialist and an analyst have been called in to make an investigation.

ANOTHER FRAUD IN HIGH PLACE ALLEGED TO-DAY

Private Secretary To Sir Adam Beck Charged With Fraud.

$29,990 INVOLVED.

Warrant Issued For Arrest Of Clarence Settell This Afternoon.

HAMILTON, Oct. 3.—(Canadian Press).—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Clarence Settell, for many years private secretary to Sir Adam Beck, chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission, charging him with fraudulently cashing a false cheque or document for $29,990, purporting to have been signed by Sir Adam Beck as chairman of the Hydro Commission, and W. V. Pope, secretary of the Commission. The cheque was made out against the Canadian Bank of Commerce. It is alleged that Settell called on W. H. Childs, secretary of the Hamilton Hydro Commission, in his office here at 12.15 and that he told Mr. Childs that he had been sent out to purchase a certain right-of-way for the Commission. Showing Mr. Childs the cheque, he is said to have stated that it would be easier to deal with the farmer if he showed ready money. Mr. Childs, who has known Settell for many years, accompanied him to the bank, identifying him and endorsing the cheque.

At 12.35 p.m. word was received from the Ontario Hydro Commission warning against cashing any cheque that might be presented by Settell, but it was not until 2 o'clock this afternoon that the warrant was issued by Magistrate Jelfs for Settell's arrest.

GOOD MEETING KIWANIS CLUB

Monsignor McColl Was the Speaker at To-day's Luncheon—Ladies' Night Coming.

Monsignor W. J. McColl was the speaker at to-day's Kiwanis Club luncheon. Taking for his subject the golden rule of the Kiwanis Club the speaker gave a splendid exposition of character building in its many forms. Many people, said Monsignor McColl, admire the golden rule and high ideals, but lack force of character to put them into action Reaction from character building influences such as the Kiwanis Club, must be beneficial. A man's training never ceases until the day of his death and this training is of no use to him unles it teaches him to stand alone as an individual. We make of ourselves what we are. Our schools are of the best but they have a tendency to kill individuality. That applies more to the primary schools. We should have greater freedom in things. Much of the discipline in the primary schools to-day is designed for women teachers. The speaker said he was an admirer of the British type of business man who received his training at Oxford and other similar institutions, and who came under the character shaping influences of men. If a graduate of Oxford university applied for a position on a primary school teaching staff in Ontario, he would not be eligible, because he did not receive his training in Ontario. Yet the same man could secure a position on the staff of one of our universities or colleges. In conclusion, the speaker defined several phases of character. "What we actually are is what counts," said Monsignor McColl.

At the request of President John R. Marshall, Kiwanian Ed. Wood, occupied the chair to-day, and the latter celebrated the event by fining nearly every member present.

Bill Wellbourn was introduced by Kiwanian J. Johns as a new member, and Mark Green of Hamilton, was introduced by Bob Mackey as a prospective new member.

Ladies' night will be observed next Friday evening, at 6.30 o'clock in the Empress Hotel. An informal dance will follow the usual festivities.

BALL TEAMS WERE GUESTS AT ROYAL

Peterboro Ball Tossers Enjoyed a Fine Picture Programme.

The players of the local O.B.A.A. teams were the guests of Manager McGeachie at the Royal Theatre last night when they enjoyed a fine picture programme with Hoot Gibson in "Hit and Run" as the headliner. The ball players were given plenty of inspiration as the cowboy swat king did his stuff at the plate, knocking out circuit wallops to keep his team in the pennant race. Finally, after escaping a plot to keep him out of the deciding game, Swat arrives at the ball grounds in the ninth innings. There are two out and two on when he is sent to the plate. Two strikes are called on him, but he smacks the next one over the fence, scoring three runs to win the game and the championship. Mike Donlin, former Giant star, appears in the cast in the role of a scout. The picture will appeal to all baseball players and followers of the game, numerous scenes on the diamond being exceptionally well put on.

NEWS TO HIM.

Never Signed Report Before It Was Sent To Minister of Finance.

TORONTO, Oct 3. — (Canadian Press).—Sidney M. Jones, Home Bank auditor on trial charged with making false statements of the Bank's affairs went into the witness box in his own behalf this morning. He said that he was on his way to England when the annual report of the Bank for the fiscal year ending May 31st 1923, was sent to Minister of Finance at Ottawa. He also swore that he had nothing to do with the making up of the annual statement and that he was never consulted about its contents. His first knowledge of the statement having gone to the Minister was acquired at this trial, he said. He thought that this report was made only for share holders of Bank. F. W. Harcourt, treasurer of the Law Society of Upper Canada. Rev. T. S. Macklem, formerly provost of Trinity College and William D. G. Wynne, vice president of Bishop Strachan School Corporation, gave character evidence. All of them stated that they believed Mr. Jones incapable of a dishonest act and that he was a high principled gentleman.

The accused on taking the stand said he was 59 years of age and had 33 years experience in accountancy and book-keeping. He came to Canada from London, England, when 25 years of age. He was also auditor of the Church of England Missions and St. George's society. Shortly after the Boer war he became acquainted with the late General Mason through being associated with him in the South African Memorial Association This acquaintance led to his being appointed Home Bank auditor in 1924. He was first auditor the bank had as previous to 1914, no auditor was required by the Bank Act. He got $1200 a year, until 1922, when his salary was increased to $3,000. He said he had an account of $1300 or $1400 when the Bank failed.

He had never signed the report he said and never did anything towards preparing it for the Minister. He had no knowledge of his alleged certificate on report. He delivered what statement he had made to Ocean G. Smith, the accountant for delivery to shareholders at their annual meeting. He had read bank act but knew of nothing in it that called for an auditors statement to be sent to the department of finance.

TAMWORTH MAN KILLED BY CAR

Inquest On Robert Adair, Struck Last Night In Accident.

DRIVER INJURED.

KINGSTON, Oct. 3.—(Special).—Robert Adair, aged fifty-five years, a resident of Tamworth, died twenty minutes after being hit by an automobile in front of the Public School at Tamworth last night, and Dr. Cowan, coroner, is holding an inquest. Mr. Adair was walking with a companion along the road, and the car, which was driven by Hugh Singleton, of Hannah's Corners, struck him. It is stated that Mr. Singleton could only see one man on the road at first, as it was very foggy, and, turning out for him, struck Mr. Adair. He tried to avoid the accident, and turned his car into the ditch, practically wrecking it, and sustaining a fractured shoulder in the crash. There were three others in the car: John Hannah, Don. Kennedy and a little boy, who had his arm injured. Mr. Adair is survived by his wife, who is critically ill, and three daughters: Mrs. Hobbs, Oshawa; Mrs. Melville Whiteman, living near Madoc, and Ruth at home. Another daughter died in the spring.

UNITED STATES IS NEEDED TO SECURE PEACE

Briand Declares Obvious Duty Is To Enter With Germany.

KEEP HIGH IDEALS.

May Hold Aloof With Sacrifice Of Share In World Peace.

(By Henry Wood—United Press Staff Correspondent).

GENEVA, Oct. 3. — Aristide Briand, ex-Premier of France, whose ringing speech before the Assembly touches off the enthusiasm that ended in the unanimous endorsement of the League of Nations' protocol of arbitration, to-day urged in an interview that the United States should join the League.

"With both Germany and the United States in the League, the latter's high ideals certainly could be secured and all risk of war definitely eliminated," Briand said. "It was only through five weeks of closest contact with the council and assembly and the commissions that I realized for the first time the League's immense possibilities," he admitted.

"Naturally Germany must enter through regular channels on an equal footing with all and absolutely no ulterior motives. As for the United States, it will be necessary first that American public opinion overcome the idea that the League would infringe upon American sovereignty.

"We recognize that the United States will never need to join the League.

"Her geographical position and material wealth will enable her always to hold aloof. But if Americans wish to participate in the final settlement of world peace, they cannot remain outside the League.

"We cannot lose sight of the fact either that if war returns, it will affect not only several nations, but the entire world."

Belgium to-day signed the protocol, making eleven nations that have affixed their signatures.

PREPARING FOR A GENERAL ELECTION

Government Is Apparently Resigned To Defeat When Commons Resumes Its Regular Session.

(By Lloyd Allen, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON, October 3.—Outgoing trains from London to-day were crowded with members of Parliament hurrying home to their constituencies to start oratorical fireworks in preparation for a general election.

The Government is apparently resigned to defeat when the Commons resumes its regular session the last of this month. But its opponents will make a first onslaught next week.

Prime Minister MacDonald, facing the crisis of his career, is consulting with his colleagues as to the best method of lessening the blow, although Government spokesmen profess to welcome a general election and claim Labour will gain sixty seats.

An attack will be launched at the special session which is to be resumed next Wednesday, the subject of a Conservative motion of censure being withdrawn by the Attorney-General of the prosecution of a Communist editor for sedition.

If the Government weathers this storm—and it will depend upon how MacDonald plays his cards—defeat later on seems inevitable. And preparations are under way for an election in November.

Temporarily relegating to the back ground this spectre of an early election over other issues, the Irish Bill enters the Lords at noon to-day for its first reading in the Upper House.

It is expected to pass promptly through all its stages and be ready for the Commons when that body re-assembles on Wednesday.

CIVILIZATION IS IN GREAT PERIL

World Is Faced With Another Great Destructive War.

TORONTO, October 3. — Canadian Press. — "Never more than today," declared Right Hon. Sir Robert L. Borden, in an address last night at the annual banquet of the senior section of the Y.M.C.A. "have world condition brought civilization closer to a world wide conflict. Perhaps," he said, "never in the history of mankind has civilization stood in greater peril than it does to-day, of another great war. Mankind has acquired more horrible destructive forces of Nature's great mysteries.

"I have attended two peace conferences and it is my absolute conviction that there is only one way in which the peace of the world can be obtained and preserved, and that is by the moulding of public opinion throughout the world determined to maintain and enthrone public rights as against the arbitrament of force." "I sincerely believe that if the nations of the world are brought together, as they are being through the conferences that there may grow up new public opinion throughout the world which may serve the same purpose as that same public opinion which does maintain peace and order within civilized countries."

HATS AND SCARFS.

Matching hats and scarfs are expected to be even more popular for fall than they were for spring.

ELECTION MAY BE HELD IN NOVEMBER

Present Outlook Is That a Crisis May Come At Any Time.

LONDON, Oct. 3. — (Canadian Press.)—"It certainly looks as if a crisis might come at any minute, but then in politics you never can tell," was the comment of former Premier Baldwin in referring to the position in face of recent developments. His note of caution is echoed by many political observers who have watched beside supposed death beds of previous governments which ultimately proved to be very much alive.

The great majority of political writers in the press, however, adopt the view widely held in the lobbies of Parliament and party clubs, namely, that the present government's days are numbered and that it is bound to fall, if not on the Conservative motion of censure in communist matter, then on the opposition to the Anglo-Russian treaty headed by the Liberals.

If defeated it is thought MacDonald will not resign but will advise the King to dissolve parliament, and it is figured that an election would probably be held on November 8th or 15th.

UNITED

H. G. Wells and others dream of a political United States or Europe, the countries over there banding together like the states. It's not impossible, though improbable for generations.

To say that the various European nationalities could not live together peacefully under the same flag, is ridiculous. They do it, right here in America. That's because here, unlike in Europe, the leading politicians do not devote most of their time in keeping racial hatreds alive and flaming.

COLOR COMBINE

White or royal blue or both are combined with the black costume that is worn by the smartest women.

The dramatist mistook the noise in that although they wanted to see him, what they wanted to see him for was something very different from his expectations.

But he dodged behind the curtain just in time and dodged back again to reproach the gallery.

"It's true," he said, "that I haven't made a hit. But neither have any of you."

CHINA'S APPLICATION FOR SEAT REFUSED BY LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Chinese Delegation Make Dramatic Gesture By Retiring From Auditorium.

5TH ASSEMBLY ENDS

France Leads Ten Countries in Signing Peace Protocol—Historic Sessions.

GENEVA, Oct. 3—The fifth assembly of the league of nations ended its labours yesterday by unanimously adopting a resolution recommending that all states accept the protocol of arbitration and security.

Apart from the elaboration of the protocol for the peaceful settlement of international disputes, the outstanding feature of the sessions was the insistence of the delegates that economic problems, popularly regarded as belonging exclusively to the domestic jurisdiction of states, must be solved on an international basis, if all causes of war would really be removed. This insistence was voiced by several speakers, specially those representing France; it is implied in the protocol itself, and for a time dominated the discussions of the European jurists as they strove to fashion a pact which would not unduly alarm all nations which jealously guarded the doctrine of states rights.

No Border Lines?

The idea behind the movement, as explained to the press correspondent by the jurists last night is that the league of nations, having decided to outlaw all war must logically turn its attention to a possible causes of conflict and endeavour to eradicate them. Fed by the growing spirit of internationalism, as a complement to nationalism and state sovereignty, the jurists contended that world opinion now demands that certain vital problems affecting the world as a whole, such as immigration and equitable distribution of raw materials, can no longer be left to the exclusive control of any state or states but must be examined with a view to their equitable settlement in the best interests of all, so that economic causes of war may be eliminated.

Delicate Problem

All the jurists admitted the delicacy of the problem involved and emphasized that it must be attacked with the greatest caution and after scienific study. They were of the opinion that it would probably furnish one of the great features of the proposed codificatin of international law under the auspices of the league of nations, which the assembly has decided to authorize

Chinese Walk Out

The closing hours of the assembly were made dramatic by the Chinese delegation who got up and solemnly walked out of the auditorium when the assembly refused to grant China a non-permanent seat in the council China lost her seat last year to Czecho-Slovakia, but has steadily campaigned for its recovery Her hopes of success were strengthened when the assembly recently adopted a resolution introduced by the Chinese themselves that in the distribution of the council seats the main geographical divisions of the world, the chief religious and chief sources of wealth should be kept in mind.

This resolution was generally interpreted that the meaning of the permit the return of China. Nevertheless yesterday's election brought no change either in the number or the present holders of the seats because Brazil, Belgium, Czecho-Slovakia, Spain, Sweden and Uruguay were all re-elected. China received only fourteen votes, whereas the victors received from 27 to 40 votes.

The permanent members of the council are Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan, with the likelihood that Germany will be added if elected to membership in the league.

Discussing the situation last night Dr. Chao Hsin Chu, the Chinese charge d'affaires at London, said that the delegation had acted not only in accordance with a resolution passed by the Peking government, but also with the action of the foreign minister, Wellington Koo who sent a cablegram to the league's general secretary, warning that the Chinese delegation would withdraw if the demand for a non-permanent seat in the council was not met.

Peking Notified

Dr. Chu said: —"After the rebuff this afternoon we felt very uneasy, and naturally left the room in order to draft cablegrams to the government and to members of the Chinese parliament, informing them of the situation and asking for instructions as the delegation here could not decide."

He declared that China did not want to see the league as merely a European or western institution and added:—'If we wanted to make this league merely a league of all nations we must not be neglected."

In overlooking the geographic principle, which it itself endorsed, Dr. Chu charged that the league was not fulfilling its obligations. He went on to say that while China was admittedly in a weakened position today it would not always be so and that the league "worships force" and asked:—"Then what is the use of the league?"

He indicated however, that China's announcement of her withdrawal from the league, if it came at all, would not be immediate as it would take time to consult the Peking government and parliament and in the meantime the Chinese permanent representative to the league of nations would remain in Geneva.

Tribute to Wilson

An impressive tribute to the late President Wilson was delivered by President Motta in his valedictory address. Hailing Woodrow Wilson as a worthy successor of Washington and Lincoln, he lauded him as the creator of the league covenant, which remains the cornerstone of the new organism of peace now erected at Geneva. Other notable discourses were those of the French Socialist deputy, M. Boncour, who hoped that United States wuld enter the league and sign the protocol and Mrs. Helen Swanwick, of Great Britain, who delivered a moving appeal that the great peace machine constructed at Geneva should be used for its high purpose and voiced the warning that if it failed to do so the masses of the people the world ver would lose their faith and confidence.

Voice of Canada

Canada made reference to the serious and new economic problems that have arisen through the introduction of the question of the effect the rights of domestic jurisdiction would have beyond one's own borders. Alluding to the recent Japanese intervention, Senator Dandurand of Canada, emphasized that the delegates had decided, in the interests of world peace, that the league of nations could not wholly disinterest itself in these problems. As having a bearing on the question of domestic jurisdiction and national sovereignty, he emphasized the importance of the address which Secretary of State Hughes delivered at Montreal a year ago, saying that Mr. Hughes favored action to remove the sources of misunderstanding or possible irritation by the formation of a permanent body of Canadian and United States citizens for the examination of questions affecting their respective nations, so that each, while reasonably protecting is own interests would avoid action inflicting injury upon its neighbor.

Senator Dandurand continued: —"Is there not in this suggestion an intimation that the exercise of a right may be tempered by equity and conciliation?"

The delegations of ten countries, headed by France, signed the protocol for the peaceful settlement of disputes before they left Geneva last night, and France also signed to compulsory arbitration clause of the world court, with some reservations.

The council of the league of nations meets to-day and the detailed work of reparation for next year's disarmament conference will begin in November.

GAINED 38 LBS. TAKING TANLAC

Canadian Pacific Man Gets Relief From Nervous Indigestion.

"The best of health and a gain of 38 lbs. in weight is what the Tanlac treatment has brought me, and, of course, I am strong for it," is the remarkable statement of Henri Brunelle, a well-known painter for the Canadian Pacific Railway, who lives at 868 Cartier street, Montreal, P. Q.

"Nervous indigestion and loss of appetite had pulled me down from 190 to 156 lbs., and my energy and strength went down in proportion. After eating I suffered from gas and cramping spells, couldn't sleep nights, was easily tired out and felt all in.

"Other medicines did me no good, but Tanlac was different and has met my every need. I have a wonderful appetite, eat what I want, sleep well and feel fine. I can tell the world, Tanlac is great."

SPECIALILATION IS AN OUTGROWTH OF COMMUNITY LIFE

On a camping trip, Rodger Dolan fished five days for salmon trout—and couldn't even get a strike. He was deep-trolling, about 100 feet down. An Indian, bribed with $5, took Dolan's outfit leaded the line so it would sink only 75 feet. Then he cut off a minnow tail and tied it with thread in among the hooks of his "wobbler" troll—to make it look like the tail of a shiner.

Dolan's comment: "Well, the Indian ought to be able to catch fish. He can't do anything else."

Specialization is what gets results.

* * *

A man who holds the world record in running or any other athletics usually can't do anything else. He hasn't time to do anything else. Keeping trained in his specialty busies his body and brain to the limit of action.

So it goes in nearly every pursuit of life.

There's an old saying, that we're all fools outside our own businesses.

* * *

A few generations ago, when Canada was sparsely populated and settlers were scattered through the wilderness, every man had to be more or less of a handy-man or Jack-of-all-trades except in cities where he could specialize.

Specialization is an outgrowth of community life. It was discovered, for instance, that one man made better shoes than anyone else in town, and made them faster. Obviously, it was foolish for him to devote his time to anything except shoe making.

Another man could saw boards and drive nails faster. He specialized at building. And so on, until nearly every man became a specialist trading the products of his toil for things he needed that others could make faster and better than he could.

The tendency toward specialization has increased with the passing of time. We talk about ours being an "age of specialists." And yet, in our increasingly complex civilization, specialization has barely started.

When the lads of to-day mature to manhood, life will be many times as specialized as now. The boy who is allowed to drift along without any definite idea of what he wants to specialize on later, will strike out into the world for himself under a great handicap.

But a greater handicap lurks in the danger of parents opposing the line of work his instinct gravitates him to trying to make a natural-born lawyer, for instance, become a doctor.

WHY WEAKLINGS WIN

A 59-year old man raced a jockey-ridden horse in London, England, 10 hours a day for six days. The man, C. W. Hart, won. He ran 345 miles, the horse 337 miles.

The horse could easily out-distance the man—early in the race. But Hart had more endurance.

Power wins battles. Endurance wins the war.

It's like the prizefighter who "didn't know when he was beaten." Not knowing, he refused to give up—fought doggedly until his superior lasting powers overcame his opponent's superior strength and skill.

* * *

In this race between a man and a horse, the man winning, you have a clear-cut illustration of why brilliant men are often left far behind by men of interior ability, in the race for success.

Natural ability and influential friends often count less than endurance.

In this case, endurance involves several things.

ONE—Superior physical power aids an average brain to "beat out" the superior brain in a weak body. A bright light burns out quickly if it has a weak battery.

TWO—Reliability and thoroughness are frequently more desirable than intellectual genius. A plodder who can be depended on will out-distance a man with a better brain handicapped by a tendency to be slip-shod and unreliable.

THREE—Determination, ambition and willingness to work hard for success—these make a man forge ahead of a rival who may have more ability but is easily discouraged or lazy.

WORLD MOVIE MEN HOLD CONFERENCE

Great Things Could Be Accomplished By an International Conference.

GENEVA, Oct. 1.—Declaring that there are at least 50,000 cinema halls in the world and that the moving picture is steadily increasing as an international force for good or evil, Julian Luchaire, Honorary Professor of Grenoble University, France, and Inspector-General of Public Education, recently urged the League of Nations Committee on Intellectual Co-operation to convoke an International Cinematograph congress which would bring together representatives of promoters, producers, authors, artists, critics and directors.

Professor Luchaire hailed the motion picture as one of the most important movements in the history of intellectual life in the course of the last twenty years. He said its influence on that populace can only find a parallel in that of the theatre in the cities of ancient Greece and that of the daily press in modern nations since the nineteenth century. He estimated that, taking the average number of spectators to be 300 in each of the 50,000 world cinema halls, and keeping in mind that each picture is usually repeated ten times, a film goes all over the world, as many do, is seen in a relatively short space of time by 150,000,000 persons.

Uundoubtedly, said Professor Luchaire, the impression made upon this enormous public is superficial compared with the influence of certain books which have taken years or centuries to impress themselves on the human race, certain sacred books, for instance, but it is a striking fact that only the Bible and the Koran have an indisputably larger circulation than that of the latest film from Los Angeles. He said that the cinema has been adapted to religious propaganda in various countries, and that in the United States it is estimated that about 25,000 churches use the screen as an adjunct to the pulpit. For all these reasons and for the additional one that the cinema has become intrinsically international, Professor Luchaire held that it should be included within the scope of the activities of the Committee on Intellectual Co-operation.

The future alone will divulge, the speaker insisted, whether the cinema is to have high educational value and the elevating and ennobling influence which the theatre seems to have had on the masses in ancient Greece, or the debasing influence of vulgar music hall shows or of cheap novels. The French professor said he was convinced that great things could be accomplished by an international conference in the way of leading the cinema into channels which would be productive of good for humanity.

Tuberculosis of the lungs, dread destroyer, in 43 years has killed 18 million people in 23 countries. These countries have only a third of the worlds' population, so the total death toll must have been about 50 million lives.

The World War takes second place as a killer. Of course the 50 million victims would have died of some other malady if they had escaped T.M. Man will never be able to evade death though he increasingly closes and seals many of the doors through which he exits into the Hereafter.

A Londoner met the oldest inhabitant of a small village and asked him how old he was.

"Oi be seven and four score, sir," replied the rustic.

"Why do you put the seven before the four score?" asked the visitor.

"Because I was seven before I was four score, sir," was the innocent reply.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

ROBERT B. MANTELL IN CLASSICAL REPERTORY

Appropos of the Robert B. Mantell and Genevieve Hamper engagement at the Grand Opera House, Friday and Saturday, October 3 and 4, in a repertoire of Shakespearean plays, including Bulwer Lytton's historical drama, "Richelieu," we take this occasion to say that there is not much about these immortal plays that is new, but the presentation of them differs widely according to the abilities, experiences and means of the different producers. Mr. Mantell, year after year, tours the country and gives to the public the best he has to give—there are few who can give so much—and grateful audiences receive him and wonder again at the wizardry of his impersonations. As for Miss Hamper, she is young, she is beautiful, she is graceful, and she is highly intelligent, with a personality that gets over the footlights in whichever role she is playing. Their repertoire for this engagement will be presented in the following order: "Richelieu," Friday night; "As You Like It," Saturday matinee; "Richard III." Saturday night.

THE GINGHAM GIRL.

There has been such a dearth of meritorious musical comedies in Peterborough for some time that the visit of "The Gingham Girl" to the Grand last evening was a red-letter event. Indeed, however, it would have been notable even in the good old days of real musical comedies, for "The Gingham Girl" possessed all the ingredients that make for the success of an attraction of this nature. It was bright, tuneful, witty, well dressed, handsomely mounted, quick moving and above all, in the hands of a clever coterie of principals, aided by a good-looking and well-drilled chorus.

And it had a real story—not the usual girl-and-music show kind that starts out bravely, only to get lost somewhere between the first specialty and the second song number, never to appear again. "The Gingham Girl's" story deals with the adventures of a young country girl who goes to New York equipped only with ambition and the recipe for a cookie and makes a fortune, and of her rustic sweetheart, a small town "wise cracker" who finds disillusionment in the big town, but straightens away in time for the usual happy ending. Nothing very involved in the story you see, but it is never lost sight of, which makes "The Gingham Girl" a novelty.

There was plenty of fun, a wealth of bright lines and refreshingly new repartee, enjoyable, albeit somewhat reminiscent music, and dancing galore by principals and chorus. In fact the dancing was a distinct feature. Not only the beautiful specialties of Fay Martinez and Jos. Sanai, but the eccentric dances of Lillian Young and Jack Waldron and the numbers by the agile chorus.

The large cast was headed by Madeleine McMahon in the title role and Eddie Fetherston as John Cusins, the rural lover, Miss McMahon proved a most winsome little heroine, with a charming personality and a splendid voice, while Mr. Fetherston was a comedian of much ability. His portrayal of the country boy, trying to beat the New Yorkers, at their own game was a thing of joy to the audience, who got little time to stop laughing when he was on the stage. Lillian Young was very amusing as the wise small town girl, and Jack Waldron scored heavily as the breezy travelling salesman. Dorothy La Mar's picture of a gold-digging New York chorus girl was a bright bit of comedy, and Francesca Hill was equally effective as a Greenwich village artist. Other parts well well taken care of and the production was excellently done.

Among the most enjoyable musical numbers were the popular "As Long As I Have You" by Miss McMahon and Mr. Fetherston, "The Twinkle In Your Eye" by Misses McMahon and Young, "Tell Her While the Waltz Is Playing," and "The Gingham Girl." The eccentric dancing of Miss Young and Mr. Waldron was as clever as has been seen here, while the two specialty dancers, Fay Martinez and Jos. Sanai were a sensation, their Apache dance, and Spanish numbers being most artistically executed.

The chorus sang and danced cleverly and their costumes were striking.

"The Gingham Girl," all in all, proved one of the best musical comedies in years. May the 1924-25 season bring some more attractions of this type to the boards at the Grand.

AT THE CAPITOL.

ROBERT B. MANTELL COMING TO CAPITOL

As a special attraction next Monday and Tuesday, the Capitol will offer the eminent actor, Robert B. Mantell, in Stanley Weyman's celebrated romance, "Under the Red Robe." Mr. Mantell is supported by Alma Rubens in this picture, which was the first the famous legitimate player ever appeared in. Following Mr. Mantell's appearance at the Grand Opera House, the booking of this picture will give theatregoers an opportunity to compare the work of the celebrated star on the stage and on the screen.

"MAN WHO FIGHTS ALONE" BIG FILM

Farnum Starred—Wilson and Horton Featured.

"The Man Who Fights Alone," William Farnum's first starring production for Paramount, directed by Wallace Worsley, which comes to the Capitol today and Saturday, is a big picture in every sense of the word—story, cast, star all top-notchers.

There's not a doubt but that William Farnum is the most popular western star in motion pictures today. In this production, a screen adaptation by Jack Cunningham, he is supported by Lois Wilson and Edward Horton and a big cast which includes, among other big names, Lionel Belmore, Dawn O'Day and George Irving.

The story has to do with a civil engineer and his band of empire builders—a sort of advance guard of civilization which is preparing the great western vastness for the endless tide of humanity which is to follow. It's a story of a strong man's fight against great obstacles—both physical and mental, the kind of story with which Farnum's name has become associated—a tale of the great outdoors, a real man's story, with a delightful love theme running throughout—a romantic story of love and sacrifice that will restore your faith in motion pictures as a medium of both instruction and entertainment.

Comedy? Lots of it to relieve the strain of the heavier scenes. Action? Thrills? This is the greatest Farnum picture of them all, and you know what that means!

AT THE ROYAL.

HOOT A CACTUS BABE RUTH IN HIS LATEST PRODUCTION.

"Hit and Run" Has Atmosphere of the Game.

There is enough real baseball in "Hit and Run," Universal-Gibson special attraction that had its opening yesterday in the Royal Theatre to justify the dyed-in-the-wool fan taking along a score card; there is enough fun in it to afford joy to anyone who never has seen the National Pastime in professional functioning — what more can be said to establish the qualifications of this, the most recent vehicle of Hoot Gibson's versatility?

Screen fans have come to look forward to the assurance that Gibson is appearing in a story written, in part at least, by Edward Sedgwick, who also is the director of Gibson's pictures, and this assurance is forthcoming in the present instance for Sedgwick aided by Raymond L. Schrock who has collaborated in other Gibsons, conceived this logically ludicrous story—ludicrous in intended parts only.

Incidental to the story there is some of the finest baseball atmosphere ever shown on any screen. Opening games of the Pacific Coast League were made the background of some of the action, and Sedgwick, who used to be a professional ball player, is sufficiently enamoured of the game to be generous with footage in cases where real ball players are playing real baseball regardless of the presence of moving picture cameras.

Hoot a Cactus Babe Ruth.

The opening of the story finds Hoot the Babe Ruth of the Cactus League where his mighty prowess with the bat offsets the fact that he knows nothing else about the game. He is discovered by a scout for a big league team and sent to the training quarters where his awkwardness makes him a joke until he tells the manager, "I'm not a catcher, I'm a hitsmith," and is sent to the plate to see what he twirles. What he does is aplenty and from then on he becomes the mainstay of the team, batting them into the world's series.

Kidnapped with the scout's daughter as the result of a plot to cause his team to loose the series Hoot suffers extraordinary adventure that gives him opportunity to show his prowess as a rough and tumble fighter and as an automobile driver of reckless courage; earlier in the story he has a chance to show his horsemanship, and at all times there is in amusing evidence the Gibson whimsicality of expression and action.

The supporting cast is a strong one, and includes Marian Harlan in the feminine lead, Mike Donlin, former big league star, Cyril Ring, Harold Goodwin, DeWitt Jennings and William A. Steele.

AT THE REGENT.

"THE DANGEROUS COWARD."

Fred Thomson, starring in "The Dangerous Coward," now playing at the Regent Theatre, has insured his famous horse Silver King for $100,000 at a yearly cost of $5,000.

Frank Hagney, who plays the role of the villain in "The Dangerous Coward," now at the Regent Theatre, was until recently a champion boxer. He at one time held the light heavyweight championship of Australia and is the first man to have ever knocked out Luis Firpo, the South American.

Fred Thomson and Al Kauffman fight a real four-round battle in "The Dangerous Coward," now playing at the Regent Theatre. Thomson is the former world's champion athlete, while Al Kauffman was runner-up for the heavyweight championship and contender for the West Coast championship for years.

Hazel Keener, who plays the feminine lead in "The Dangerous Coward," now playing at the Regent Theatre, and featuring Fred Thomson, is an international beauty having won seventeen beauty contests.

BREEDING

Worried by the centuries-old delusion that the population is going to increase faster than the earth's ability to support it with food, a professor urges people to breed scientifically for smaller size. He figures smaller people would eat less.

Nature takes care of all this. She has made the Japanese small because there are so many of them in a country that has little cultivable land. Everything in time is adapted to fit it environment.

BLINDED

You don't often see a blind person. But there are 110,000 of them in America. And about 15,000 lost their eyesight by industrial accidents.

If you work around dangerous machinery or inflamable or explosive materials, it'd be a good idea to cut this out and paste it where you'll see it every hour. Caution is a very cheap price to pay for the privilege of remaining outside the City of Dreadful Night.

HERCULES

In love matches you observe the working of nature's tendency to even things up—restore the balance before specimens of her handiwork get too far from normal. Beauty marries the Beast Black Eyes wed Blue Eyes. Intellect mates with Creampuff Brain. Mysterious? Not at all. Just nature restoring the balance.

An exception comes to light in England. Saxson Brown, billed as the world's strongest boy, 19, marries Britain's strongest girl, 16.

RESISTING

No use getting scared because tuberculosis of the lungs has killed possibly 50 million people in the last 43 years. Skilled medical specialists will tell you, autopsies show that four out of every five have T. B. at some time or other in life, usually in very mild form. They are attacked—but conquer the invader or hold it in check.

The danger isn't so much in germs as in the body's powers of resistance being broken down so it cannot fight germs. Fright and too much worry about self are often as deadly as germs and low bodily resistance combined.

LANDIS ABSOLVES GIANTS AND PERMITS WORLD SERIES OPENING

No Evidence To Justify Widening Scope of Scandal Enquiry, Although Jimmy O'Connell Asserts That the Giants We re "All In It."

O'CONNELL BANISHED FOREVER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 — The 1924 world's series will go on notwithstanding that baseball was shaken to its foundations yesterday by a whirlwind succession of developments growing out of the attempt of Jimmy O'Connell, young New York outfielder, to bribe Heine Sand, Philadelphia shortstop, in the game that decided the National League pennant race for the Giants.

This was the declaration last night of Kenesaw Mountain Landis high commissioner of baseball. It was made after a hectic day during which fresh charges were flung by O'Connell, who has been banished for all time from the game together with Cozy Dolan, Giants coach, accused of instigating the bribery plot.

Unmoved apparently by the day's developments, and declining to amplify the statement he issued late last night in New York disclosing the plot and debaring Dolan and O'Connell, the commissioner declared he saw no prospect of developments that would prevent the start of the championship battle Saturday between Washington's first pennant winner and the Giants.

Furthermore, the commissioner indicated he had no new evidence calculated to widen the scope of the attempted bribery deal, a possibility brought to the fore by O'Connell's reiteration that the Giants were "all in it", and specific mention of three veterans, George Kelly, Frank Frisch and Ross Young.

'So far as I am concerned no cloud now hangs over any member of the Giant team eligible to play in the world's series," the commissioner declared. "They will go into the world's series with the Senators on Saturday

Waving aside the "ridiculous" reports that the Giants would be disbarred as a team and Brooklyn, the runner-up, selected to represent the National League in the series, the commissioner emphasized that so far as he could forsee, no further finger of suspicion pointed to the National League champions.

BIGGEST JUNIOR CROWD WILL SEE TILT TOMORROW

Tickets Selling Fast for McCormick-Lakeview Game at Riverside.

PITCHERS READY

Whitehouse and Rasson Both in Good Shape for Second Clash.

Tomorrow's Junior final between the McCormicks, T.A.B.A. champions and conquerors of Niagara Falls and Guelph, and Lew Lebarr's Lakeviews, Eastern Ontario titleholders should prove one of the best ball games staged at Riverside Park this season.

The two crack southpaws, Whitehouse and Rasson, will have had a week's rest under their belts and both should be in the pink of condition when the barrier is raised at 2.30 o'clock tomorrow. Between them they fanned 48 batsmen last Saturday, which must be a record for an O.B.A.A. game and their second tilt tomorrow should provide the fans with an interesting afternoon.

Tickets have been selling fast for the big game and indications are that the crowd will be the largest that has ever supported the Lakeviews. This is at it should be for the local juniors brought the Ontario title here last season and have been staging a magnificent fight to repeat the exploit this year.

A number of Toronto fans will be here to root for McCormicks and to see the second installment of the Whitehouse-Rasson duel.

The batting order for tomororw will be about as follows:

McCormicks	Lakeviews
Swing, lf	Cameron, ss
Eisner, 2b	Lebarr, 1b
Boyd, c	Whitlow, m
Clark, ss	Whitehouse, p
Gillespie, rf	Ash, lf
Henry, 1b	Marchen, 2b
Sinclair, m	Halliday, c
Woodrow, 3b	McIntyre or Cheu or Griffin, lf
Rasson, p	Johnston, 3b

Game called at 2.30 p.m. sharp.

BANKERS FORM NEW FIVE PIN LEAGUE.

The Bankers, under the management of Mr. E. Ackman, have formed a five pin bowling league and will commence bowling next week. There has been eight teams entered, from the following banks, Montreal Bank, Union Bank, Dominion Bank, Nova Scotia Bank, Commerce Bank, Royal Bank, Montreal Bank (George St. Branch), and Toronto Bank. The teams will have four men a side and will roll on Monday, Wednesday and Friday each week, starting at 4.30. They will play a double schedule. Next week is the only week that the games will not be rolled at 4.30, they being rolled at 8 o'clock for that week only.

Leagues are reminded to make reservations immediately as the dates are being fast taken up, and the earlier arrangements are made the better dates the teams will get.

JOHNSON WANTS FEDERAL PROBE

President of American League Says Game Must Be Protected By Govt.

GIANTS TAINTED

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—(Canadian Press).— Federal investigation to purge baseball of its alleged crookedness, will be demanded by President Ben Johnson of the American League as the result of the scandal involving Jimmy O'Connell, Giant outfielder, expelled from the game after confessing that he offered a $500 bribe to Heine Sand, Philadelphia infielder to throw last Saturday's game. Cozy Dolan, Giant coach also was expelled as a result of the Giant outfielder's confession.

President Johnson declared that baseball, a National game, must be protected by the government and that the present situation was a present a point of 'covering up' which he said, the American League would not condone or accept.

"I will insist upon an investigation by the Federal judiciary, so that we may know all the facts and bring to the surface the individuals who have been guilty of this great misconduct and who are a positive menace to the integrity of baseball,' President Johnson said.

The American League executive declared that in view of published statements the world's series between the Giants and Washington should have been immediately declared off, and added that from all accounts it would appear that the American League had been handed a championship club to compete with, which is tainted in all things that it represents."

WASHINGTON TENSE WITH BALL RUMORS

Fans Begin To Arrive for Opening Game—Excitement High.

WASHINGTON, October 3.—The thermometer of excitemen in Washington bubbled only a few degrees below the bursting point last night.

The unexpected charges of attempted bribery by two members of the New York Giants augmented the high tension of the city, and the National capital was prepared for almost anything after passing through a day in which rumor ran riot.

However, despite the hubbub, arrangements were carried forward for the opening here on Saturday of the world series between the Senators and the Giants.

Throughout the day baseball fans from all parts of the country began to pour into the city. With Judge Landis and President Heydler already here other officials of the game were en route to the city and hotels were beginning to feel the pressure of the incoming crowd.

The Giants arrived last night, and added all that was needed to make Washington the centre of the baseball world. They were hurried to the Wardman Park hotel, which will be the team's headquarte s here.

Judge Landis inspected the grounds of Griffith Stadium and placed his stamp of approval on the arrangements that have been made for the series.

The Washington ball club took a snappy workout in the afternoon.

Manager Harris with much difficulty cleared several doze. camera men from the field, and the Senators practiced for nearly two hours.

The Washington pilot announced that he had ordered his team in uniform for a morning workout to-day so that the field could be turned over to the Giants in the afternoon.

BARRETT KNOCKED OUT.

Mickey Walker Won Fight In Sixth With Right to the Jaw.

PHILADELPHIA, October 2 (Canadian Press). — Mickey Walker, welterweight champion of the world, successfully defended his welterweight title here last night, when he knocked out Bobby Barrett of Clinton Heights, in the sixth round of a scheduled ten-round bout.

The knock-out blow was a right to the jaw, one minute and thirty-three seconds after the start of the sixth round.

The challenger did not have a chance at any stage of the bout. He was smothered from the start by the champion's two-handed attacks.

Walker clearly outclassed Barrett in speed and punching power, and not once was in danger.

NOT ENOUGH SEATS FOR WORLD SERIES

People Dissatisfied With the Way Reserved Seats Were Handled.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(Canadian Press).—There is much dissatisfaction over the allotment of seats for the world series games to be played in the National capital. It grows out of the fact that thousands fail to get seats they wished in the grand stand and will be compelled to sit in the centre field bleachers while hundreds who asked for four seats for each of the games to be played here must be content to have their orders for reservations cut down to two seats, while some who made written application to the baseball club as early as August received no tickets at all.

The complaint among those who failed to get any thing like what they wanted was quite general and some of the remarks made by applicants in line even from men prominent in the business and professional world of Washington, would neither look well in print nor please those in control of the ticket distribution. Dissatisfaction in connection with the matter of tickets for the world series games was also in evidence at the White House offices after frequent efforts had been made to reach the Washington baseball management by telephone.

ORIOLE RALLY WINS

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 2—With a thrilling rally in the ninth inning, the Baltimore Orioles came from behind to win the opening game of the "Little World Series" from St. Paul of the American Association to-day 4 to 3. The international Leaguers came to bat in the last inning one run to the bad Maisel went out on an easy roller to third but Connelly stirred up hope with a double. Then Jacobson, who had appeared rather weak in his previous times at bat, went to the plate and set the 5,000 spectators wild by knocking the first ball pitched by Markle over the right field for a home run.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 3.—(Canadian Press).—Mutiliated almost beyond recognition, the body of a man believed to be T. R. Lewis, of Victoria, B.C., was found Thursday by the crew of a Canadian Pacific Railway freight train near Tache, Ontario.

While the identity of the man has not been established definitely, papers in his pockets indicated that the victim was Lewis.

PHELAN CUP TIE SATURDAY AFTERNOON

Thistles and Quaker Oats Meet in Charity Game.

The Phelan Charity Cup final will be played on Saturday afternoon on King Edward Park. Kick-off at 3 o'clock prompt. Referee, Jack Clark.

Last year the Thistles won this trophy and intend holding it for another year, while the Quaker Oats, well-known cup tie fighters, will make the jags travel all the way to gain possession of the cup for season 1924.

In 1921 the G.W.V.A. won the cup, and in 1922 the Owls carried the honors for that season. There are only three name shields upon the trophy, and was donated to the P. and D. F. A. by the Rev. Father Phelan, now of Campbellford.

Soccer fans will view a good game tomorrow when these two rivals meet in a most worthy cause—charity. All the proceeds are handed over to the charitable institutions, no person gaining any recompense.

A DAY OF SPORT.

With the return of nice weather, the Y. W. C. A. is looking forward to a day of fun and sport on Saturday afternoon at Nicholls Oval. The girls of the softball teams, the girls of the various factories, stores and the older school girls have all been invited to come and enjoy the day. A program of new and novel races, games and contests will be run off and a good time is promised every girl who comes. Each one is asked to bring a small prize, wrapped up in paper, and after the sports these will be presented from a big basket to the numerous winners. And then, because everyone will be hungry, there is to be a weiner roast. Groups will meet at the "Y" at 3 o'clock or at the Oval at 3.30.

ANOTHER WAY TO USE THE BEAN!

Remarkable Action Picture Showing Attack and Defense Moves in a Soccer Game With Head Playing Main Role.

This remarkable action picture depicts a play in an English soccer game. The player on the left, attacking, used his head to send the ball in the direction of the enemy goal. The player in the middle, on the defense, shot upward to deflect the ball with his head, but missed. The defensive goalkeeper was more successful. Meeting the ball squarely with his head he drove it out of danger, as the dotted lines show.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

"He's the greatest catcher in baseball."

It was Ray Schalk, famous backstop of the Chicago White Sox, talking about Muddy Ruel of Washington.

It struck me as a remarkable tribute coming from so brilliant a catcher as Schalk.

Several great plays by Ruel had played havoc with the White Sox's chances, while his timely hitting had made a Washington victory possible.

A wonder catch of a foul tip, which seemed a physical impossibility when he started after the ball, caused Schalk to enthuse. Ruel caught the ball at the top of the Chicago dugout, stumbled down a couple of concrete steps but hung onto the ball.

"Ruel has the right system," continued Schalk; "he is in the game every minute and goes after every ball, regardless of the score.

"Not because I play the position, but the catcher is the inspiration of a club. His spirit is largely the spirit of the team. Ruel has helped put the pennant fight in Washington."

The compliment that Schalk paid Ruel took me back about six years. Ruel at the time was an ambitious youngster, Schalk the wonder man of baseball. That was in 1918.

The previous season the Chicago club had won the American League pennant and beaten the Giants in the world series. Schalk was the sparkplug of the club.

Some idea of Schalk's great worth as a catcher can be gleaned from the averages. The figures show that for 11 consecutive years he has caught 100 or more games. This season has broken this remarkable record. Injuries have kept him under the 100 mark.

In 1918, Schalk performed brilliantly in every department of the game. The first two games of the series had been decided by his superior play.

Sitting on the New York bench prior to the third game, Muddy Ruel, then with the Yankees, happened to be next to me. In some way the conversation shifted to Schalk and his greatness as a catcher.

"If I ever develop into half as good a catcher as that fellow, I'll be satisfied," said Ruel.

"He's my ideal. They say one should be original but I don't see how a catcher could improve on Schalk's style. He's worth while imitating."

In a great many ways Muddy Ruel is a second Ray Schalk as to style, mannerisms and spirit.

Eight years have passed and the catcher Ruel set out to imitate, pronounces the Washington backstop the greatest in baseball.

Rather a strange coincidence.

Scientific Terms Used By Alienists At Trial

Many scientific terms unfamiliar to the lay mind were used by the alienists at the trial of Fred McGaughey for murder, when the defense was that the accused was so insane that he did not know the nature and quality of the act and that it was wrong.

Dementia praecox (written, one expert said, "precox" for convenience), the particular mental disease from which it was alleged McGaughey suffered, is translated as "disease of adolescence." Its symptoms, as indicated by the alienists, are lack of sensation, seclusiveness, dullness, abnormality, lack of concentration, faulty memory, lack of appreciation of surroundings, loss of initiative, attitudinization, tension, faulty orientation, delusions, blunting of all emotion, poor reasoning power, impressionlessness, and poverty of thought.

Catatonia is a development of the disease that renders the sufferer unaware of what is transpiring around him, unable to feel even the prick of a pin and unaware of personal discomfort. The limbs become flexed at times, and can be bent like a soft waxcandle. Rigidity sets in in the advanced stages, and the body and muscles are absolutely immobile.

Senile dementia, said to have been suffered by the accused's mother, is a failing of the mental faculties due to old age and the hardening of the victim's arteries. Involutional dementia, said to have been suffered by McGaughey's mother, accompanies the change of life, and is accompanied by delusions.

A LARGE CROWD AT COLLEGIATE

Educational Art Exhibitions In Institute Hall Was Huge Success.

NATURAL SCENES.

There was a large attendance at the Collegiate Institute Hall last evening for the exhibition of 200 pictures from the Educational Art Exhibitions of the Elson Art Publication Company of Belmont, Massachusetts. The pictures were ranged on the walls of the first floor hall and class-rooms and in the upper hall, and were large beautiful reproductions of the gems of the Old Masters, done in soft sepia tones in carbon and photogravure work, with several colored pieces in both types. Comprised in the collection were paintings of many schools of art, reproductions of sculpture and the great cathedrals and many natural scenes. The educational aspect of the exhibition was one of its outstanding interests for the adults and young people who saw it last evening, affording, as it did, an opportunity for comparison of the methods of the various schools, and the different treatment accorded similar subjects by artists famous for their pre-eminence in their art.

Egyptian Art was represented by presentations of The Great Sphinx and The Great Pyramids of Gizeh, while Greek and Roman Architecture had an exposition in views of the ruins of the ancient Acropolis at Athens and the Roman Colosseum, with many other examples of the faded "glory that was Greece and the grandeur that was Rome."

The Hermes of Praxiteles, the Apollo Belvidere, and the Winged Victory of Samothrace were among the notable pictures representing Greek and Roman Sculpturer, while the section devoted to Miscellaneous Architecture and Views from Nature included such presentations as those of the Cloister of St. John Lateran in Rome, the Notre Dame Cathedral, the magnificent facades of Amiens and Rheims Cathedrals, before the Great Holocaust, the Cathedral of St. Mark's in Venice, at the feeding time of the doves, glimpses of the Tower of London and Stratford-on-Avon and the Poets' Corner in Westminster Abbey.

In the Miscellaneous Sculpture section was a splendid view of the sublime figure of Moses, from a monument by Michael Angelo, along with many other beautiful reproductions of notable work.

Italian painting held examples of the Renaissance in Botticelli's group of the Madonna, the Holy Infant and St. John, there was Carpaccio's frolicksome "Angel with Lute," and Raphael's lovely Sistine Madonna. The Mona Lisa of Da Vinci looked out of the canvas with her inscrutable smile and her lovely hands, and a reproduction of Guido Reni's "Aurora," with her flying steeds and attendant maidens, was done in copper-plate color painting.

The Dutch and Flemish school held some lovely scenes of natural beauty. There was the well-known "Avenue at Middleharnis, Holland," by Hobbema, several of Josef Israel's mild interiors, and the hazy tints of Mauve's "Spring" and "Autumn." Rembrandt's wonderful characterizations were reproduced in "The Sundics of the Cloth Hall."

In the French school, notable were Rosa Bonheur's "Horse Fair," and the sweet "Song of the Lark," by Jules Breton. There were a group of lovely Corots, and one of Greuze's fresh, innocent pictures. Meissonier, one of the greatest of genre painters, was exemplified in "1814," illustrating Napoleon's return from the battle of Laon.

Portrayals of French peasant life were in Millet's famous "Angelus" and "The Gleaners," and there was a wonderful picture of force and power in Regnault's "Horses of Achilles."

The German school had some splendid examples, notably Brozik's "Columbus at the Court of Isabella," and Adams' "Cat and Kittens."

Alma-Tadema, in "Reading from Homer," Burne-Jones' "Golden Stairs," Constable's "Hay Wain," James David's marine picture, "The Wave," Landseer's "Shoeing the Bay Mare," Millais' outstanding "Boyhood of Raleigh," with the thoughtful young faces clearly etched, Turner's memorable "Fighting Temeraire," and Watt's "Sir Galahad," were some of the most notable of the English School. Murillo's round-faced children and Velasquez' "Tapestry Weavers" were in the Spanish room, among many other splendid pictures, and American painting was represented by Alexander's "Pot of Basil," with its symbolic figure, and the six lunettes of "The Evolution of the Book." "All's Well," by Homer, was very interesting, and "Moonlight at Sab Harbor" was lovely.

One exceptionally beautiful colored picture was Steinbrecht's "Summer in the Forest," with the soft greens of the trees lifelike in their fine colorings, a splash of red in a woman's skirt as a high light.

Whistler's "Mother" was there, and there was a series of portraits of noted men. One of the most interesting reproductions of statuary was that of Saint-Gaudens' Abraham Lincoln, with the trousers which have been commented on as among the best examples of textile work in stone ever executed, and the wrinkled vest.

AT ST. LUKE'S CHURCH.

Rev. T. J. O'Connor-Fenton Was the Special Speaker At Service Last Night.

The annual Harvest Thanksgiving service of St. Luke's Anglican Church, was held last evening. The church was appropriately decorated for the occasion with flowers and vegetables of the garden and fields.

A large crowd was in attendance to take part in giving thanks to God for their daily bread and for the abundant crop of grain and vegetables.

The Rev. T. J. O'Connor-Fenton, of Norwood, rural dean of Peterboro, was the special speaker of the evening, and texts for his striking address were taken from the first three verses of the 136 Psalm. "O give thanks unto the Lord for He is gracious, and His mercy endureth for ever. O give thanks unto the God of all Gods, for His mercy endureth for ever. O thank the Lord of all Lords, for His mercy endureth for ever."

He stated that grace is one thing that we look forward to God for, more than anything else. Grace is the keynote of our religion, and there are very few people who have traced back and found the real meaning of this word which means so much to us. Grace means happy thankfulness in the heart, the loving kindly thought of a gracious happy God, the one God of all gods. Years ago people believed in more than one god and worshipped several gods but to-day we have found at there is only the one God, and He is our Saviour, whom we all worship, and have faith in.

The speaker asked, How many people came to church each Sunday to hear the sermon There are very few, and the most come because they know that they are doing wrong if they do not.

There is but one service that has come down to us through the ages and ages, and from the Lord our Heavenly Father, and that one is the Thanksgiving service. This is the time of the year that we take the opportunity of thanking God for our daily bread. The physical existence of our race depends on the prayer which so many forget: "Give us this day our daily bread." This is one of the many prayers that we should always keep in memory, for without our daily food there would be no world. "We are God's children, so let us live as His children, and abide by Him and worship Him."

Special music was rendered by the choir under the capable leadership of Mr. W. C. Thompson, organist, and choir leader.

Clergymen assisting the Rector, Rev. G. J. Bousfield, were Rev. Canon Gale of Calgary, and Rev. J. L. Hughes, Rector of St. George's church.

THE IRON OF IRONS

HARVEST FESTIVAL.

Special Services In St. John's Church Last Evening—Church Decorated.

The annual Harvest Thanksgiving services held at St. John's Anglican Church last evening were well attended. The church was beautifully decorated in artistic fashion with a profusion of autumn flowers, fruits and vegetables. Tall corn stalks and sheaves of wheat also formed part of the decorations, and small sheaves of wheat and oats were affixed to the pews with bunches of bright red berries.

Rev. Dr. Blagrave, who was assisted in the evening services by Rev. M. Kingsford, expressed his gratitude to all who had made generous contributions of articles for the decorating, and to those who had done the work. He spoke with appreciation also of the work of Rev. Mr. Kingsford as curate, and regretted his approaching departure for England.

The music, with Mr. F. G. Mann, organist and choir leader, in charge, was appropriate to the occasion. The evening service was in F, by Dr. Bunnett, and a very fine anthem was entitled, "O Lord, how manifold are Thy works."

Rev. T. G. Wallace, rector of St. Stephen's Church, Toronto, was the special preacher. Taking his text from the 7th verse of the 17th chapter of the 1st book of Kings, "And it came to pass after awhile that the fruit dried up, because there was no rain in the land," the reverend speaker drew a parallel between conditions prevailing at that time in the world's history and its present state. He said that people were too prone to make bargains with God, to demand a certain amount of prosperity in return for their service to Him, and to forget that the phrase "sweet are the uses of adversity" had a real meaning in its application to daily life. "It is true that the more easily things come to us, the less we appreciate them and the cheaper we hold them. There is a tendency for people in times of prosperity to forget the praise due to God. Prosperity is far more dangerous to the character than is adversity. It is not in tropical countries where things come easy that the story of progress is written, but in the colder climes where difficulties are encountered."

The worship of the golden calf that prevailed in the days of Ahab was compared with the worship of golden calves which prevails to-day. "Our great besetting sin is the worship of the golden calf. There is a tendency everywhere to set the material things first, and to give them a prominence they don't deserve."

Ahab, in the Old Testament chronicle was a figure of the worldly man who was brought to his knees before God by adversity in the form of a drought which destroyed the fruits of the earth and dried up the land. But God's method of disciplining saint and sinner alike was seen in the inclusion of Elijah also in the adverse circumstances that befell him. Elijah had departed into a pleasant valley where things were made comfortable for him, and he had ceased to care for those who suffered. The drought brought to him a realization of his duty to his fellow-man, and the pinch of want brought him to his knees also before God.

Elijah's type in this generation was personified in the saintly person whom the speaker described as being often stiff-necked, self-centred and self-satisfied, without fellowship of sympathy for his fellow-creatures.

Whip Up The Travelers

A SALES Manager we know confided to us that the President of their Company had been giving him a bad half hour.

"The 'Old Boy' told me I wasn't driving hard enough for sales."

"Whip up the travelers, Tom. Make them step lively. We've got to have more business. Excuses don't go. I know dealers can sell our stuff. They've sold it in years gone by. If we make them buy they've got to sell. Our travelers have got to make them buy."

"What are you going to do?" we inquired.

"Of course, I've got to put more pressure on the travelers, if that's possible. We've been driving them now for months. And then even if the travelers put more pressure on the trade that doesn't say dealers will buy any more freely. If consumers are not buying briskly, or if they prefer another line to ours, it is a tough job trying to force dealers to buy quantities of our product."

"Is there any other line more favored by consumers?" we asked the Sales Manager.

"Yes", he reluctantly admitted. "We used to be easily first, but a competitor who has been advertising ever since the close of the war is now in first place. His advertising has made his line well-known to consumers. The public ask for his line. And there's nothing that makes a dealer stock a line so readily as to have the public ask for it."

"Why don't you advertise?" we inquired.

"I've put it up to the President. But all he says is: 'We've got along without advertising for all these years. We can do without it now. All we need is a bunch of real salesmen and a Sales Manager who can whip them up and make them sell.'"

* * * * * *

It strikes us that there are a good many Sales Managers and a good many travelers who are being everlastingly pressed, driven, commanded to sell more goods to the trade, when the pressure should more correctly be applied to the consumer. If the consumer buys a brand readily, the trade will stock it readily.

As Tom remarked, "There's nothing that makes a dealer stock a line so readily as to have the public ask for it."

More advertising to the consumer, instead of so much whipping up of the traveler, is the more logical way to sell goods today.

If you are "sold" on the logic of selling the consumer, we would be glad to talk business with you.

European iron and steel makers, forming an "alliance," will include Germany. So runs the rumor reaching our steel makers from abroad.

There is no trouble burying axes and getting nations united in Europe when profits are at stake. And bankers and business men, working behind the scenes, now have charge of Europe, after giving the politicians several years of grandstand playing and no results.

The steel alliance abroad is for the purpose of presenting a common front against American steel in the world markets. The predicted trade war gets under way.

SECURITIES OF HOME BANK ONLY PIECES OF PAPER TO THE AUDITOR

Sidney Jones Did Not Ascertain Whether They Had Any Real Value.

NOT HIS DUTY.

Didn't Regard Himself a "Watch Dog" Of Finances For Shareholders.

TORONTO, Oct. 4—Sidney H. Jones, Home Bank auditor charged with making false returns of the bank affairs took the witness stand in his own behalf Friday and told his side of the story. He was then subjected to a gruelling cross-examination by D. L. McCarthy, crown counsel, which had not been completed when the court adjourned at 5 o'clock. The examination will continue Monday afternoon when the court meets.

Jones said that as auditor he had never valued the securities held by the bank, but that he had taken their values as recorded in the books of the bank for his annual statement to the shareholders of the bank. Mr. McCarthy reminded him that the statute called for a statement showing the securities "at a value not beyond their market value". Accused said he had never tried to find out the market value of any of the securities. He said that his report showed the condition of the bank according to the books. Asked if he were sheltering behind the words "according to the books of the bank" witness said he was.

Not the Watchdog

He admitted to Mr. McCarthy that if the securities were not shown at their market value that the statemen could not show "the absolute true condition of the bank". He had never known that his report must be attached to the annual report of the directors made to the Minister of Finance| He had never known that it had gone to Ottawa. He realized that he was the auditor for the share holders but would not agree to Mr. McCarthy's suggestion that he was the watch dog of the bank's finances for the shareholders.

Accused thought his duties as auditor were finished when he had checked the monthly statements and the profit and loss statements. He did not know anything about any of the companies in which the bank was interested, he said.

Accused was asked his idea of "verifying the securities," and said that it consisted in seeing that the securities agreed with the amounts opposite them and to see that they existed. "Existed as pieces of paper only" commented Mr. McCarthy. He admitted under pressure that that as far as the shareholders were concerned some of the securities might have been worthless. He had simply seen that the securities existed.

"Whether they had any real security behind them or not you do not know?"

"No."

Accused did not know the reason for carrying contingent account at the head office in deposits. He had made some inquiries, he said, but had allowed it on his statement without comment. Witness said he had simply accepted the statements of the branches and departments in the matter of foreign exchange and had never tested their accuracy. All the bank books and reports were available to him he said. He said that if he had started out to value all the securities he would never have been able to have done his work and that he had to trust some other people.

"I did not presume that I had to value securities and I did not think I had the ability to do so. I did not think I was called upon to find out the market values. I thought I had done my duty in doing what I did."

Jones said that in 1916 he had received a letter from Sir Thomas White requesting a report on the Prudential and Trust, Frost and Pellatt and Pellatt accounts. He had traced the Frost account to the old Home Savings and Loan Company He had another letter from Sir Thomas before he had finished the report: He then made out a statement of the Frost account and sent it to the Minister. The reports on the Prudential and Pellatt loans were taken to Ottawa by General Mason. Jones said he had never been suspicious as to the instability of the bank and that he had $1400 in it as deposit when it closed its doors.

Report to Shareholders

He said that he thought he had done his duty in preparing his statement from the books of the bank. He did not know of anything in the act requiring him to send a copy to the Minister. His report simply went to the shareholders.

Three prominent men in Toronto, Rev. Dr Macklem, former provost of Trinity University, F. W. Harcourt, treasurer of the law society of Upper Canada and W. D. Gwynne vice president of the Bishop Strachan College, who had known Jones for years, all spoke highly of him. They all agreed that they did not think he would do a dishonest act.

No Sign Of Collapse As McGaughey Reached Cell

LINDSAY, Oct. 4.—According to reports leaking out from the County Jail, Fred McGaughey, who was sentenced to be hanged on Friday for the murder of Beatrice Fee, is far from being in a state of total collapse. When he reached his cell after sentence had been imposed upon him, he remarked to one of the jail officials: "Well, I did not collapse."

A death watch has already been instituted at the county jail. Guards occupy positions night and day in front of his cells. He is not allowed out in the corridor, and is permitted to eat anything he desires if it is paid for. He will not be allowed to see any person except by permit from the Sheriff, but a jail official will be constantly in attendance.

SOME DREADFUL SIGHTS

American Motion Picture Man Sees Berlin Poverty and Misery.

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—(Associated Press).—"After what I have seen now at Berlin, I am convinced that the overwhelming majority of the Berlin population lives in misery and poverty," said D. W. Griffith, American film director, supervising two film productions produced here, to a German newspaper man.

"I guess that my good friends who freely supplied me with misleading information about German prodigality divided their worthy endeavors only between the Hotel Bristol and the Palais de Danse, while visiting here," the film man added.

AUSTRALIA MISTAKEN.

Unless Protocol Interferes, Australia Should Be Mum.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 4. — (Canadian Press). — Premier Bruce, in a speech in the House of Representatives yesterday with regard to the compromise arrived at with Japan at Geneva on the League of Nations' arbitrate protocol, said that unless there was something in the protocol which interfered with Australia's rights there would be no need for Australia to take special action in the matter.

NEW DISEASE DISCOVERED.

Russian Scientists Say It Prevails During "Flu" Epidemics.

MOSCOW, Oct. 4.—Professors Fleroff and Kousmin of the Institute of Experimental Medicine announce the discovery of a new disease prevalent during epidemics of influenza, manifesting itself by severe chills, violent headache, vomiting, nasal hemorrhage, accompanied by high temperature. The malady, still unnamed, lasts from two to six days, and is contagious, but not necessarily fatal.

The professors are endeavoring to isolate the microbe. Discovery cams about through an investigation of the sudden illness of 150 children in a Moscow orphanage, who showed symptoms of ptomaine poisoning, but later manifested baffling symptoms.

PARIS, Oct. 4.—(Special.)—President-elect Gallies, of Mexico, arrived here to-day and was greeted by members of the Embassy staff and representatives of President Douemergue and Premier Herriot.

BACON'S WIFE SEEMED UNWORRIED OVER TRIAL

Did Not Visit Court House During Husband's Trial For Murder.

LINDSAY, Oct. 4.—Although her husband's fate had been hanging in the balance, Mrs. Bacon, wife of John James Bacon, who was acquitted Friday by a jury of his peers on the charge of murder at the Supreme Court session here, manifested little interest in the proceeding. She has been a resident of Lindsay for the past fortnight, but during the trial of her husband, did not go near the court house. Yesterday morning while the jury was deliberating on a verdict she was seen with her daughter on Kent street, and did not appear to be worrying over the fate of her husband

Shortly before Mrs Bacon moved to Lindsay she held a sale of farm stock and implements. She had a 500 acre farm up among the rocks of Haliburton and had thirty-two head of cattle besides other stock. Shortly after the sale, and also after Mrs. Bacon moved to Lindsay the Bacon homestead was destroyed by fire.

MILLION FACING JOBLESS WINTER

The Fifth Annual Jobless Winter in England.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—(Associated Press).—Great Britain's army of more than a million jobless people is facing the fifth winter of unemployment. The permanent solution of this post-war problem is as far away as ever in the opinion of economists.

Inasmuch as three different Governments—Coalition, Conservative and Labor—have dealt with the question, which still awaits solution, it would appear to the detached observer that the problem is one of after war economics rather than partisan politics.

For five years the unemployment question has been a sort of urchin's joy to whatever political party happened to be in opposition. In fact, it seems to be a problem that is more readily grasped by an opposition than by whichever Government happens to be responsible for the conduct of affairs.

The Labor Government, not without pride, points to the latest unemployment figures available — 1,149,100—as about 120,000 less than for the corresponding figures a year ago. This, however, leaves the minimum at well over a million where it has been for the past five winters and where, in the view of not a few economists, it is to remain permanently.

The crux of the question, according to a spokesman for the Labor Government, lies in the shipbuilding, cotton and engineering industries which have never recovered from the disruption in which they were found at the close of the war.

This spokesman declared that Britain's army of more than a million jobless can never be put to work until the solution of the problem of German reparations has restored the economic equilibrium not only of Germany but of Europe and the world. Closely akin to this problem, in the view of economists of the Labor party, is the question of trade relations with Russia. As the Dawes plan has just been launched and the House of Commons, when Parliament resumes at the end of this month, will debate the treaty which the MacDonald Government negotiated with Soviet Russia, the future alone will determine how these latest international agreements will affect world trade conditions.

The unemployment dole is regarded by both philanthropists and economists as a necessary evil—inadequate to take care of the needs of its recipients and demoralizing because payments are made without any return in labor.

A family consisting of father and mother and four children, if eligible to the unemployment dole, will receive 31 shillings a week this winter, as against 24 shillings a week last winter.

CLERK'S ARREST FIRST BLEMISH ON HYDRO STAFF

Sir Adam Beck Expressed Deep Regret Over Settell Affair.

CHARGE OF FRAUD.

Settell "One of the Boys"—Was Plunger At Race Tracks.

LONDON, Ont., October 4. — Sir Adam Beck last night expressed deep regret over the Settell affair. He was kept in close touch with the developments all day.

"This is the first trouble of the kind we have had on the commission," said Sir Adam, "and the staff which has felt pride in its immaculate record, will feel keenly about it."

Sir Adam declared Settell was a much valued member of the Commission's staff and was popular with everyone. Though described as the chairman's private secretary, he was hardly that, Sir Adam said. Both he and Mr. McLaughlin did certain secretarial work for the chairman, but they were under the direction of Mr. Pope.

Sir Adam said that he could not undertand what led Settell to commit such an offence.

"He may have been in financial difficulties," said Sir Adam, "but of this I was not aware."

Settell is charged, under a warrant for his arrest issued yesterday, with having fraudulently cashed a false cheque for $29,990, purporting to have been signed by Sir Adam Beck as chairman of the Hydro Commission.

The news from Hamilton is a shock to a very wide circle of friends and acquaintances made by "Clarry" Settell in his long career with the Hydro. He is about 41 years of age, and married, but for some years he has not lived with his wife, but he maintained a house on Duplex avenue, in North Toronto.

His act is credited by those who know him best as due to loses at betting on sporting events, and to the cost of "having a good time"—as the term is generally used.

In his official capacity he has travelled throughout Ontario and became well known to those interested in the Hydro movement.

His convivial nature made friends easily.

He is known to have been a heavy bettor on baseball games, as well as on the races, he being a frequent attendant at the tracks.

REPORTS DENIED.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press.)—Reports current again that Senator N. A. Belcourt of Ottawa, has been appointed Canadian Minister to Washington, were denied here last night by Right Hon. W. L. Mackenie King, Prime Minister of Canada. Premier refused to discuss the subject beyond saying that the appointment had not been made.

KINGSTON MEETING.

Tourist Investigators Complete Itinerary Covering Whole of Old Ontario.

KINGSTON, Oct. 4.—The agricultural committee of the Ontario Legislature meeting in the Dairy School Friday, in the final meeting of the tour of Eastern Ontario heard opinions from a number of farmers in the vicinity of Kingston, the majority contending that there should be some aid given the farmers in regard to securing cheaper hydro electric power, a system whereby better prices would be secured and a change in the manner of the handling of dairy products. The meeting was only a little more than an hour in duration, the members being anxious to get to Toronto meet Miss Margaret Bondfield, British M.P.

In the absence of Dr Jamieson the chair was ocupied by M. M. McBride M.P.P., for South Brant. Other members of the commitee present were W. B. Black, M.P.P., for Lennox and Addington, N. Keith, North York; N Belanger, Russell, T. A. Thompson, South Lanark.

Mr. Black in opening the meeting stated that the committee had visited practically the whole of the old Ontario. He pointed out that on the success of agriculture depends the prosperity of urban centres and stated that while farmers have suffered considerably it was also true that business men and manufacturers have suffered more than people think

Mr. A. H. Fair of the Hemlock Stock Farm stated that the great problem in Canada to-day is the matter of getting pure milk He did not think it right to allow municipalities to pass their own bylaws but felt that there should be uniformity of laws regarding the handling of milk.

"While I do not pose as an exponent of the Moderation League," said Mr. Fair, "I am convinced that dirty milk has done far more harm in the province than liquor ever did."

SMUTS TO AUSTRALIA.

SYDNEY, Australia, Oct. 4. — (United Press).—General Smuts of South Africa, statesman and soldier, has been ordered by his physicians to take a long holiday, following the recent strennous elections. He has expressed a wish to visit Australia and has already received an invitation from the Australian Returned Soldiers' League.

WHAT'S THE ELEPHANT THINKING ABOUT

No, the elephant is not trying to climb the wall. Nor is he learning to walk a 12-inch plank. When being unloaded from a steamer at a Hoboken (N.J.) pier, Agnes, the elephant, swung up against the warehouse. She tried to stand on the beam, but a tug from the derrick engine lifted her off of it.

ACQUITTAL OF BACON MAY INSPIRE PROTEST

Social Worker Voices Disappointment Of Many Persons Over Verdict.

LINDSAY, Oct. 4.— Disappointmento is expressed by many people in the town and district over the verdict recorded by the jury in the Bacon murder case. It has been intensified as a result of the remarks made to the jury by Justice Logie in which he stated that the jury on the evidence might just as well have recorder a verdict of murder.

One prominent social worker was heard to remark after the verdict was announced that a strong protest, though probably not of a public nature, would go out from those who were interested in cases of this kind, especially where women and girls were concerned. He instanced a case where a young married women had been sentenced to prison for an offense against public morals, and felt that similar punishment should be meted out to male degenerates.

SMOKE BOWLED FIREMEN OVER

Ten Knocked Out At Flour Mill Fire In Montreal Suburb.

FIVE IN HOSPITAL.

MONTREAL, Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press)—Ten firemen were asphyxiated in a fire which swept part of the premises of the Dominion Flour Mills, in St. Henri Friday. The blaze started in the dry kiln room between two wings of the structure, and spread to the warehouse, where 20,000 bags of flour were stored. These are thought to be a total loss. Though it was impossible to obtain an estimate of the damage last night, this was believed to be in excess of $100,000.

Five of the gassed firemen were removed to a hospital, while the others were treated on the spot. None of them is seriously affected. The fire originated from self-combustion when the resinous substances of the material used in securing barrel staves ignited spontaneously from the heat concentrated in the kiln for the drying process.

BALKAN STATES

Appear To Be Ready for Mutual Helpful Action.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Oct. 4.—(Associated Press).—A conference of all the Balkan states is possible, following the precedent set by the London conference, if proposals being framed by the Bulgarian delegation of the League of Nations meetings in Geneva meet with success.

When the delegation started for Geneva recently, it was prepared for an exchange of views in the Swiss city with the Rumanian, Greek and Jugoslavian delegates. The official view here is that the Balkan states have acted at cross-purposes long enough, and that the time for united action to promote the legitimate interests of all the Balkan states has come.

This is notably the view of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Kalfoff, who said the other day to the Associated Press correspondent:

"The misfortunes of the Balkan peoples are due chiefly to rivalries among them, created largely by foreign influence. It is time to bring these to an end. The Balkan states have common interests. It is time the countries in this part of the world devoted themselves to the promotion of these interests by common action."

PROGRESS OF DAWES PROGRAM IN GERMANY LAGS BEHIND SCHEDULE

Every Effort Made To Carry Out Prescribed Measures, But Initial Speed Has Slackened — Time Extended For One Week.

EXECUTION OF PLAN IS AFFECTED.

PARIS, Oct. 4. — (Canadian Press). — A report from Owen D. Young, temporary agent-general for reparations under the Dawes plans, to the Reparation Commission, read at Friday afternoon's meeting of that body, shows that the work of putting the experts' report into execution is not maintaining the speed and punctuality with which it started.

The London conference decided that the experts' plan would be considered by the Reparation Commission as being put into execution if the Commission would announce the fulfillment of certain conditions by September 1 and certain others by October 6. The Commission was duly enabled to make the first announcement on time.

The agent general, however, now reports that, although he considers every effort has been made to fulfil the latter measures, he thinks that further time should be allowed Germany and the Reparation Commission. Accordingly, it was decided to extend the period from October 6 until seven days later.

The Progress Programme.

Mr. Young's report begins by recalling that under the London agreement the Reparation Commission should, by October 6, be in a position to announce five things:

First, that necessary laws had been voted and promulgated; second, that the executive and controlling bodies provided under the Dawes plan had been installed; third, that the new German bank and railroad control had been constituted; fourth, that certificates representing the railway bonds and industrial debentures had been deposited with the trustees, and, fifth, that the contracts had been concluded assuring subscriptions of the 800,000,000 gold marks loan.

Every Effort Made.

After recalling that the London protocol gave the Reparation Commission power to advance or retard these dates, Mr. Young's report continued:

The agent general herewith reports for the information of the Commission that, in his judgment, every effort has been made to carry out the measures above prescribed so as to enable the Commission to make this announcement.

Arranging For Loan.

Although the legal examination necessary to enable the report to be made, both to the Commission and to those negotiating the loan, has required more time than originally contemplated, great progress has been made in all respects toward completing arrangements for the loan."

Mr. Young's report then asked for an extension of not less than seven days, or to October 13, for the Commission to announce the fulfillment of these conditions. The report concluded by saying that this postponement would mean, so far as the agent general's duties were concerned, an extension of the transition period of seven days.

Bootlegging And Government Control.

IN the four Provinces in Canada where there is so-called Government control of the liquor traffic, bootlegging is carried on so extensively, it has become a public scandal. The very little bootlegging that is being done in Ontario cannot be compared in extent or viciousness with what goes on in these other Provinces.

CARDINAL BEGIN'S PROTEST.

In Quebec, where the morals of the people are being degraded by the widespread, illicit sale of liquor, Cardinal Begin, a few months ago, in a pastoral letter and synodal decree, wrote:

"There is a perversion against which we have resolved to act with the greatest energy; and that is the illegal traffic of intoxicating drinks.

"You know what a vigorous battle we have fought for the virtue of temperance in our diocese with our beloved coadjutor and the group of ecclesiastical and lay apostles who aided him in his efforts. After about fifteen years of work, they had almost conquered the enemy and we were overjoyed in foreseeing the end of the destruction caused by the excesses of alcohol. But alas, there is now spreading everywhere the intolerable abuse which we denounce, and, in particular, the surreptitious fabrication of an alcohol more harmful than any other to the health of the body and soul; a mortal poison which attacks the living forces of the individual, of the family, and of society, and which, if we do not strongly react, will soon accomplish irretrievable ruin.

"Therefore, we have desire to react, and by virtue of our pastoral authority, we have prohibited and prohibit under pain of grave disobedience, the fabrication, the sale and the clandestine importation of intoxicating liquors, such as are already forbidden by the civil law."

THE O.T.A. HAS IMPROVED MORAL CONDITIONS.

In Ontario the reverse is the case. Under the O.T.A. public morals have greatly improved. This is proved by the following official figures for the Province. These show what conditions were in 1914, under license, and what they were in 1922 under the O.T.A.

Convictions.	1914.	1922.
Keeping and frequenting bawdy houses	802	352
Loose and disorderly	6,411	1,736
Cruelty to animals	1,172	256
Obscene language	385	153
Total	8,770	2,497

It will be noted that under the O.T.A. the crimes mentioned are less than one-third as numerous as they were under license.

ATHLETES HELD ANNUAL MEETING

All Saints' Association Elected Officers For Season.

ASHMORE IS LEADER.

The annual meeting of All Saints' Athletic Association was held last night in the club room, Sherbrooke street. A large number of members of the club and several members of the congregation were on hand. Reports were read by the President, Mr. H. E. Ashmore, and the secretary, George Gimblett, Jr., showing the affairs of the club to be in good shape. The election of officers for the ensuing year then took place, the following being selected:

President, H. E. Ashmore (re-elected), Vice-President, Arthur Robinson, Secretary-Treasurer, George Gimblett, Jr., Executive, E. Rye, (Chairman), S. Hope, J. Beauclerc, R. Allen, Nelson Foy, Chris. Jay, Homer Lundy.

The following Honorory Officers were chosen: Honorary President, Rev. J. D. Patterson, Honorary Vice-Presidents, Messrs. A. Hope, G. B. Richardson, W. H. Buller, R. J. Bolton, G. Gimblett, Sr., E. Wauby, Honorary Secretary, Mr. J. Price.

THE GRAFTON EXHIBIT.

Occupied a Prominent Position at the Millbrook Fair.

The Fair management at Millbrook think so highly of the fine decorative value of the Grafton exhibit that they allotted it the most prominent position on the grounds. Stepping inside the gate, the big 50 foot checkered front is the first thing to catch the eye, and helps wonderfully in giving an impression of size to Millbrook Fair. Made in the form of an architectural store front, carried on checkered columns, its appearance is very striking. Tastefully and effectively arranged samples of the season's latest models in men's wear add to the attraction, and much interest was shown in the styles, fabrics and nifty looking garments. Several of the staff from the big store were on hand to answer inquiries, hand out literature, blotters, etc., while one imposing looking gentleman, in dress suit and silk topper, had his own special advertising matter for selected recipients. A resting spot for tired ladies was provided at one end of the exhibit, with comfortable seats that were fully appreciated, and kept well filled all afternoon.

Grafton's never do things in a small way, and their visit to Millbrook Fair was a sample of the big way things are handled by this progressive firm.

GARAGE MAN KILLED.

Said To Have Been Murdered Following Quarrel Over Money Matters.

BEDFORD, Mass., Oct. 4.—Theory that Frederick A. Clements, who turned from ministerial training in Newfoundland to run a garage at Burlington, was killed by a man after a quarrel over money matters, occupied attention to-day of officials investigating his death.

The belief that an arrest would be made by night was expressed by one official.

Warning that his safety was menaced, "by a dark man with a club" was given Clements by his wife, a spiritualist medium, but the advice did not save him. Mrs. Clements, otherwise known as Madame Sandeen, last night identified the body found in the Shawsheen river here Thursday night wrapped in a sack and weighed with metal, as that of her husband. The woman told the police she had premonition of danger to Clements and had warned him to be careful. Medical examiantion said it had been in the water about two weeks and that the man had been beaten over the head with a club or hammer.

AN ARSON SUSPECT.

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 4.—Provincial police constables were sent to Gosfield township yesterday with a warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Annie McCain, 35, accused of arson. According to the complaint of Norman Corlett, a former neighbor, Mrs. McCain set fire to his barns. The police say she is responsible for other fires in the neighborhood of her home.

UNPAID TAXES HERE.

Two Tax Rolls Are Out At The Same Time—Mayor Not Satisfied.

In discussing the unpaid taxes for 1923, His Worship declared, at a meeting of the Finance committee last night: "The condition of things is not satisfactory in the tax collector's office. There are two rolls out. We have got into this way of having two rolls out and as far as I am concerned it has got to stop.

"If Mr. Green has got to that stage where he can't handle it we will have to make other arrangements. Mr. Green used to return the roll by the end of January. Now it is October and we haven't the 1923 roll in. If you trace back the difficulties in other cities you will find it is due to having two rolls in the collector's hands."

It was remarked that the bailiff has had one case involving a large sum in his hands over three months without collecting.

Mr. Green was instructed to take all steps necessary to collect the taxes for 1923 and return the roll immediately. A recommendation that City Solicitor Joseph Wearing be instructed to take steps required by Mr. Green in carrying out the Council's order was passed.

His Worship declared his intention of following up the proposal he had raised, not that there is any suspicion of irregularities, but to prevent possibility of mistakes occurring.

Joseph Longo re-opened his appeal for indemnity for the closing of his store during the making of the roadway at Hunter street bridge, declaring he lost hundreds of dollars during the two months when his business is best. He asked $500. The question was taken under advisement.

FOUR THOUSAND AT MILLBROOK FAIR BROKE ATTENDANCE RECORD

New Grandstand Was Evidence Of Material Progress and Big Showing Of Agricultural Products Rewarded the Directors' Efforts —Cattle and Horse Classes Were Features.

BAND AND RACES WERE ATTRACTIONS.

(By Staff Reporter.)

The Millbrook Central Exhibition, which had its opening day on Thursday, and its big day yesterday, was a record-breaker this year, in total of attendance and numbers of exhibits both. The warm, pleasant afternoon brought out hundreds of cars that lined the approaches to the grounds on either side of a long street. A total of about four thousand people patronized the Fair yesterday afternoon.

The exhibits, with a possible exception in the Fine Arts section, were bigger this year than ever before. The cattle and horse shows surpassed themselves in the number and excellence of the entries in both. A very welcome addition to the grounds this year was the fine new grandstand, with a seating capacity of 500, well patronized for the races and the horse judging.

The cattle showing, although there were not exceptionally large herds in any one class, was very good, with some fine pure-red beasts on view. N. W. McConkey, of Peterborough and S. Fallis and H. I. Seymour, of Cavan, had possibly the biggest showing of Holsteins; Harry Deyell, of Omemee, and R. Matchett and Sons of Cavan, showed shorthorns, which had more animals in this class than for years back. Mr. Matchett won the special prize donated by the president, Mr. L. W. Smith, for Holstein calves. Kennedy Brothers, of Millbrook had a nice herd of Polled-Angus cattle.

The sheep and swine showing was not particularly large, but there were some good Lecisters on view, shown principally by J. Allen, of Newcastle, R. McKnight and Wm. McKnight, and John Smith, of Cavan, and Thomas Beatty, of Peterboro. A few Shropshires were shown by John Smith, of Cavan and George Holdsworth, of Cobourg.

Over in the stall, whose approaches in some places, even under a hot sun, were deep with heavy mud, so heavy that some of the delivery cars back of the grandstand had to be hauled out in the morning with trucks, there was a small swine exhibit, in which the red Tamworths were prominent, shown by Powell Brothers, of Campbellcroft and Thomas Beatty, of Peterboro, the latter showing also a few Berkshires. W. McCamus of Fraserville, and Bowles Brothers, of Springville, had a good exhibit of Yorkshires.

Horses Very Good.

In the horse section, judging in the ring went on all afternoon, with judging of driving before the grandstand. General purpose and heavy draught horses predominated, the heavy agricultural class being one of the largest ever shown in Millbrook, nine mares and colts being shown in this one section alone. Among the exhibitors of heavy horses were Wm. Armstrong and George Boner, of Millbrook, George Ward, of North Monaghan, Leonard Smith, of Millbrook, and Walter and Kenneth Moncrief of Fraserville.

In the light horse section, also with a big list of entries, of excellent quality, among those showing carriage horses were S. F. Redmond, of Otonabee, whose horse and turnout won the first prize for best turnout against a large class, H. Cathcart of Ida, George Mitchell of Orono, Mrs. Tamblin of Orono, R. C. Simmons, of Port Hope, H. Bland of Omemee, P. Cowan of Bowmanville, J. Lewis of Port Hope, and M. Flitchett, of Blackstock. In the roadster class, exhibits were by Messrs. Beatty of Elisabethville, T. Cowan of Orono, Pollard of Port Hope, Johnston of Bailieboro, Walker of Port Hope, W. B. Ferguson of Cadmus and Mr. Tamblin of Orono had fine teams of general purpose horses.

The poultry exhibits were double those of last year. Two hundred odd birds were housed in a shed with open windows, the overflow of the exhibits extending to a dozen wire coops placed on the ground outside. Leghorns and Rocks were predominant. G. Buller, of Peterboro and Mr. Tamblin, of Orono, had the largest showings, and C. L. McNeil, of Cavan, had a new brand of bird in a good exhibit of Jersey Black Giants.

Ladies' Work.

The ladies had the long hall to themselves, with an exhibit of fancy work, cooking, flowers and vegetables.

The fancy work was particularly good, with a variety of artistically executed pieces in every sort of work and some exceptionally dainty white embroideries. The painting and drawing section held only about a dozen pieces, all of good quality.

In a gauze-covered central section was disposed the cooking display, that included preserves; pies and cakes, cookies, honey in sections, candy, meat pastries, and many loaves of good-looking bread. Among the large exhibitors in this section were Mrs. R. McKnight, Mrs. J. Carle, of Fraserville, and Mrs. George Booner, the latter also showing some excellent butter in a section devoted to large crocks of the accessory, to the staff of life.

Flower Display.

Flowers were on central tables also, in a very pretty showing of cut blossoms and potted plants. There were a number of foliages, a huge flowering begonia, dahlias, that appear to be generally a good display this year, a quantity of everlastings, with a new pink immortal everlasting shown by Mr. H. Lord, who received a number of firsts, and some exquisite pansies. The antirrhinum, or snapdragon, were especially pretty also. Mesdames Thorndyke, Hilton and Harrington had large exhibits.

The vegetable section was interesting, holding some huge potatoes, carrots and squash, and the fruit showing included many fine-looking apples.

The Singer Sewing Machine Company of Peterboro had some machines on view in this building.

Outside, where the Millbrook Band did good work through a long afternoon with pleasant music, Grafton and Company's big booth was an attractive centre, with its green and white squares and its gay overhead flag decorations. Here the latest ideas in men's clothing were on view.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church had a small building devoted to the service of hot meals, on the grounds.

Forestry Exhibit.

Peterboro's "Blind Man." J. R. Brownlee, had a tent filled with pretty handiwork in reed and wicker, with gay little paper parasols on sale, and nearby was an open section devoted to the display of the Ontario Forestry Branch, from the Provincial Forestry Station at Orono. Here were the tiny beginnings of the "transplants" which this station provides for the purposes of re-forestation or for windbreaks only to any applying for trees for these purposes. The idea is to re-forest waste lands, and trees suitable for the purpose were chosen mainly among the conifers, also the hards, excluding ornamentals. White and Scotch and Norway pine, balsams, spruces, cedar and tamarack are among the biggest varieties sent out by the station, which this spring shipped 400,000 transplants, and has a million for distribution next spring. From the nursery at St. Williams this year 960,000 were distributed in Norfolk County alone. A limit of 3,500 in one year is placed on distribution to any one person.

The amusement section consisted of a dozen or more booths, devoted principally to the sale of light refreshments, with several dart games. A vendor of patent medicines was conducting a one-sided debate, "Patent Medicine vs. Operations," his side getting the best of the verbal volley directed against his opponent.

A rather large motor car exhibit included machines shown by Albert Tinney of Cavan, who had Chevrolets, also buggies, the Brewer Motor Sales of Peterboro, showing Hudson and Essex cars. V. Eastwood of Peterboro with Dodge machines, H. Tinney of Cobourg with the Overland make, and a number of Fords were in charge of Thomas Harkness of Millbrook and M. Duffus of Peterboro, who had three cars, a tractor, a plow and a cultivator.

Although the beginning of the afternoon saw a track, heavy with mud, the hot sun dried it out sufficiently to permit of the three scheduled races being run off, the going, however, being pretty rough.

The free-for-all had a purse of $100, and the 2.40 the same, both divided $50, $30 and $20, and the green race purse was $50, in prizes of $25, $15 and $10.

The Race Results.

The free-for-all was won by Polly Stout, owned by R. Elmhirst, of Indian River, first in all three heats, with Belle Malone, owned by J. Johnson, Port Hope, second in all three, and Betty Azoff, owned by A. Elmhirst, of Keene, third. Time, 2.34 3-4.

The 2.40 race was won by Just Jack, owned by R. Elmhirst, first in all three heats, with Mamie Brino owned by George Barry, of West Guildford, 2-2-2, and Prince R., owned by C. Fife, of Indian River, 2-3-3. Herman T., owned by B. Tinney, of Cobourg, also ran. Time 2.51¼, 2.50¼, 2.50¼.

The green race was won by Nellie Patch, owned by W. Grey, of Millbrook, first in all three heats, Sylvia Todd, owned by B. Tinney, of Cobourg, coming second in all three, and Hazel M., owned by W. Mulligan of Bethany third. Time: 2.54¼ 2.50¼, 2.51¾s.

Judges for the races were W. B. Black and Thos. Carew of Lindsay, and J. F. McMillan, of Cobourg. The timer was J. Hilson, of Orono, the starter T. M. Beggs, of Lindsay, and the clerk T. H. Collins, of Millbrook.

Judges in the different sections for exhibits included: Messrs. Jarvis of Burlington, for the poultry; N. McAdoo of Kingston, for light horses, and Adam Scarff of Ottawa, for heavy horses; Fred. Hubbs of Bloomfield, for dairy cattle and swine; Mr. Knox of Norwood, for beef cattle and sheep; J. J. Preston of Bethany, for grain and seeds; Joseph Hickson of Bethany, for garden vegetables and field roots; W. J. Oke of Peterboro, for fruits; S. Jordan of Peterboro, for plants and flowers, and Mrs. Maybee of Brighton, for ladies' work.

Children's School Fair.

A tent on the grounds held the exhibits of the thirteenth annual school fair of the district, directed by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. There was rather a small showing on view here, only three schools being represented, but the assortment was good and showed a decided interest taken by the children in the various classes submitted for prizes. There were decorated sheaves of oats and barley and wheat, also bottles of Marquis wheat; well-executed small birdhouses and hammer handles, collections of leaves in books and insects in glass-covered, wooden boxes, bottles of weed seeds, collections of apples and corn and potatoes, beets and parsnips, tall corn stalks, and a few nicely-arranged bouquets of asters, zinnias and marigolds. There were half a dozen well-iced cakes and well-baked loaves of bread and biscuits, and some excellent examples of careful sewing in buttonhole work and clothes' pin bags, also knitted woollen scarves. A school parade by the children prefaced the opening of their own miniature exhibition.

The exhibition festivities concluded last evening with a dance in the Armories, a six-piece orchestra supplying music.

Officers of the Millbrook Agricultural Society for this year are: President, L. W. Smith; Vice-President, H. A. Fallis; 2nd Vice-President, H. Tate; Secretary-Treasurer, J. N. McGill.

Directors: W. T. Donaldson, J. L. Fair, G. A. Fair, T. W. McCamus, W. E. Ball, T. W. Larmer, P. Stinson, W. H. Lough, J. W. Hamilton, N. Belch, Ormie Larmer, L. McNeil, J. A. Vance, R. J. McKnight, T. A. Kelly, A. T. Henderson, L. H. Winslow, J. H. Paul, J. L. McCamus, J. Whittington and H. Seymour.

Honorary Directors: D. Sutton, Jno. Tate, Wm. Hannah, Geo. Berry.

Auditors: D. Hampton and T. H. Collins.

Unlike their immediate Fair predecessors this year, the Campbellford and Keene Exhibitions, both of which included lady directors in their list, Millbrook dispensed with the assistance of the fair sex.

SECRETARY CASHED BIG HYDRO CHEQUE

Police Nabbed Him at the Border and Recovered Part of Funds.

TORONTO, October 4 (Canadian Press). — Arrested yesterday afternoon at the international bridge at Niagara Falls terminated the flight of Clarence Settell, for many years private secretary to Sir Adam Beck, who, according to charges made, forged a Hydro Commission cheque for $29,990 for which he secured the cash from the Canadian Bank of Commerce in Hamilton.

In the employ of the Ontario still had $23,000 in his possession.

New Orleans is declared to have been the objective for which he was making.

In the employ of the Ontario Hydro Commission since its inception, a matter of 17 years, he was one of the best known and most popular of Hydro officials. He had the full confidence of Sir Adam Beck, with whose work he was closely related, and his absconding yesterday occasioned surprise which could not have been more complete.

Pressure which led him to take the step with which he is chargd is not as yet fully understood by those who were his associates.

Fast living, however, is used as a loose term to account for his downfall, for Settell was well known for his sporting and social proclivities.

Arrangements are being made for his return to Hamilton, where he will face trial upon the charge of fraudulently cashing a false cheque or document for $29,990, purporting to have been signed by Sir Adam Beck as chairman of the Hydro Commission, and by W. W. Pope, as secretary of the Commission.

Provincial Police officials last night intimated that while it was not expected that there would be any further arrests in the Setell case, they did not anticipate any trouble in recovering the sum of $7,000 or more which the man under arrest had disposed of.

Prince Of Wales Permitted To Enjoy Thrill In Cab Under Supervision Of Crew.

EDMONTON, Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press).—En route from Jasper National Park to Vancouver, the Prince of Wales yesterday afternoon took over the job of running his own special train through Fraser River Canyon.

The Prince mounted the engine cab at Boston Bar, B.C., and introduced himself to the regular engine crew and to Master Mechanic Austin, who was riding in the engine. His Royal Highness, with a copy of train orders before him, and his eye on the second hand of his watch, started the train out of the divisional point on dot, opening up the throttle and pushing the reserve lever ahead.

It was a good start, without any slack or jar. As the heavy steel train proceeded through the yards it gathered speed, but about one mile out from Boston Bar cattle were observed on the track, and the Prince slowed down the train and blew a warning whistle. The cattle moved off into the bush, and with the release of the brakes, the big locomotive, No. 5116, swung again into her stride.

Seven miles from Boston Bar, Hell's Gate was passed, and the Prince could not restrain his anxiety to view the spectacle of the waters of the Fraser being held in narrow confines by the great masses of rocks.

For a couple of miles the speed of the train was slackened, and His Royal Highness peered from the locomotive cab down into the gorge. For twelve miles more the Prince remained in charge of the engine, dismounting when the train stopped at Stout, B.C., and proceeding back to his car. His Royal Highness was delighted with the experience, and Engineer Gregory and Fireman Hallett declared that he was qualified to become a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

WHITBY MAN SENTENCED TO THREE YEARS FOR THEFT.

WHITBY, October 4. — Almer Rogers, charged with theft of bonds from Jonah White, Job White, Arthur Nesbitt, all of Brooklin, and from Deborah Dickinson, the amount involved totalling $9,000, was yesterday sentenced to three years in Kingston Penitentiary.

Rogers when on trial, withdrew his former plea of "not guilty" and pleaded guilty on three charges.

Magistrate J. E. Willis, in pronouncing sentence, remarked that the Court was not a collection agency.

Mr. W. H. Kennedy, acting for Rogers, asked for a suspended sentence, which was refused.

In commenting on the case the Magistrate remarked that restitution had not been made and said restitution on the uncertain stock market was not sufficient for the Court, and further added that the plaintiffs did not have the same chance to defend their money from theft of this sort, as a man had in defending his property from burglary.

A DIFFERENCE IN METHODS.

The Lindsay murder trial, which terminated on Thursday night with the conviction of Fred. McGaughey illustrates effectively the difference in the administration of the law on this side of the line as compared with the United States method.

Here was a case such as would have delighted the American newspapers—the murder of a beautiful girl, the presence of the sex element as a factor in the homicide, the introduction of a pretty girl witness to tell the story of the crime, alienists who talked learnedly about such things as catatonic dementia precox—all the ingredients were there.

Had the trial been held in Chicago, for example, the choosing of the jury would just be nicely under way.

It would have been another week at least before the first alienist for the defence would have made his appearance.

And then the battle over the expert testimony would have gone on day after day until the jury who had never heard of dementia precox until the case began would almost feel as if they were showing all the symptoms of that form of mental disturbance.

Perhaps after it was all over there would be a prison sentence for the convicted man.

The Lindsay trial began on Tuesday morning, a true bill having been returned on Monday afternoon.

At the end of three days Crown and defence had submitted their evidence, the counsel had made their addresses, the judge had made his charge to the jury, the latter had returned a verdict of guilty and the prisoner had been sentenced to be hanged.

Is there any question as to which method is likely to prove the more effective as a deterrent?

GOVERNMENT SHOULD ACT.

Absence of rear lights on the buggy in which he was driving last night caused an accident in which Mr. Fidgett narrowly escaped with his life.—Port Hope Guide.

That there are not more of such paragraphs in Ontario newspapers is a matter for wonderment to those who are familar with the conditions on the highways of the Province.

In this case the driver of a motor car failed to notice the buggy and the automobile crashed into the lighter vehicle, smashing it to match-wood.

Fortunately, the occupant of the buggy escaped serious injury; his good fortune being miraculous in view of the condition of his vehicle.

The Ontario Government, even at the risk of offending rural residents who for some unaccountable reason are opposed to any such legislation, should introduce a bill at the next session making it compulsory for all vehicles travelling the highways at night to carry lights.

Otherwise accidents such as recorded above are bound to increase.

Their own common sense having failed to impress upon the owners of horse-drawn vehicles that they are taking their lives in their hands every night they venture out with unilluminated outfits, it becomes necessary for the Government to act.

There may be some grumbling following the introduction of such legislation, but, after all, it is cheaper to buy a lantern and some oil than it is to pay funeral expenses or replace a smashed-up buggy.

A POINT TO REMEMBER.

A programme designed to interest the citizens in this most vital matter has been prepared as Peterborough's contribution toward the Fire Prevention Week campaign next week, and general co-operation in and of the effort is urged.

There is one point that the Examiner believes the people should consider seriously.

That is that suggestions or orders from the Chief of the Fire Department should be faithfully carried.

The Chief is engaged as an expert to protect Peterborough from loss by fire.

Rightly he considers that it is his duty to prevent fires if possible rather than merely to fight them.

It is much cheaper and more effective to head off a conflagration before the event than afterward, and when the man upon whose judgment and expert knowledge the community should depend for guidance in these matters makes recommendations that will reduce the danger of fire or make it easier to handle one the advice should be followed.

This phase of the situation is mentioned because the Examiner has reason to believe that Chief Gimblett's instructions have not always been observed in the past—doubtless through carelessness or neglect on the part of those responsible.

We pay the head of the Fire Department to keep down our fire loss and to save our lives and property.

Surely then it is simply sound business and good common sense to take his advice on matters that come within the field of his duties as the city's leader in the fight against the ravages of the fire fiend.

YOUR POWERS OF TELEPATHY.

He shipped himself in an express box, in Texas. And Bill Baker, 18, was nearly dead of thirst when he was rescued by a case of mental telepathy.

B. B. Neeley, express messenger who discovered Baker, tells it this way: "While working at my desk in the express car, my subconscious mind told me there was some one in the car besides myself. So, along between Toyah and Pecos, I decided I would thoroughly examine a certain large box. I had that queer feeling that some one was looking at me, though I was alone in the car and nobody in sight."

He opened the box and found young Baker, exhausted, his bottles of drinking water empty. Baker, by the way, expressed himself to an uncle as a "surprise."

We doubt if any of our readers hasn't had a similar experience verging on telepathy. How many times have you turned in a crowd, uncomfortably conscious that some one was staring at you?

If this doesn't demonstrate "radio thought," how do you explain it?

Maybe you've walked with a friend in silence for some minutes. Then you started whistling—and, at the very same instant, your friend burst forth with the same tune. Again we have a demonstration of telepathy or some other mysterious force that links subconscious minds and carries communications between them.

Or take the case of two intimate friends or a husband and wife "well mated." Frequently they exclaim, a bit bewilderedly: "What you said was on the tip of my tongue." These people also are so telepathically in tune with each other that they carry on a complicated conversation in so few words that an outsider wouldn't get the drift at all.

Will the eventual language be silence—thought transference? It doesn't seem as "supernatural" as before we had radio.

GLASS HOUSES.

Disclosures at the City Hall continue, says the Hamilton Spectator. Another department has been involved, another arrest made. Graft and dishonesty have seemingly become epidemic. The discoveries that are being made by auditors who are checking the books of the municipalities are subjects of backfence, street corner and executive office gossip. The public holds up shocked hands—and continues in its efforts to "gyp" the street car conductor out of a ticket, to take candies from the display tray when the proprietor isn't looking, to extract gum from slot machines with pieces of tin, to pocket excess change without a blush when the clerk makes a mistake, to find articles on the street and salve the conscience by not consulting the "lost and found" columns. Graft and dishonesty in small things are but a reflection of the same ugly practices in high places. The world is full of men who wouldn't steal five cents, but who haven't a qualm of conscience when the grocer forgets an item when making up the weekly account. Some one has said that the people are the tree and conspicuous conditions the fruit. A most unsavory mess has been uncovered at the City Hall. Nothing less than a thorough housecleaning will satisfy the public, but such things as have been revealed do not just happen. For every effect there is a cause. It is when the public conscience becomes dulled to the trivial acts of deceit and dishonesty that the extra lock must be put on the treasury door and the independent auditors called in.

The man in whose bathroom hangs a Pullman car towel and on whose table is a piece of hotel silverware shouldn't have very much to say about the City Hall scandal. Nor should the woman who stuffed the silk blouse down her stocking and hid the new shoes under the car seat the last time she came across the border. In other words, it's still a ridiculous pastime to toss pebbles if you live in a transparent house.

LABOR CANNOT CHOOSE BUT FIGHT.

Ramsay MacDonald is being swiftly hurried to face the inevitable. At the time when he formed the first Labor Cabinet of Britain and assumed power it was freely rumored that without experience in the art of government his tenure of office would be short. There were hostile critics who declared that he could never pilot the ship of State through the shoals and past the rocks which obtruded so threateningly with so small and so inexperienced a crew. To a large extent these critics have been confounded. Ramsay MacDonald has displayed a degree of skill and a quality of statesmanship in handling some of the most difficult tasks that any Prime Minister has been called upon to tackle and has done so with praiseworthy tact and just as deep a concern for the national interests as any of his predecessors. Premier MacDonald has crowded into the nine months of his holding office a record of constructive effort of which he has good cause to be proud.

How then does it come that Britain, which was so willing to give him a chance to prove himself and was favorable to him to the limit of extreme tolerance in the early months of his Government, now shows signs of irritation with Labor and seeks a change, for it is undeniable that within the last few weeks—the weeks of MacDonald's greatest triumph abroad—Britain has heard and encouraged the talk of an appeal to the electorate? Has Labor made the muddle which its enemies predicted and which even many not definitely hostile feared she would?

Labor is being challenged from within and not from without. It was inevitable that sooner or later her minority Government must fall. It has already aroused much comment that the Government has been defeated a score of times in the House and yet has refused to resign on the grounds that the questions upon which a minority vote was polled on division were not regarded as capital issues upon which alone MacDonald agreed to resign. Ramsay MacDonald might have continued in office for a year or more if he had been able to rely on the undivided support of his own followers.

In this he has failed. From the very first there has been ceaseless if silent warfare between the moderates who saw their only chance of continuing in office and of enacting legislation in accordance with their avowed principles, was by close co-operation with the Liberals while at the opposite end of the line tugged the extremists, the Clydeside group, and the men who posed as the apostles and prophets of that new creed which had its tap roots in Moscow. It was inevitable that there must be a clash between these two groups some time. MacDonald has shown much diplomacy and much restraint in dealing with this group so far, but he could scarcely hope to hold their permanent support if he consistently refused their demands and ignored their requests.

The issue has been joined with greater swiftness than was expected, but its joining was inevitable on the day when MacDonald listening to the importunate demands of Arthur Ponsonby and other Sovietophiles agreed to accept Moscow's terms rather than allow the Russian delegates to return home empty handed when they came seeking peace and good British money.—Montreal Star.

A THOUGHT.

THE DAY IS WON.

The day is won if you have done some kindly deed—if you can trace the sunshine or someone's face, put there by your own efforts to be friendly, kindly, the day is won.

And when night comes it will bring on its benediction of sweet sleep.

But the day is lost if it has cost a friend—if you have failed to make someone's load lighter and the way much brighter, the day is lost.

And your night will be a woods with wild animals sneaking in the double shade.

It is not fair for a man to be kind for he gets more pleasure for himself than he can possibly give to others. It is not fair.

And from a business viewpoint, kindness almost always pays. Proof: Enemies never give you business or send you money unless they are actually obliged to.

Kindness has converted more sinners than has eloquence, made more true friends than has money, and profited more men in business than has a favorable location.

PIRIE FAMILY FUNERAL.

Burial Of Triple Murder Victims Took Place In Ottawa To-day.

OTTAWA, Oct 3— (Canadian Press).—Funeral of Caroline Pirie and her two daughters, Kathleen aged 7 and Jean aged 6, victims of triple murder here early Wednesday morning, were buried here to-day in burial plot of the Canadian Patriotic fund in Beechwood cemetery.

James Buchanan Pirie, crippled war veteran, who has confessed to the slaying of his wife and children because he was in financial difficulties, will be arranged in police court next Wednesday.

RECORD DROUGHT REPORTED.

TACOMA, Wash., Oct. 4.—(Associated Press).—All records for drought were broken in western Washington, the area between the Cascade Mountains and the Pacific Ocean, in the weather year ending Sept. 1. This region generally is associated with heavy rainfall, but in the last year only 22.79 inches of rain were measured by the weather bureau here. Records dating from 1884 make the average annual moisture 40.79. The banner year for rain was 1897, when the fall was 82.76.

Old-timers commonly assert that the rainfall is diminishing as the forests that once covered western Washington like a mat are being cut away.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, October 4. — The top paid for export steers this week was $7.40 a cwt., but the large proportion bought did not cost $7.00, and a good many were bought at and slightly below $6.50 a cwt.

Export heifers cost around $6.25, and were not down perceptibly from the previous week. Very few heavy bulls were available and those bought cost $4.00 to $4.25 a cwt. A small number of choice heavy cows for overseas were bought at $4.75 and $5.00 a cwt. Roger & Maybee exported over 1,600 cattle in all, but bought in the country and only fed in the yards. This firm will be buying again next week, but will want only about 800 head. The British market is down 2 to 2 1-2 cents a pound in a month and has compelled lower prices at this end.

The only butchers' stock which held up at all this week was baby beeves. These are still in good demand, from $9.00 to $11.00 a cwt. for those of quality and finish. Choice handy weight butchers' made as high as $6.50 in only a few instances, and butchers who kill quality stuff all the time were able to pick up 1,200-pound cattle in bunches as low as $5.75 a cwt.

Medium cattle were kept close to $5.00 a cwt., and fair light killing heifers were had by the packers at $4.20 a cwt. The distinctly bad sellers were heavy steers, although fat, but out of the type for export. These were sold in one instance as low as $5.20 a cwt.

Butchers' cows were down low enough to keep away Western shipments and those on offer had a steady market at the reduced prices. Good to choice butchers' cows sold at $3.75 to $4.25; medium cows $3.25 to $3.50, and common cows at $2.50 to $3.00. Most of the weeks' bulls were bolognas which sold at $2.40 to $3.00 a cwt. There was a large supply of feeders and stockers in this week and prices were lower by 25c a cwt. Good quality Western feeders over 900 pounds each had hard work to sell at $5.00 a cwt., and common light stockers were down to $2.75 a cwt. Springers and milchers sympathised with the general market and sold easier this week.

The number of good calves offering are easily taken by the market aided by a demand for a number going to Buffalo.

The light finished calf up to 200 pounds has sold all week at 10 to 11 cents a pound and others not quite up to the standard at 8 to 9 1-2 cents. There is a poor market for calves 250 pounds and higher and these are going at 5 to 6 cents a pound. Common grassed calves are selling at 3 1-2 cents a pound.

Lambs were stronger by 50 cents a cwt. on the average and a good many of the choice ewes brought 12 cents a pound. The week-end quotation was 11 1-2 to 11 3-4 cents a pound. Light choice sheep are bringing up to 7 cents a pound, and breeding ewes of the right kind to 8 cents.

Hogs have had a week of unsettled steadiness, the packers' quotation standing at $9.25 a cwt. bid. The small supply has stood in the way of any cut and the same stands for next week's opening market.

THE DOMINION BANK

PETERBOROUGH BRANCH,

JOHN CRANE, Manager

The Moderation League of Ontario

President, Mr. I. F. Hellmuth, K.C.

THE large majorities in favor of Government Control cast, one after the other, by the Western Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta were not made possible by the votes of only those who desired a change for the purpose of personal indulgence. There could have been no adoption of Government Control had it not been for the votes of total abstainers. In Manitoba, after almost a year, only a small proportion of those who voted for Government Control has taken out permits to purchase liquors.

An examination of the figures will further show that very many people who had previously voted for Prohibition had, after several years' trial, decided that the time had come for a change.

Why?

Not because it was desired to revert to the old "Bar" system of drinking.

Not because there was any question about the universal desire for temperance, respect for law, and decent environment for the children.

Not because the public conscience had become deadened.

But Because:

There had grown a feeling, amounting to a conviction, that Prohibition was not living up to the prophecies of those who had advocated its adoption, and that it was creating evils as great as those it pretended to subdue, but much more difficult to deal with.

Thoughtful men and women do not ignore what they experience and observe. It is generally agreed that a step was taken in the right direction when the public drinking bar was abolished. But the good of that step has been challenged by the enormous traffic done by the Bootlegger and the huge output of the home-brewer and illicit distiller.

The Moderation League proposes to hold to the good that has been accomplished, but to meet squarely the challenge of the Bootlegger and the Moonshiner.

Prohibition does not frighten the Bootlegger. It created him, and keeps him alive.

Does anyone doubt how the Bootlegger will vote on October 23rd?

Does anyone think that if the Bootlegger could be assured that present conditions would last for, say, ten years he would not greatly extend his business, and become even more daring in his operations?

In the meantime the Bootlegger has grown wealthy and powerful. No matter what is done he will not now be easily abolished. Drinking continues on a scale the magnitude of which is unsuspected by the ordinary citizen, and consequences, which do not find their way into statistics, but are nevertheless disastrous to the individuals concerned and to the community, follow.

The decent, self-respecting and law-abiding citizen has been penalised, but the orgies of the other class, provided they are conducted with sufficient secrecy, have remained unchecked.

The Province is also losing the huge revenue which these who desire to use liquor, properly and moderately, are willing to pay for the privilege.

Can the Province afford to lose this revenue? Can it continue to ignore the conditions being created on every side?

The answer lies with the electorate.

With many of the ideals of Prohibition the Moderation League of Ontario is in entire sympathy. The only motive underlying the activities of the League is that of a sincere desire to promote the interests, social, financial, and moral of the Province. There is no wish to provoke controversy or ill-feeling. Appeal is made to the experience and observation—not to the passions and prejudices—of the people of Ontario. It is contended that there exist sufficient grounds obvious to anyone who does not wilfully close his eyes to them and regarding which there is no difference of opinion, to justify the position taken by the League.

Altogether, the time has come for a change.

Government Control can be had by marking your Ballot as follows:—

1	Are you in favour of the continuance of The Ontario Temperance Act?
2	Are you in favour of the sale as a beverage of beer and spirituous liquor in sealed packages under Government control?	X

NORTH CAVAN FAIR WAS BIG SUCCESS

Event Held at Ida Yesterday Afternoon—Seven Schools Took Part in the Event.

MILLBROOK, October 4 — The attendance at the North Cavan Rural Shool Fair, held at Ida, on Wednesday afternoon, was exceptionally good considering that the event had been postponed from the previous day on account of the bad weather, and even then the wet grass and the cold wind made an unpleasant combination, which could hardly be expected to tempt people to attend an out-of-doors occasion.

Seven schools are located in the North Cavan district, the names of which, with their respective teachers, are as follows: S. S. No. 1, Cedar Grove, Miss Blackburn, teacher; S. S. Bradburn of Peterboro, judged the school parade and physical culture exercises, making a brief address afterwards full of practical suggestions, and also making complimentary references to the exellent work of the teachers in training their pupils, some of them on very short notice, for the occasion.

THE COACH'S JOB

Something of the taskmaster, the general and the diplomat, and a lot of the doctor must be hidden away in the man who would be the coach of a successful football or track team.

Emergencies of all kinds are his daily routine. A thorough knowledge of first aid is as essential as a knowledge of the game played by his men.

Bumps, bruises, strained ligaments and muscles are every day happenings, but the coach never becomes contemptuous of them. He knows that if neglected, they may result in anything.

Trainers everywhere keep Absorbine Jr. in their lockers. They use it not only for sprains, cuts and bruises, but for the skin and blood protection of its disinfecting properties. In one convenient container it combines the functions of a number of preparations.

It is the first of all the First Aid requisites in use in all of the leading athletic clubs.

And there are just as many everyday uses for Absorbine Jr. in the homes of Canada as there are in the training camps. Always "jump to it" in case of emergency. $1.25 at your druggist.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, October 4 (Canadian Press). — The trade in cash grain on the local market was quiet owing to the fact that buyers were not disposed to operate at the high prices asked. Ontario No. 3 extra malting barley in car lots was quoted at 2 1-2 cents per bushel higher at $1.04 and No. 3 grade at $1.03.

Prices for oats were advanced 3 to 6 cents per bushel with No. 2 white quoted at 67 to 68 cents and No. 3 grade at 64 cents per bushel, ex-track for local consumption, and for export account the former grade at 64 cents and the latter at 62 cents per bushel.

No change of any importance was noted in the spring wheat flour situation and prices were firm at the recent advances recorded.

The volume of business was fair. On the other hand prices for winter wheat flour moved up another 15 cents per barrel although the trade was quiet. White corn flour was very firm in a good export trade very firm, and a good export trade continued to be done in the millfeed market with the United States. With an improved demand from country buyers for supplies, the day's turnover was large and prices were well maintained. A much stronger feeling prevailed in rolled oats, and the prices recorded a further advance of 10 cents per bag, a net rise in the two days of 25 to 35 cents per bag.

Prices were firm in baled hay owing to the improved demand for export account of late, there being some fair-sized shipments made to Glasgow.

A more active trade was done for export account in eggs, and the trend was steady. The butter market was quiet. Only a few transactions took place in cheese.

The trade in the old crop beans was fair and prices were unchanged. New crop beans are expected to appear very shortly.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, October 4 (Canadian Press). — Big selling to realise profits overbalanced the grain market yesterday, and brought about a setback after an exciting advance that upset numerous high price records.

On yesterday's pinnacle, wheat to be delivered next May was worth $1.53 7-8 a bushel.

Closing prices for wheat were very unsettled at 1-2 to 11-2 cents net decline December 145 5-8 to 145 3-4 and May 149 7-8 to 150.

Corn finished 1 7-8 to 2 5-8 cents down; oats 1-2 to 1 1-8 cents off; and provisions varying from 22 cents drop to 35 cents gain.

Wild rushes to the buying side of the wheat market took place immediately on the opening of business and appeared to be largely a result of new estimates of the world supply indicating 54,000,000 bushels less wheat available than a month ago. Besides unofficial figures which were current put the total world supply on 1st October at only 3,056,000,000 bushels as against 4,430,000,000 bushels the corresponding day in 1923.

With fresh export buying that ran up to 1,000,000 bushels of wheat yesterday and 500,000 bushels of rye, the market climbed rapidly until wheat showed a 2 5-8 cents and rye exactly 5 cents a bushel advance.

Tumbling of prices ensued when a battle royal in the wheat pit demonstrated that for at least the time being the volume of selling had broadened to an extent which the buying power although of extraordinary force was insufficient to withstand.

Reports telling of enlarged domestic acreage of winter wheat being seeded were current and foreign crop advices were received making the outlook appear somewhat more two-sided than has recently been the case. The undertone at the last was by no means heavy, but on the other hand the price level was about the lowest of the day.

Corn and oats swayed with wheat, corn being also weakened by summer-like weather.

COOLIDGE ATTACKED.

Senator Brookheart Says He Never Left Republican Party.

EMMETSBURG, Iowa, Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press) —Senator Smith W. Brookhart, storm centre in Iowa politics since his election two years ago and who early this week denounced Chas. G. Dawes, Republican vice-presidential candidate formally opened his campaign for re-election here Friday with an address in which he attacked President Coolidge and "machine party leaders". Replying to reports that he would support presidential candidacy of Robert M. Lafollette, he said he never had thought of leaving the Republican party.

Republican party, Senator Brookharty, charged, has strayed from ideas of its founders, while "machine organization" has refused to recognize the will of the people.

Referring particularly to his own differences with leaders of his party Senator Brookhart said that although he had been nominated "by 200,000 Republicans, without machine and without money", and was "opposed by Wall Streets money and by President's power" his nomination had never been recognized by President Coolidge as voice of Republicanism in Iowa.

GAS BOARD QUARRELS.

Sweeping Re-organization of Ontario Natural Gas Concern Demanded.

TORONTO, Oct. 3. — Urging the complete and sweeping reorganization of the Ontario Natural Gas Board appointed by the Drury Government, to adjudicate on all natural gas disputes between consumers, about 50 representatives of the gas-consuming municipalities of western Ontario presented a united front to Premier Ferguson and Hon. Chas. McCrea, Minister of Mines, to-day. The deputation, which was introduced by Frank Wilson, M.L.A. of Windsor, and whose spokesman was Mayor Frank Mitchell of Windsor, charged that "the domineering methods" of C. E. Steele, Port Colborne, who is a representative of the gas-producers on the board, swayed the decision of Wesley Ward, the consumers' representative, and D. O. Ellis, the government representative, to the detriment of the consumers.

1,000 KILLED.

Chang's Air Craft Kept Up Constant Attack Near Shanghai.

LONDON, October 4 (United Press). — Marshal Chang Tso Lin, the Manchurian war lord, has captured Chienping, killing 1,000 Wy Pei Fu forces, and wounding 300, according to the Mukden correspondent of The Daily Mail.

Chang Second and Third took 12 field guns, 70 machine guns, and vast stores of ammunition, the correspondent said.

Near Shanghai Kwan, where Chang's aircraft have kept up a constant attack, a bomb killed a general and many of the staff of the 15th Division.

Discontent is rife in Pekin, and Shanghai Kwan Government employees in the former city having had their pay withheld for three months to meet the military expenses and the soldiers, numbering 140,000 in the latter city, demanding extra pay.

A second Chi Li general is understood to have been shot by his superiors because he was unable to hold a town against the Chang forces.

Daily Mail despatches generally have been favourable to Chang Tso Lin.

Falsely Charged Partner With Piracy Of Schooner Lutzen.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press).—Alex. Adilman, president of the Sunset Wine and Spirit Company, of Montreal, has been sued for $100,000 damages in the Supreme Court here by Meyer Rosenthal, formerly connected with the company, who charges that Adilman and a brother, Norman, falsely charged him with piracy of the schooner Lutzen off the United States coast several months ago; it was learned that the Lutzmen was looted of several thousand cases of liquor and the crew made prisoners.

Information filed in the French court in Brest, France, where Max Jerome Phaff, an American, is under arrest as an alleged rum pirate, mentioned the man named Adilman of New York City, as a man "higher up," who furnished funds in unlimited amounts for smuggling of liquor into the United States from Canada.

KING ADDRESSED WINNIPEG CROWD

Co-operation In Solution Of National, Provincial and Municipal Problems Emphasized.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 4.— (Canadian Press).—Importance of spirit of good will and co-operation in solution of national provincial and municipal problems, was emphasized by the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King Prime Minister of Canada, replying to an address of welcome delivered by the Mayor S. J. Farmer, at a public reception tendered the the Premier here Thursday night.

"There are difficult problems to deal with, but by working in spirit of mutual endeavour, solution will ultimately be found" said the Prime Minister". The spirit of Humility was essential these days, and it should be shared by all. It was certainly shared by all engaged in administration of affairs at Ottawa, and it would be a strange thing if people were to have an arrogant spirt it in dealing with great problems that inevitably follow in wake of war.

BROKE SHOULDER WHILE PLOUGHING

Monthly Meeting Of Omemee Women's Missionary Society.

OMEMEE, Oct. 4.—Mr. D. H. Dick, a middle-aged man whose occupation is farming, and who resides about four miles southeast of Omemee, is suffering from a broken shoulder bone. While ploughing with a walking plow, he struck a large stone, with the result that the plough flew up suddenly, one handle striking his shoulder and causing the painful accident.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was held at the manse on Wednesday afternoon. Only a small representation of members were present. Mrs. M. Kelly conducted the devotional exercises, and having chosen at the previous meeting the word "Peace" for consideration, the Scripture reading and hymns were relative and very appropriate to the subject. The roll call was responded to by all present with a verse or passage from the Bible containing the given word. The President, Mrs. J. A. Black, then took charge of the meeting, and after the Secretary's report was given, much business was discussed. It was decided to hold the annual thank-offering meeting on the 15th of October, and if possible obtain the services of the W. M. S. Presbyterial President, Mrs. Ewart of Cobourg, to speak to the gathering. It was also decided to hold on this date a jubilee celebration, and accordingly a committee was appointed to make out an official report of the society since its inception. The Home Helpers are especially invited to attend this meeting and be the guests of the members. Ways and means of interesting more ladies of the church to become missionary workers were discussed. Mrs. E. H. Mitchell contributed a very interesting chapter from the study book, entitled "The New Era in North Formosa." The meeting closed with the Lord's Prayer in Unison.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

TALK ON PROHIBITION.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Why was Prohibition turned down after trial in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba? Because it was no good. Convictions and bootlegging show far more illicit drinking in Ontario than ever before. Girls and boys are drinking now. That's what you have done, ye Prohibitionists! You are ruining the people. You are making slaves of some, sneaks of others and spyholes and crooks of a lot more. You are making drunkards by the score, and your home-brew and home-made is teaching countless poor women to drink at home. You talk as if Law could make people good. Has it made you good? Did it ever make any one good? Archbishop Matheson of the Church of England in Canada told the Canadian House of Bishops, of which he is primate, that Government control in Manitoba is a success. He comes from there and knows whereof he speaks. All laws are Government control, and why should you jibe and sneer at any one form of Government control more than another? The bootleggers and others as bad or worse are with you. Who would not be against you? How could you be right in such a case as that?

I. H. BURNHAM.

NO WONDER HE FORGOT!

Wife: My dear, you've forgotten that to-day is my birthday.

Husband: Er—listen, love. I know I forgot it, but there isn't a thing about you to remind me that you are a day older than you were a year ago. —Exchange.

EARLY RECORD OF EXHIBITION STARTED 1828

Originators Of Fall Fair In Northumberland Are Forgotten.

FIRST SHOW IN 1829.

Substantial Prizes Given For Much the Same Exhibits As To-day.

COBOURG, Oct. 4.—As this is the season of the year when the fall fair is attracting a very large amount of attention, it is worthy of note that the first Agricultural Society organized in the County of Northumberland, was formed at S. S. Kent's tavern in Cramahe Township, on the 17th of May, 1828. Northumberland County at that period included the Townships of Asphodel, Otonabee, Douro and Dummer, and the electors of these municipalities then voted with Northumberland until 1841. In 1828 the population of Northumberland County is given as 8403 people. By 1841 it had increased nearly three times.

As the names of these early promoters of agriculture deserve to be held in remembrance by the farmers of the present day it would be an appropriate tribute if they were recorded; but the records of that first organization are mostly in oblivion. However a record was kept of the second meeting held at John Grover's inn in Haldimand township, on the 18th of May, 1829. The officers were: President, Benj. Whitney; vice-presidents, Capt. Spilsbury and Charles Powers; treasurer, Joseph A. Keeler, secretary, John Steele; directors, Henry Rutten, Zaccheus Burnham, John Burnham, Arch. McDonald, Jas. G. Bethune, John Fraser, Chas. Rubridge, Benjamin Cummings, James Lyons, M.P., Benjamin Ewing, M.P., Sheldon Hawley, John Grover, John Kelly, Ephraim Doolittle, Ogden Strong, James D. Goslin, David Brodie, Levi James and Isaac Proctor.

The Society held its first show at Colborne on Oct. 19, 1829. At that show prizes were awarded as follows:

Bet stallion, Chas. McKenzie, Haldimand Township; 2 Ira Brown, Cramahe. The prizes were $8 and $4.

Milch cow—1 Boyes M. Eddy, Haldimand, $6; 2 Peter Alger, Cramahe, $4.

Working oxen—1 Elijah Buck, Haldimand Township, $6; 2 Peter Alger, Cramahe township, $4.

Boar—1 I. A. Keele, $4; 2 C. Powers, Haldimand, $2.

Two cheese—1, Palmer Crandall, Cramahe, $2; 2, T. M. Spalden, Haldimand, $1.

Best written essay on the culture of wheat — 1, Joshua Webster, Cramahe Township, $5; 2, Chas. Powers, $3.

There were evidently no different breeds divided into classes and no speeding events, ladies' work, domestic, floral, fine arts, school exhibits and many other things that go to make up the successful Fall Fairs of these later years. Yet in Cramahe Township, close to one hundred years ago, was laid the nucleus of these popular events in community life.

The exhibition was followed by a public dinner, at which thirty gentlemen sat down to a bountiful repast. After the cloth was removed the usual local and patriotic toasts were made. In the speeches reference was made to the success of the first Fair and hope was expressed that the next exhibition might be larger and better.

Next Show at Colborne.

They appointed the village of Colborne as the place of their next show, the same to be held in May, 1830. There are apparently no records to show that this Fair was held.

A cattle show and ploughing match was held at Cobourg on May 18, 1831.

First Crop Competitions.

In 1830 this Society offered premiums for the best crops of grain and potatoes. At a meeting held at Cobourg in January 5, 1831, the judges, Hon. Zaccheus Burnham, Henry Ruttan and John Grover, would not award premiums on wheat and potatoes as the exact crops raised had not been proved. They decided, however, that the best sample of wheat was grown by Peter Alger, of Cramahe. For Indian corn they awarded the first prize to Isaac Waite, second to Truman Hinman, and third to Jonathan Massey, all of Haldimand Township.

CHINA WANTS POWER.

PEKING, Oct. 4.—(Associated Press).—China will make a fight this year to regain her place on the Council of the League of Nations, lost a year ago to Czechoslovakia, according to reports in diplomatic circles. It is argued that, being one of the largest nations and therefore having to pay a liberal proportion of the cost of maintaining the league, China is entitled to representation as one of the non-permanent members, and her delegates have been instructed to prepare her case accordingly.

CHAPTER XXVI (continued)

She shrank back at that, for there, on the poop, sat Asad under his awning, with Marzak, Biskaine, and his other officers in attendance.

"Come," he repeated, "there is naught to fear so that you keep a bold countenance. For the moment it is Sheik Mat—check to the king."

"Naught to fear?" she echoed staring.

"For the moment, naught," he answered firmly. "Against what the future may hold, we must determine. Be sure that fear will not assist our judgment."

She stiffened as if he had charged her unjustly.

"I do not fear," she assured him, and if her face continued white, her eyes grew steady, her voice was resolute.

"Then come," he repeated, and she obeyed him instantly now, as if to prove the absence of all fear.

Side by side they passed up the gangway and mounted the steps of the companion to the poop, their approach watched by the group that was in possession of it with glances at once of astonishment and resentment.

Asad's dark, smoldering eyes were all for the girl. They followed her every movement as she approached, and never for a moment left her to turn upon her companion.

Outwardly she bore herself with a proud dignity and an unfaltering composure under that greedy scrutiny; but inwardly she shrank and writhed in a shame and humiliation that she could hardly define. In some measure Oliver shared her feelings, but blent with anger; and urged by them he so placed himself at last that he stood between her and the Basha's regard to screen her from it as he would have screened her from a lethal weapon. Upon the poop he paused, and salaamed to Asad.

"Permit, exalted lord," said he, "that my wife may occupy the quarters I had prepared for her before I knew that thou wouldst honor this enterprise with thy presence."

Curtly, contemptuously, Asad waved a consenting hand without vouchsafing to reply in words. Sakr-el-Bahr bowed again, stepped forward, and put aside the heavy red curtain upon which the crescent was wrought in green. From within the cabin the golden light of a lamp came out to merge into the blue-grey twilight, and to set a shimmering radiance about the white-robed figure of Rosamund.

Thus for a moment Asad's fierce, devouring eyes observed her, then she passed within. Sakr-el-Bahr followed, and the screening curtain swung back into its place.

The small interior was furnished by a divan spread with silken carpets, a low Moorish table in colored wood mosaics bearing the newly-lighted lamp, and a tiny brazier in which aromatic gums that were burning and spreading a sweetly pungent perfume for the fumigation of all True Believers.

Out of the shadows in the farther corner rose silently Sakr-el-Bahr's two Nubian slaves, Abiad and Zal-Zer, to salaam low before him. But for their turbans and loin-cloths in spotless white their dusky bodies must have remained invisible, shadowy among the shadows.

The captain issued an order briefly, and from a hanging cupboard the slaves took meat and drink and set it upon the low table—a bowl of chicken cooked in rice and olives and prunes, a dish of bread, a melon, and a clay amphora of water. Then at another word from him, each took a naked scimitar and they passed out to place themselves on guard beyond the curtain.

This was not an act in which there was menace or defiance, nor could Asad so interpret it. The acknowledged presence of Sakr-el-Bahr's wife in that poop-house rendered the place the equivalent of his harem, and a man defends his harem as he defends his honor; it is a spot sacred to himself which none may violate, and it is fitting that he take proper precautions against any impious attempt to do so.

Rosamund sank down upon the divan, and sat there with bowed head, her hands folded in her lap. Sakr-el-Bahr stood in silence for a long moment contemplating her.

"Eat," he bade her at last. "You will need strength and courage, and neither is possible to a fasting body."

She shook her head. Despite her long fast, food was repellant. Anxiety was thrusting her heart up into her throat to choke her.

"I cannot eat," she answered him. "To what end? Strength and courage can not avail me now."

"Never believe that," he said. "I have undertaken to deliver you alive from the perils into which I have brought you, and I shall keep my word."

So resolute was his tone that she looked up at him and found his bearing equally resolute and confident.

"Surely," she cried, "all chance of escape is lost to me."

"Never count it lost whilst I am living," he replied.

She considered him a moment, and there was the faintest smile on her lips.

"Do you think that you will live long now?" she asked him.

"Just as long as God pleases," he replied quite coolly. "What is written is written. So that I live long enough to deliver you, then—why, then, faith, I shall have lived long enough."

Her head sank. She clasped and unclasped the hands in her lap. She shivered slightly.

"I think we are both doomed," she said in a dull voice. "For if you die, I have your dagger still, remember. I shall not survive you."

He took a sudden step forward, his eyes gleaming, a faint flush glowing through the tan of his cheeks. Then he checked. Fool How could he so have misread her meaning even for a moment? Were not its exact limits abundantly plain, even without the words which she added a moment later.

"God will forgive me if I am driven to it—if I choose the easier way of honor; for honor, sir," she added clearly for his benefit, "is ever the easier way, believe me."

"I know," he replied contritely. "I would to God I had followed it."

He paused there, as if hoping that his expression of penitence might evoke some answer from her, might spur her to vouchsafe him some word of forgiveness. Seeing that she continued mute and absorbed, he sighed heavily and turned to other matters.

"Here you will find all that you can require," he said. "Should you lack aught you have but to beat your hands together, one or the other of my slaves will come to you. If you address them in French they will understand you. I would I could have brought a woman to minister to you, but that was impossible, as you'll perceive."

He stepped to the entrance.

"You are leaving me?" she questioned him in sudden alarm.

"Naturally. But be sure that I shall be very near at hand. And meanwhile be no less sure that you have no cause for immediate fear. At least, matters are no worse than when you were in the pannier. Indeed, much better, for some measure of ease and comfort is now possible to you. So be of good heart; eat and rest. God guard you! I shall return soon after sunrise."

A BIT AMBIGUOUS.

Little Gustave, out with his mother, meets an old aunt and exclaims: "Oh, what a lot of whiskers you've got!"

Being chided by his mother, and deeming an apology necessary, he added: "But your face looks better with them than it would without."—Strix (Stockholm).

"Best Thing in the World For Delicate Girls"

Mrs. John Bennett, Boggy Creek, Man., writes:

"My little girl had organic nervous trouble, could not sleep, had severe headaches and fainting spells. This went on for three years, and three doctors helped her very little. After reading of what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food had done for others, I got some for her. She is now so well that she is like a different child. She is fourteen years old and looks the picture of health.

"We have used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for different members of the family, when recovering from "flu" and scarlet fever, and it has always helped them."

JOHN JAMES BACON ACQUITTED TO-DAY

Found Not Guilty at Lindsay On Charge of Murdering a Young Baby.

LINDSAY, Ont., Oct. 3.—(Special).—A verdict of "not guilty" was brought in this morning's session of the Supreme Court, and John James Bacon, of Furnace Falls, Haliburton County, was acquitted on the charge of murder. He will be taken immediately to Kingston Penitentiary, where he is serving a ten-year term for incest.

The jury was out about an hour, after Justice Logie had charged strongly against the prisoner in his address to the jury. After the verdict had been announced, Justice Logie said: "The jury has taken the merciful view, and on the same evidence might have found you guilty of murder."

The only witness for the defence was Dr. Young, of Peterboro, who gave evidence relative to congenital conditions, and pointed out that the "blue baby," as the child was termed, could not possibly have lived any time.

THE GROWING GIRL

Requires a Mother's Constant Care and Watchfulness.

In their early teens it is quite common for girls to outgrow their strength, and mothers should carefully watch the health of their daughters at this time, for it is when strength is sapped by too rapid growth that anaemia develops. The first signs may be noticed by peevishness, languor and headaches. The face grows pale, breathlessness and palpitation follow, with low spirits.

At the first symptom of anaemia mothers should act at once. Neglected anaemia often leads to decline, but if you see that your daughter's blood is enriched there need be no cause for anxiety. The finest blood enricher ever discovered is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The pure, red blood created by these pills will quickly build up your girl's health and ensure her a robust Girlhood. Give your daughter a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills now. Make her strong like thousands of girls and women throughout Canada who have been rescued from the clutches of anaemia by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HAPPY THOUGHT RANGES-FURNACES

The Purity Defence League

It is doubtful if some forms of Government control are any better than the old bar system. British Columbia's control system would never do Ontario, but bad as it is, it is considered there to be better than Prohibition, which suppressed what was above ground and only drove it down into the dark caverns of the underworld, and with it many of the youth of both sexes. So long as liquor is made there will be trouble over it. Every day we hear curses of alcohol in all forms, though it is the work of God Himself and considered by the medical profession as indispensable.

What is the matter, then? It's the people that are wrong. Yes, but we know that, and we must do something to save them from themselves. Now we propose to give the Government power to sell. When good liquor is sold at a reasonable price it will not pay the underworld to continue in the business. But there will be no other form of sale as there is in B. C. and no use for the bootlegger. Is that not the ideal plan? The O.T.A. is ideal for the bootlegger and the underworld. It is what he wants. Where there is no private profit, as in Government sale, there is no inducement to push the sale. It guards the weak also from themselves. Goverment control is control by the people. Don't you want control? (Advt.)

MASONIC LODGE HELD RE-UNION

Many of the Visitors Came From a Long Distance—The Toast List.

(By F. H. Dobbin).

Peterborough Masonic Lodge has done itself proud. It has brought together from near and far a very considerable gathering of men, of the town and city in the years that are past and of the days that are with us, all members of the Lodge and the Craft. A real home-coming of those who carried in mind and heart enough of the spirit of patriotism to the ideals of a brotherhood to come and see just how things looked in the place where they first saw the light of Masonry. The event was a huge success, the first of its kind to be put on in the city amongst Masons, a credit to the Order and to all concerned. But mostly to those who, in many cases at considerable personal sacrifice, made the journey to get within the portals of the Mother Lodge.

The earlier trains of the day brought many, and the later trains many more. The important Toronto delegation, all members of the lodge but now incarcerated in that city, reached the scene of interest by the evening local train. A number motored. The Canadian National, at noon and in the afternoon, added a fair quota, so that by nine o'clock of the evening everybody was on hand. Visiting brethren, which means others than Lodge members were in good number. In members and visitors Cobourg sent fourteen, in the tourist-traffic charge of Bro. (Canon) Fred Sawers. Fifty per cent. of Peterborough masons living in that city participated. Those, among others, of the "long-distance" brand, as Central puts it, were Bro. D. Wainwright, of Pheonix Lodge, Bermuda; Bro. Wm. Boulton, of Mt. Harmon lodge, Vancouver; Bro. D. S. Hartman, of Patricia lodge, Sparling, Man. Bro. Walter Stone, a Peterborough member, in exile at Wenster, Mass., drove in his car over 860 miles to get here. He reports no traffic cops you'd notice, poor gasoline part of the way and poorer weather across the Canadian border. But that's what a man gets for leaving home. The lodge register has not been consulted as to others, but there it is all written. It was expected, from the assurances given, that about eighty old-timers would make the passage. Fully that number, or even more turned up and enjoyed themselves.

Work was put on at the Lodge Hall, and the third degree exemplified under the direction of the Master of the current year, Wor. Bro. Ross Dobbin, Wor. Bro. W. S. Campbell, (Toronto), Wor. Bro. Wm. Hill, and Right Wor. Bro. Harry Rush assisting, in addition to the officers of and in the several chairs. The occasion was graced with the presence of the M. W., the Grand Master, Bro. W. J. Drope, now of Grimsby, Ont., a member of the lodge and for several years a resident of this city and instructor in the local Institute. The lodge room was more than filled, in fact crowded, but any inconvenience was overlooked as a part of the occasion. An innovation in the proceedings was that of the Grand Master, instead of being received with due and ample ceremony, as would be so by rule, was taken in and administered to as a general-purpose member of the lodge. Which pleasantry and unusual proceeding seemed to suit the Important One, very well indeed. All members and visitors, everybody in fact, signed the Lodge Register, taking three pages to enroll those present. Future generations, on consulting the pages will surmise that some excitement must have supervened, for the blots were numerous and hand-writings of hasty and weird styles prevailed. Over three hundred struggled for places at the registration desk.

Then everybody hurriedly adjourned to the Oddfellows' Hall, corner of George and Hunter Streets. In the hall, very large and capacious, a neat luncheon was laid out for three hundred capacious men. The official caterer, Bro. Thomas Hooper, per his deputy, Bro. Percy Hooper, attended to the important details, which were well handled. An orchestra of eleven pieces, tutored and tooled by Bros. Hodgson and Miller, made music, while the company cleared the tables of eatables. It was either a late evening or early morning refreshment, just as one looks at time and place. The Grand Master took the chair and dexterously steered things along, he being by privilege and practice an adept.

Telegrams of regret, encouragement, good wishes, remembrances to old members and new friends had been pouring in all day. From those who being far away could not make the grade, Wor. Bro. W. B. Bamford, of old in this city as the right arm of the C.P.R., wired greetings and added that "at six o'clock, Pacific time, he would fill a glass and think of and drink to Peterboro lodge, just about the hour that the interested gathering would be doing the same for others. Bro. W. H. Barry wired from Los Angeles that he hadn't, as yet, found the equal of Peterboro Lodge, and wished to gracious he was with the gathering. Bro. O. B. Shortly, Toronto; Bro. (Rev.) W. L. Armitage, London, Ont.; Wor. Bro. J. Jeffries, Toronto, and many others asked not to be forgotten.

Of course there was a list of toasts provided. Ever an easy thing to do but perplexing to live up to. For several brothers, assumed to be eloquent, proved to be diffident. Which is not a bad attribute, considering that the hour was after High Twelve. The list, as printed below, outlines the rotation, but the daily press can only spare such and such space for comment, which must necessarily be brief.

Toast List.

"The King and the Craft."

"The Grand Master and the Grand Lodge of Canada in the Province of Ontario," proposed by Rt. Wor. Bro. H. R. H. Kenner, D.D. G.M., and responded to by the Grand Master.

Song—"On the Road to Mandalay," by Bro. Walter Evans, Toronto.

"The Home-Coming Brethren," proposed by Bro. W. D. Campbell and responded to by Wor. Bro. W. S. Campbell, Toronto, and Wor. Bro. James Alexander, Uxbridge.

Songs and dialogue, by Bros. R. H. Henry and J. A. Smith, including "My Old Home Town," by Bro. Hendry.

"The Absent Brethren," proposed by Bro. (Rev.) W. Harold Young.

Song—"Oft in the Stilly Night," by Bro. Walter Northrup.

"The Junior Warden's Toast."

National Anthem.

As each speaker rose to address the gathering he took occasion to refer to the success of the members' re-union, praising the proposition and pointing out how successful it had been and so well carried out. Credit was given the committee having charge of details, and especially to Wor. Bro. Ross Dobbin, whose conception the event was, and whose energy and resourcefulness so materially contributed to the success. Careful planning and much attention and confidence that the brethren would respond had been amply verified in every way, and it was fitting that all this should be recognised. To all of which Wor. Bro. Dobbin further on made due acknowledgement.

Rt. Wor. Bro. Kenner, of Corinthian Lodge, who is the District Deputy Grand Master, representing Peterborough District in the Grand Lodge, introduced the toast and sentiment. His address was a conception of the duties and possibilities of Grand Lodge in its several functions, particularly that of charity, interesting to all in its sentimental and practical relation. He praised the virtues of charity as exemplified by the benefactions from Grand Lodge, which assisted the widow of the Mason and eased the declining years of the aged brother, and for a few sentences urged all brothers to be charitable in thoughts and in words and in actions towards our fellowmen. The address was a thoughtful exposition of the theme, and when put forward as Rt. Wor. Bro. Kenner can and may do, interested all who were in the room.

The Grand Master made suitable acknowledgement, referring to his life in this city thirty years ago and the associations surrounding at that time and the impressions he carried away with him. He found improvement in Masonic circles, each time he returned. The older brethren were, like old wine, improving with age. He said he was glad to see clergymen in the lodge, so adding grace and a fine moral tone to the Craft. Reference to his duties as Grand Master disclosed something of the incessant and arduous tasks imposed, having no less than 103,000 brethren in Ontario to look after, and that was no slight responsibility, but such must be assumed by any one who wished to stand in the higher places of the Craft. He discussed for a few minutes the matter touched on by the previous speaker, and said that it was in view to organise and found a benevolent institution under Masonic auspices, in fact two objects a well-equipped hospital and a home for aged Masons who were in difficult circumstances. Such a grace was vitally needed, and he made no breach of confidence when he stated that to-day Masons and widows of members of the Craft were being cared for most thoroughly and feelingly in Roman Catholic institutions, broad and benevolent enough to bestow assistance and care regardless of creed or affiliation.

Then digressing, and so using up all his time, he told of a trip to the Northland, up in and beyond the Clay Belt, and of what he had seen and realised. That there was room for a nation and another province, a land of immense possibilities and resources, largely as yet untapped. There he found Masonry flourishing and making large progress. And he had found there unbounded hospitality, a sterling people, and no unemployment. It was certainly the Land of Promise.

Bro. Walter Evans, who had on occasion delighted the Lodge, before he migrated to Toronto, sang "On the Road to Mandalay," and was cheered for his fine effort. Then the chairman, getting for a moment austere, said that positively there should be no encores, to save time. It will be observed that the chairman spoke thus, after he had said, not all he had to say, but a reasonable portion.

"The Home-coming Brethren" was proposed by the Senior Warden, Bro. W. D. Campbell. He voiced congratulations to the Worshipful Master, Bro. Ross Dobbin, on the happy inspiration that had resulted in bringing together all the brethren there present. One of the many and excellent services he was rendering. As he might follow in the chair and the East next year, he viewed the prospect with a trifle of gloom. Referred to such eminence as many of the brethren of the home-coming brigade had attained in business and in the Craft, and who returned in the spirit of those long absent from a native land coming to meet friends of years ago.

It was fitting that the expert and ever welcome man from Toronto, Wor. Bro. W. S. Campbell, some time Master of Peterborough Lodge, should make response. He said he regretted that in that city (Toronto) he missed the association and genial hilarity and friendly association such as he had enjoyed in Peterborough, and that to some extent that feeling was shared by all Peterborough men living in that city. Possibly further years would wipe away that feeling, at least he hoped it would. He had missed two things since moving away, his church and his lodge. For in these things he did not seem to fit in, living in anothr place, and he missed the social life of the Home Lodge, where a man's face passed through the doors whom he would not recognise. He had urged the many members of the Home Lodge living in Toronto, to come, and had met with good response.

Bro. George B. VanBlaricom also responded to the toast, and the gathering enjoyed his recalling his life in Peterboro, and numerous stories and quips, all in good form and place.

Bros. Robert Hendry and J. A. Smith gave a pleaing musical and verbal interlude, the song, "The Old Home Town," being especially appropriate and well received.

"The Absent Brethern," proposed by Bro. (Rev.) W. Harold Young, was a fitting tribute to the brethren who had crossed the bar. He drew from recollections of men who had been with us in life and who had cheered and afforded many pleasant hours of intercourse. He recalled the leadership of men who had gone both in Masonry and in private and public life. Many had given us ideals, a debt we owe to the Absent Brethren—to follow and build on the foundations they had laid. There was a challenge to us to carry on, remembering that we keep in mind the brethren of years ago.

An appropriate selection was given by Bro. Walter Northrup, "Oft in the Stiily Night," and at the request of the chairman, the gathering sang the chorus of "Boys of the Old Brigade."

Wor. Bro. R. L. Dobbin proposed the toast of the "Visiting Brethren," noting that Peterborough Lodge ever had a large number of visitors who seemed to find the association a pleasant and genial one.

To the sentiment, as put forward, Wor. Bro. W. M. Lang (Corinthian Lodge,) and Wor. Bro. C. B. Adair, (Royal Arthur Lodge), made brief acknowledgments. Wor. Bro. Canon Fred Sawer, of Cobourg, said that he felt very much at home in Peterborough, both in the lodge and the city. He wished to say, and thought he should say it, that looked back upon the wonderful teaching and tuition he had received and gained in the Peterborough schools. He was of the mind that seldom had the province produced instructors for young men and young women the equals of the late Cortez Fessenden, the present Principal Kenner, and the absent John Jeffries, now of Toronto. Most of the good thing in the hands of outlying places were taken, or gravitated, to Toronto. But his grounding and schooling, and the concurrent good times, would ever be to him a green and a pleasant memory. Wor. Bro. James Alexander of Uxbridge, was to have spoken to this toast, but asked to be excused, which was granted.

Bro. (Rev.) J. W. Gordon, (St. Andrews' Church), thanked the Lodge for the opportunity of the members' Re-union, in that he met many men who stood high in the estimation of their fellows. For all through time man had been forced to fight the battle for truth, justice and friendliness, and surely in the Masonic Lodge these principles were inculcated and followed. These gathe erings brought men together to find that all within the wall of the lodge were reasonable, responsible human beings, and the friendship so offered and the good things inculcated presented one of the finest attributes of Freemasonary. It taugh that for men there was no peace and prosperity in moral things except through the one way of doing what was right.

The gathering closed with the Junior Wardens' Toast, Happy to Meet, Sorry to Part and Happy to Meet Again."

Then the hour being at two of the clock, those who had motored to the city, sought their cars and drove off, with all good wishes following. Others repaired to the homes of relatives and friends or to the hotels, all of who receive Masons as well as other travelers. But first, the Grand Master proposed a toast on his own account, and which was disposed of without prolonged response.

FARM LIFE AND ITS PROBLEMS

DEEP PLOWING REPAYS FARMER GREATER YIELD

Turning In Soil In Fall Stores Rain For the Following Season.

PROVIDES FOOD.

Difference Marked Between Well Tilled and Neglected Land.

There is more to plowing than merely turnig the soil. By means of the plow, the grass, weeds and trash are put into the soil where they die and soon give their nutriment to the succeeding crop, and the vegetable matter loosens, mellows and improves the physical nature of the soil. Vegetable matter is what gives "heart" to the soil.

But plowing opens the compacted earth to the rainfall. Water is one of the most important factors of a good harvest. In areas of limited rainfall there often is not enough water that falls during the growing season to develop a crop to its maximum growth. This is true also in regions of much rain. Lack of water in the soil and a small rainfall reduces the crop yields. It has ever been so and will always be so.

Of the two plots one was plowed for corn as ordinarily done in the spring and not enough water has been available to carry the corn through the season. How different with the plot showing stronger growth! This area was plowed last fall, and thus opened up to the fall rains which entered the soil, not running off as was the case with the other plot.

Makes Growth in Dry Spells

This area was plowed a second time this spring, at the same time as the other plot, and thus it took into is bosom additional water that has maintained growth right through the dry period. Western farmers are finding that it pays to list the land that is to be given to corn each fall, and then to plow in the spring. The listing holds the water on the land, which gradually sinking in, becomes a storehouse of water supply the following summer.

Fall plowing in the colder regions, which are so long bound tight by hard freezing is beneficial because it admits the fall rains into this water reservior of the soil. Snow and ice, as they melt, flow off the soil, not into it. Hence water is a problem in the snow and ice sections almost as important as it is in the semi-humid sections of the Great Plains district.

Where soils are reasonably well filled with vegetable matter and precautions are taken to get water into the soil long before a summer crop is planted, the risk of water shortage is reduced and a generous harvest may be expected, thus naturally adding to the yearly income.

PICKING APPLE IS A NEW ART

Joint Between Fruit and the Twig Must Be Properly Broken.

TREAT GENTLY.

If apples are picked too soon they lack color and taste. Some varieties require high color to be marketable. Too early pickings prevents the change from the sour taste of the unripe apple to a sweeter stage of the ripe apples. Size also is sacrificed if too early picking is done. An apple is at its right picking stage when it possesses the characteristic color of its variety and an average size of that variety.

As everyone knows, there is a small joint on the apple stem, and if the apple is properly held in the hand, the taking of the apple from the twig may be easily accomplished. If the apple is grasped and pulled away from the twig, the joint may break correctly, but the chances are the stem will be pulled out of the apple. Hence, this is not the way to pick apples from a tree.

The proper way of picking apples is to place the hand around the apple as if to prevent its falling to the ground; now by a twist of the free fingers or the other hand, sever the stem from the twig by a side pressure at the joint. What to avoid is pressure on the apple. Apples are delicate and often are bruised by even a slight pressure. This is one reason why apples do not keep well when picked by amateurs and others who have not learned the gentle art of picking. The same care in placing them in a receptacle is required to secure uninjured fruit. The old way of dropping into a sack, bucket or basket should be avoided. Apples will keep in winter storage much longer if the simple directions here outlined are followed.

OVERLOADED TREES

Use of masts or wiring is suggested for holding up overloaded fruit limbs, rather than wooden props. The props often gets out of position.

EXPECT FLOUR EXPORTS WILL GROW STEADILY

Canadian Millers Hold Outstanding Position In Competition.

U. S. IS FAILING.

Southern Wheat Is Mediocre In Quality—Big Home Market.

MONTREAL, Oct. 4.—One of the popular topics for discussion in economic journals in the United States at the present time is the future of the United States as an exporter of wheat and wheat products, which means flour, principally. It is admitted across the line that the United States cannot long continue as an exporer of wheat either in its natural state or when converted into flour. The reason is that the consumption of wheat is growing so rapidly in the United States that all the finer wheat produced in that country is required to feed the American people themselves. Only the lower grades of wheat are available for export, and these grades are not entirely desirable in the export market, because they can hardly meet Canadian, Argntina and Australian wheat, on an even footing.

Why Canada Wins Out

This point was brought out in a recent study by a special agent appointed by the United States department of commerce to study the wheat exporting situation. He found that:

"A decided handicap, which the United States faces in its competition for foreign markets, is that the wheat which it exports is, for the most part mediocre in quality. The United States affords a better home market than is enjoyed by the farmers or any other surplus producing country, domestic consumption exceeding exports by about four to one, and consequently our best wheat is kept out of foreign markets. In Canada, Argentina and Australia, the population is small and the crop large, which permits their best and most representative wheats to be exported. In the United States this is no he case. American bankers and housewives are exacting and the mills grind the best of the wheat, paying a premium for the privilege, while foreign buyers must content themselves with what is left. This is the basis for the allegation that American offerings lack quality. The premium our fancy wheat carry in the home market is, of course, a boon to our wheat growers, but it does not strengthen the positon of the United States as an exporter."

He has come definitely to the view that the export siuation lends little encouragement to the United States to enter into large scale production of wheat for export.

This is very interesting for the Canadian farmer and it is equally interesting for the Canadian miller and for the shareholders in the various Canadian milling companies. What applies to the export of wheat applies in large measure to the export of wheat flour. Anything that will tend to increase Canadian wheat exports will react on wheat flour in the same way. Canadian wheat is of a quality to bring the highest price in any market. It is produced at less cost than wheat on American farms. Canadian wheat flour has also definitely established itself in foreign markets as a product worthy of consideration apart from ordinary flours.

MARMORA HARVEST OVER

Good Yields Shown By Threshing Operations—Buckwheat In Barn.

MARMORA, Oct. 4.— With many threshing outfits in daily action, most of the threshing locally has again been accomplished for this year. James Hughes has obtained approximately a thousand bushels of grain from his crops. John Downard from a smaller acreage has done well. Most of the buckwheat has now been taken into the barns. Pumpkins and squashes have assumed goodly proportions.

GRAIN AND PRICES GOOD.

Despite Cold and Rain King's Wharf Farmers Are Cheerful.

KING'S WHARF, Oct. 4.—The continued cold and wet weather has had a dampening effect on the farms. The harvest has been kept constantly delayed but now every one is through although a lot of the grain was not as dry as it should have been and threshers complain the grain is hard to thresh. Prices and grain are good and that is encouraging to the farmers.

The buckwheat in this district is an extra good crop and considerable was sown owing to the lateness of spring. It has filled fine and the rians have been very beneficial to it and an abundant crop is expected.

This years' wheat crop in China is only about 60 per cent normal.

The number of farmers in the United States has decreased by 4 per cent in the last decade.

Avoid Risk In Going Into Half-Filled Silo

Every year many deaths result from carelessness in entering silos partly filled with silage. Unless the dors are left open, and closed only as the cut corn fills up in the silo the carbon dioxide gas that forms is unable to get out and causes death to any one entering This gas is heavier than air and hence does not escape from the silo.

This danger may be avoided by keeping the doors open, only closing them as the silo fills up. In case this is not done any risk may be avoided by lowering a lighted lantern into the silo to the surface of the cut corn. If the lantern goes out, gas is present and entrance must be avoided until the gas is got rid of by opening the doors. If the lantern remains lighted it is safe to go down into the silo.

RUSH OF GRAIN THRO' CANADA

Shipments For September May Total 10,000,000 Bushels.

STEADY INCREASE.

OTTAWA, Oct. 4. — Just now there is a rather heavy movement of American grain through Canada, receipts at the port of Montreal during the first three weeks of September having been about 6,400,000 bushels, and the total for the month was probably in the neighborhood of 10,000,000. As that in the corresponding month last year was only 8,877,000, it is quite plain that, in this respect, Montreal is running well ahead of last year, and with good prospects.

During recent years Montreal has benefited greatly by the passage through it of American grain. During the crop year ending August, 1922, the number of bushels of American grain that went through Canadian ports was 89,573,000, of which Montreal was credited with 81,507,000. This was the high water mark, for during the next crop year the movement was not nearly so well maintained, dropping down to 55,313,000 bushels, of which Montreal got 52,378,000. During the year ending August 31, 1924, there was a further marked drop in the movement, Montreal having handled only 26,296,000 bushels, according to Dominion Government figures.

FROST IN EMILY.

East Emily Vegetables Show Signs of Being Touched.

EAST EMILY, Oct. 4.—The frost of the past week darkened the leaves of the vegetables and corn it seemed to strike the gardens some places worse than others.

The harvest is all in excepting a few fields of buckwheat. The farmers have very little ploughing done the ground being so dry and hard, but the recent rain which we have had will make the land a lot easier to work. The farmers are busy cutting corn and geting it in the silos. They report it an excellent crop and the potatoes are a great yield this year and are selling a dollar a bag.

BIG POULTRY INDUSTRY

Value of the poultry inddstry in the United States last year totaled more than a billion dollars, according o a government report. This is greater than the value of all cattle raised in the same period in the United States.

PURE BREDS GROWING

Washington has one pure bred sire for every 70 cows in the state. Nebraska has one to every 225 cows.

WESTERN TRADE WAITS DISPOSAL OF GRAIN CROP

Retail Sales Not Increased By Good Prospects Alone.

CUTTING IS LATE.

Spending Surplus From the Grain Yield Late in Reaching Retailers.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 4.—Business is dull in Winnipeg and other Western cities just at present. No calculation of the value of this year's crop can hide that fact. Retail stores are not selling much, and at the same time they are buying little. One reason, so far as the retailer is concerned, is by the fact that unseasonable weather, from his stand point, has prevailed for nearly a year.

Another factor is the lateness of the crop this year. Instead of a couple of thousand cars of grain a day passing Winnipeg, the movement has not yet risen above eight hundred cars. The money from this crop is slow in getting into circulation. Then the wheat pool has to be considered. Farmers in the pool are getting immediate payment only on the basis of a dollar a bushel for their wheat, instead of the $1.40 or so that those outside the pool are getting immediately. Whatever spending surplus there is in this years' crop it wil be slow in getting into the hands of the wheat pool farmers. The chances are against them getting another substantial payment until well into the New Year. The fact of that delay in payment will, of course, delay the putting of the money into circulation. Some of it will be carried forward to finance next year's operations, reducing the farmer's dependence upon bank credit. Approximately half the farmers of the West are in the wheat pool.

Another factor in the business situation lies in a changed pyschology of the West. The Western farmer or business man has a different outlook now from what he had a few years ago. He does not undertake expenditures now on the strength of what he expects to have next month or next year. He does not talk or think now of the improvement in conditions that is bound to come soon. He did business so long on the prospect of things improving that prospects do not interest him as much as before. When money starts to circulate, when things are actually better, he will begin to act accordingly. In the meantime he conserves his resources.

There is another change, rather more difficult to describe. The West is getting out of the one crop habit of mind. It does not hang all its hopes and fears on the outcome of one crop or the results of one year so much as formerly. The "long pull," the permanent condition of agriculture in the West is of more concern to the Western business man now than the special results of a single year. The attitude of the West towards Western affairs has changed more than Eastern attitude towards the West, as a couple of ilustrations will show. You can find in current Eastern newspaper more of the eager attitude of expecting immediate results from this year's crop than you will find in current Western newspapers. In Western farm papers you can find an increase in advertising addressed to farmers, but most of the increase comes from Eastern houses. The Western business man seems, to a large extent, to be still withholding his appropriation. From an advertising standpoint the early action is doutless the correct one for quick results. When the westerner does start it will be on a more permanen basis than previously, and without the underlying idea of getting all his results from the returns of a single crop.

A THOUGHT

Learning makes a man fit company for himself.—Johnson.

WHEAT SEEDING IS COMPLETED AT BAILIEBORO

Rains Prepared Ground and Some Fields Are Already Green.

WILL GROW EVENLY.

Buckwheat Was a Good Crop and Helped the Soil.

BAILIEBORO, Oct. 4. — Fall wheat is about completed again for this season, and although the farmers have experienced one of the most backward seasons that has ever been known—still there has been a large acreage of wheat sown this fall. The rains seemed to come at a very opportune time, and this enabled the farmers to prepare their land, and get the seed bed in shape to receive the seed.

The majority of farmers in this district are sowing the wheat commonly known as the "Dawson's Goldenchaff". This varlety seems to be the best wheat for both summer-fallows and poorer land. In most cases it has been proven to be a very hardy wheat, and can endure a great deal of cold, backward weath er during the winter and spring. It does not seem to winter-kill as badly as other wheats, and in a heavy crop it is stiffer strawed and will stand up where other varieties would go down with the winds and rains.

There are many splendid fields of wheat already showing a green shade all over the fields throughout South Monaghan. It is generally thought that the wheat will come up and grow more evenly this fall as there is abundance of moisture in the ground.

Many of the farmers are now busily engaged ganging their stubble ground, and those who were fortunate enough to have had a field or two of buckwheat, are now busy getting it cut down and stocked.

There seems to be a great deal of buckwheat throughout South Monaghan this year, possibly owing to the late spring, and many of the farmers sowed buckwheat on the land that they did not get prepared for spring grains. It is a splendid crop throughout. Some crops will run as high as fifty bushels per acre, while on an average it is thought it will yield all the way from thirty to forty bushels per acre.

During the past three years there has been more buckwheat sown in this district than ever before. It has been found by the farmers to be a very valuable crop, as it not only leaves the land in good lose condition, but the grain is a splendid feed mixed with other grains and grounds into chop. A crop of buckwheat is one of the best crops to exterminate twitch grass, of any crop that the farmer can sow, and nearly always a splendid crop of oats can be grown after a crop of buckwheat has been harvested.

RAIN HALTS WORK.

Cavan Farmers Have Still Some Oats in Stook—Wheat Is In.

CAVAN, Oct. 4.—The heavy rains of the early part of this week put a stop to the corn harvesting and potato raising.

A few fields of oats are seen in stook. R. S. Staples, Ninth Line still has thirty acres of oats out, but he has just finished sowing thirty acres of fall wheat.

The threshing machines are busy. A. Fisher's mill moved back to Cavan Centre on Tuesday and he is threshing for E. Moore.

Farmers are cutting millet, Sudan Grass and other late fodder crops.

CO-OPERATIVES ADVANCE

Average business of co-operatives in United States increased from $100,000 each in 1913 to $215,000 in 1922. There have been marked increases in the busines of cotton and tobacco associations.

Chinaman Was Killed By An Enraged Bull

Believed to have been killed by an enraged bull a week ago, the body of Lee Sing, Chinese employed by George Smits, River Road, Ladner, was found in a ditch on the farm of Harry Mitchell, a neighbor, on Thursday afternoon, terribly mangled and partly decomposed.

The bull, which had apparently been wandering around near the body for a week, rushed at Mitchell when he went to investigate an object he noticed in the ditch as he passed the field and the man had a narrow escape himself. Returning with a shotgun he killed the animal and then found the object to be the body of the Chinaman.

ALBERTA SHIPS GRAIN TO COAST

Ninety Per Cent. Goes To Vancouver—Grading No. 1.

BLIZZARD BREAKS.

CALGARY, Oct. 4.—Wheat that has arrived so far has graded exceptionally high, the greater part being No. 1 Northern. About 90 per cent of it is finding its way to Vancouver. Up to the time of writing approximately 1,000,000 bushels of wheat have ben shipped to the coast port.

For the most part, shipments have been made from the south country, where the crop was much more advanced than in the central portions and in the north.

At the time of writing, however, the weather has suddenly broken, a considerable portion of the provinces being blanketed in a blizzard. This stretched for a considerable way from the north to the central parts of the province and will materially interfere with harvesting operations. The greater proportion of cutting, however, has been done, so that it will only mean a delay in threshing.

BLOOD IS BETTER THAN MERE BEAUTY

Production of Dairy Cow Cannot Be Judged By Appearance.

Production of a dairy cow cannot be judged by its appearance is the evidence from one hundred and twenty-five attempts made at the Cilliwack Fair. Under the auspices of the local Cow-Testing Association five dairy cows of known production were given alphabetical names and placed in line in one of the cattle buildings. Dairymen and others interested were given the opportunity to dispute the statement that the appearance of cows was not a reliable guide to their dairy value. Cards furnished with five spaces to fill in the best cows in order were supplied.

The check-up showed that not one of the 125 entries in the contest had the complete string correct. Twelve had placed the best producer in the last place and the poorest producer was ranked first forty-three times. cow at the top but lost out in the cow at the top but los outt in the ration of the other. L. MacIntyre having the most correctly placed, namely, the first, second and fourth, won second prize.

For the information of those who competed, the official records of the five cows placed them as B.C.A.D.E..

This Farmer Is Wise In His Generation

MARMORA, Oct. 4.—Farmers on the whole are most ready to supply The Examiner reporters with interesting details concerning their crops. An amusing experience, however, befell a reporter here the other day In soliciting news of a certain farmer concerning his harvest store, he detected a diffidence on the part of the other to oblige. After a while the reason was made plain, the farmer remarking, "I don't mind telling you all about it now I know you are not the assessor."

A man went into a jewelry store and handed out the pendulum of a clock which he wished to leave for repairs.

The clockman asked him why he did not bring the whole clock.

"The clock's all right," was the reply. "It's the pendulum that won't go. As soon as I pulled that out the rest went like the very dickens.'

The farming land in United States is about 45 per cent of the total land area.

WORK SLACKENS AFTER HARVEST IS ALL IN BARN

But Farmer Who Learned From His Father Does Not Cease.

DAD WAS WISE.

Cycle Of Life Is Like Circle of Crops—Should Be Improved.

Work has eased up a bit. To have the corn laid by and wheat harvest over is to be reminded that summer is passing. Soon we shall see the golden-rod along the roadsides; that will mean cooler nights, signifying that summer is half gone already—and it came only a few weeks ago, belated at that!

I am spending odd times going along the fence rows, cutting out the big weeds and any sprouts or briers that make so bold as to attempt to gain foothold. The teachings by example of my old father, long gone to his rest, still remain with me, and those fence rows are kept clean.

Father Was Wise

In those days we worked together, father and I; and what splendid days they were! How much I learned of him it would not be possible to say. I am sure much of the knowledge of each of us comes from those with whom we associate. We learn by example, by absorption, by the daily conversation with one another. These old farmers had a wealth of stored knowledge that I fear we of the younger generation have not acquired. It seems to me those day, when we mowed the fence rows are the most vivid of my past recollections.

Our next big job will be to clean out the barnyard and all the sheds and stables. There will be several hundred loads of manure to go on the "orchard field." This will be our important field for corn next year. It is now in pasture and the timothy is thin in spots. All the closer has disappeared. I know what sort of crop it will give. I have seen it in corn eight times and it has never failed us yet.

Spread the Manure

We use a spreader for the manure. This gives even distribution, every part of the ground being covered; so thinly and evenly done as not to harm the grass now growing. The grass will benefit considerably until the early winter makes an end to further growth. But there will remain the fertilizing effects, the elements of the manure, and all of the roots in the soil. It is a combination that makes for corn, especially when two good years of clover have preceded the coming crop.

This manure clean-up is an annual September job. Everything is cleaned, scraped. We will then be ready for wheat threshing. The straw is stacked in the barnyard and around it run the stock during winter, and here, too, is fed the corn stover. By next spring it will all be under foot—back to manure again, that it may be returned to another field to make another crop of corn.

So it goes, the circle all over again. But life in many respects is a circle. We live and we die—as any crops of the farm. Are we growing better crops of corn and wheat and clover? Are we ourselves better farmers than our parents? What do you think?

HIGH PRICE IS TEMPTATION TO EVADE THE POOL

Shipments of Western Grain Are Being Sent Under Wives' Names.

WHEAT POOL WORRIED.

Prizes For Obtaining Members Call Forth Ridicule Of Trade.

CALGARY, Oct. 4. —Alberta wheat pool officials are agitated over the fact that high prices prevailing for wheat is tempting some of its members. Reports are freely heard of grain shipments by farmers under their wives' names in order to evade their pool contract. The pool's statement in a circular to members, that pool members got 5 cents a bushel more than non-pool members for their 1923 crop, is also causing a stir. The feeling is that it was ill-advised as the pool cannot say positively what individual grain firms and elevators paid. Grain men say there were points last season that paid non-pool farmer ten cents a bushel more than the pool paid. Such firms as Alberta-Pacific Grain, it is felt, could show a very much better average price than the pool, and so could other leading grain firms such as James Richardson and Sons, Ltd.

The pool is now offering prizes to members who induce other farmers to join. The grain trade is somewhat amused at this, and points out that if the pool is able to secure better prices for the wheat of its members, is efforts should not require bolstering up.

Whether shipment under wives' names is going on or not, the pool shipments are down, as of the grain now going through Calgary, the pool controls only about ten per cent. The wheat which is now coming in is, for the most part, from Southern Alberta, where there are many farmers who will have nothing to do with the pool, and this perhaps accounts for the small percentage mentioned. It is stated also that the greater majority of the pool members reside in districts where here has been a poor crop this year, so the outlook grain men state, of the pool handling anything like the quantity of wheat it did last season is far from rosy.

OATS OUT AT BETHANY.

Frost Wilted Potatoes and Struck Corn Last Week.

BETHANY, Oct. 4.— A few fields of oats are still out. The heavy frosts of last week has wilted the potatoes and hit the corn. Buckwheat was practically all in previous to the frost. The flowers in the village are badly frosted.

The farmers are busy with their fall work, getting the land ready for next season's crop.

Butter is scarce and retails at 35 cents a pound with eggs plentiful at 37 cents a dozen.

TO FIND WEIGHT OF HAY-STACK

Here's a simple method to estimate the weight of your hay-stack:

Subtract the width of the stack from the distance over the top from side to side, and divide by two to get the average height.

Multiply length, width and average height, and divide by 512 for newly built stacks—up to 6 days—or by 422, for older stacks, to get the number of tons.

LANDIS REGIME IS UNDER FIRE

Dreyfuss and Johnson Seen As Leaders of Forces Against Commissioner.

LANDIS MIND OPEN.

Lou Criger, of Boston Red Sox, Spurned Bait Of $12,000.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press). — Factional strife involving baseball's highest officials may grow out of the O'Connell-Dolan bribery deal that has thrown the diamond world into turmoil.

Although yesterday failed to add fresh sensations to the bribery scandal, or point further suspicion to anyone outside the two Giant players banished from the game, there were strong indications that the governing forces of the game were at the point of sharp conflict.

Culminating factors in this situation Friday were the announcement of Ban Johnson, president of the American League, that he would not attend the series because of the suspicion surrounding the Giants, and a statement by Barney Dreyfuss, Pittsburgh club owner, which was viewed here as a challenge to the decision of Landis which placed the guilt for the bribery scheme upon Dolan and O'Connell alone among the Giant players.

Johnson, who reiterated his contention that the series should have been called off, and Dreyfuss apparently have taken the leadership of forces believed to be antagonistic to the regime of Commissioner Landis. Their statements, following attacks of similar vein Thursday are interpreted as the opening guns of a campaign which may shake baseball's whole governing structure.

Landis, whose retort to Johnson and Dreyfuss was that they "keep their shirts on," refused yesterday to comment upon the statements of either official or upon the announced purpose of the Pittsburgh owner to come here to-day and demand the re-opening of the Giant investigation.

The Commissioner declared he was keeping an "open mind" on the subject of the scandal, but at the same time he indicated that nothing had developed that no fresh evidence had been unearthed to alter the decision he made in New York disbarring O'Connell and Dolan, but exonerating Frisch, Young and Kelly, who were declared by O'Connell to be "in" on the deal.

SCALPERS' HARVEST.

Tickets For Opening Game Sold As High As $75.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press).—World's series tickets in the hands of speculators, who did a thriving business despite a vigorous drive against them by Federal and city authorities, last night were selling at a higher premium than for any baseball championship in years.

Single pasteboards for the opening were reported to be selling in some instances for as high as $50 and $75, while three-game strips brought as high as $150, depending upon their location.

Several arrests were made of ticket scalpers.

"PUSSYFOOT" IN BALKANS.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Oct. 4. —William E. (Pussyfoot) Johnson has arrived here after a visit to Constantinople and Bulgaria. He concluded arrangements with the Moslem prohibition organization to enter the World League, and says the prohibition movement is strong among Turks and Egyptians. Turkey, according to Mr. Johnson, will again introduce prohibition when the State can raise the necessary revenue without liquor taxes. He is of the opinion that Bulgaria will be the first country in Central or Southeastern Europe to enact dry legislation.

DOLAN'S GREED CAUSED BRIBE

Old Coach Unpopular With the Giants—Regarded As McGraw's Spy.

O'CONNELL HIS TOOL.

Cozy Dolan's greed for money is at the bottom of the latest baseball scandal, in the opinion of W. S. Farnsworth, of the New York American, and, barring Jimmy O'Connell, it is doubtful if any other member of the Giants knew anything about the $500 bribe offered Heine Sand.

If players like George Kelly, Ross Young and Frankie Frisch were to do any "fixing" Cozy Dolan would be the last man in the world they would call on for the job. Dolan is known among ball players as "McGraw's Cop," "McGraw's Spy," "McGraw's Yes-Man." He was socially ostracized by every member of the New York club.

If the player stayed out later than the bed hour set by McGraw, Dolan, it was alleged, would be waiting for the player to come in. He would time him, and next morning the Giants' manager would get Dolan's report.

"Squealed" on Players.

A number of years ago McGraw barred poker playing beyond a twenty-five cent limit among the players. Previously the Giants were known as the biggest gambling team in organized baseball. Table stakes was the speed in those days.

Despite McGraw's edict, it was generally known among newspaper men travelling with the team that certain players indulged in games in which the limit far exceeded "two bits." For a time McGraw did not learn of this. One night, on a trip between New York and Chicago, McGraw retired very early. An hour later a table-stake game opened. Among those watching the game was Dolan.

The next morning McGraw was furious. It is said that he had learned of the game and had heavily fined the participants. Dolan was blamed for "squealing," and to this day many of the players refuse to speak to the coach.

Having knowledge of these facts the writer is positive that if other members of the team were going to do any bribing Dolan would not be "in the know."

O'Connell Only "Tool."

It is my belief that Dolan invented the entire plan to bribe Sand, and that Jimmy O'Connell, a high class, innocent boy, was his "tool." Among ball players Dolan is known as a "leach." It has been said that he can spend more time and less money in a varte than the man who invented fish-hooks for pockets.

A little sidelight on the "tightness" of Dolan was told me yesterday by Arthur Robinson, formerly of the New York American Sports Department. Robbie visited Dolan at the latter's home in Oshkosh, Wis., after the world's series of 1922.

"Say, Robbie, how many people will be able to get in the Yankees' new stand," said Dolan asked.

"About 65,000, perhaps a few more," replied Robinson.

Then, according to Robinson, Dolan began figuring how many people would attend the 1923 series in case the Giants and Yankees won, which they did. A few minutes later Dolan had it all figured out just what his share would be if the Giants won; also his share if they lost.

Blinded By Gold.

Although the Giants looked to be a 1 to 100 shot to win the pennant as they went into that game last Saturday with the Phillies, Dolan undoubtedly wanted to cinch it. That $4,000 or $5,000 that would be his from the world's series meant a lot to this hoarder of Uncle Sam's currency.

He knew that unsophisticated Jimmy O'Connell had played in the Pacific Coast League with Sand, and that the two boys were friendly. O'Connell, a kid, did not shun Dolan, as did many of the veterans of the New York club. Then what was more natural than for Dolan to speak to O'Connell about "seeing" Sand, O'Connell fell.

There was some loose talk around Broadway that the Pirates had "chucked" their last series to the Giants, and that the Dodgers had done likewise. Rot! Both the Pirates and Dodgers were contenders almost to the closing day of the season.

Then the talk that the big gamblers again have bribed players crops up. What foolishness! There has been practically no betting on baseball this year.

WALKER SUSPENDED.

Welterweight Champion Disobeyed N.Y. State Athletic Commission.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press).—Carrying out its threat to Mickey Walker, world's welterweight champion, that it would suspend him if he engaged in a match before meeting Dave Shade, coast welterweight, in a title match, the New York State Athletic Commission yesterday placed the barrier against the title-holder, following his meeting with Bobby Barrett at Philadelphia on Wednesday night.

The suspension is indefinite and also includes Barrett, his manager, Jimmy Dougherty, and his entire stable of fighters.

ORIOLES BLANKED.

International "Champs" Are Held To Three Hits By St Paul.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press).—Helpless before the sweeping southpaw curves of Miles Merritt, of St. Paul, the Baltimore international were whitewashed in the second game of the "little world series" here yesterday afternoon by a score of 6 to 0. Only three Orioles hit safely and after the first inning, when an error and a walk put two men on bases with out out, the Birds had no real chance to score. This game makes the series stand one all. RENO TO BE REPRESENTED.

Johnson's Father-in-Law Names Minister to Go to Big Series.

RENO, Nev., Oct. 4.—The city of Reno will have a special representative at the World Series ball games and he is a minister. Mayor Roberts designated the Rev. Brewster Adams, pastor of the First Baptist Church here, as the representative. Mr. Adams left for the East Tuesday.

Walter Johnson, star pitcher for Washington, is a son-in-law of Mayor Roberts, and Johnson spends his winters in Reno. Hence the unusual interest here in the series and in Washington in particular. A crowd of local fans defrayed the expenses of the minister.

DREYFUSS GOES ON WAR PATH

Pittsburgh Nationals' Owner Wants Full Investigation Opened.

BASEBALL SCANDAL.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press.)—Reiterating his previous statement that he believed there were "others in the background" who knew all about baseball's latest scandal, Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburgh Nationals, left for Washington to-day with the expressed intention of suggesting that Commissioner Landis re-open his investigation.

"I am going down to repeat all I said yesterday to which some persons appear to have taken exception, and if anybody wants to start anything with me, I'll be there to give them all the satisfaction they want," said the Pittsburgh magnate. "If this is not cleaned up properly and to the entire satisfaction of the public, by bringing every guilty man to justice—and there must be more than two involved—I'll be in favor of eliminating the world's series for a time at least, as a growing menace to the best interests of the game," said Mr. Dreyfuss.

"Manager McGraw, of the New York club, has been quoted as taking exception to some of my remarks and to have said that I was still sore about the defeat of the Pirates in 1921," he added.

"Mr. McGraw should be the last person ever to refer to 1921. But I am not going to get into arguments with him, he is not in my class."

BILLY EVANS SAYS

Major league magnates like close pennant races.

They make for money.

The two big leagues are experiencing them this year. There is a possibility that both races will go to the final game before the winner is determined.

However, there is another angle that makes such races detrimental rather than helpful to the game.

* * *

In every pennant race where there are two contenders, a certain team and manager usually stand out as being more popular than the rest of the field.

While fandom may be pulling for that particular team to win, it views with suspicion any unusual happening that may enable their favorite team to go over.

This, of course, is unfair to the player, but the ever suspicious look on the happening in that light.

* * *

Working with the leading contenders down the home stretch, I have observed several happenings that might have created gossip had they come up other than they did.

* * *

In the final series between New York and Detroit, the latter team won the first two games of the series on fluke plays. The loss of these two games was a terrific setback to the hopes of the Yankees. Had New York won the games on such plays, the ever suspicious could have pointed the finger of scorn at the happening.

In the first game, Joe Dugan, who seldom makes a bad throw, made a three-base heave on an infield tap by Ty Cobb, permitting the Detroit manager to pull up at third. It came in the ninth inning with the score a tie. Cobb later scored the winning run.

In the second game, Bob Shawkey, usually very reliable, made a wild pitch in the ninth with the bases filled that permitted Manush to cross the plate with the winning run.

* * *

Since the pennant contender was defeated by loose play the incident passes unnoticed.

Had New York won both games in a similar manner, some of the wiseacres would be calling the victories gifts, pure and simple.

* * *

I have brought up the decisive play in these two very important games as a defense of the honesty of the game.

It is possible that Dugan's poor throws on Cobb and Shawkey's wild pitch may cost each member of the Yankees an extra $6,000, the amount pulled down by the world series winners last year.

HASTINGS TEAM WON RIGHT TO GO INTO FINAL

Defeated Brighton In Second Round By Score of 5 To 4

AT CAMPBELLFORD.

Clarke Trophy Is Destination of the Fast Hastings Nine.

BRIGHTON, October 4. — Hastings defeated Brighton 5-4 at Campbellford yesterday and thus won the second series of the Northumberland League. They will now meet Roseneath in the play off for the Clarke Cup.

The game played under unfavorable weather conditions, was a good exhibition of ball, one of the best played in the league this season.

Stevenson pitched a pretty game for the winners and Shannon was not far behind in effectiveness. Both suffered from their team mates' errors at critical moments, and with better support they would have kept the score even smaller.

For five innings both teams were kept off the score sheet. Hastings got men on bases but couldn't score them. Brighton finally broke through in the sixth and tallied, only to have Hastings register one and tie it up. With two out in the seventh McKee walked and scored on Thorne's hit. Hastings then took the lead, scoring With two out in the seventh McKee error and hits by Lambert and Herrington.

Brighton fought back in the 8th, E. Walt getting on by Harrington's error and scoring on Solomon's sacrifice and Scriver's infield tap.

In Hasting's half, two errors by Solomon put Stevenson and Collins on and they scored when Keogan singled to right. That hit won the game. Frise tripled in the ninth and scored on McKee's sacrifice but Thorne flied out and Roblin fanned.

Herrington was the big noise with the stick, getting a double and two singles. Frise had a triple and a single and McKee's triple in the fifth, which was wasted, was the best hit of the game. The other extra base hit was a double by Stevenson.

Keogan made two great catches in right, one an impossible looking drive which started a double play. Brown made a pretty play in the sixth when he threw out Stevenson at the plate. Lambert and P. Lemoire did good work in the outfield, and Frise played a nice game at first. The Scriver both did well behind the bat.

The work of C. Davidson and C. Holmes as umpires, was quite satisfactory.

The gate receipts were not sufficient to defray expenses, the cold weather reducing the attendance almost to the vanishing point.

MAXWELL MAXWELL

Maxwell is One of the Staunchest Cars Built Today

At all vital points, you will find that metals and construction of the good Maxwell are the same as in cars costing three to four times as much.

In proportion to its weight and power, it is actually stronger than the most expensive cars built today.

That's a big thing for us to be able to say about a car of the good Maxwell price; and it is one of the Chrysler superiorities that put Maxwell so far ahead of its own field.

Yet it is only one of the sound, fundamental superiorities which make us proud to be factors in its production. You have probably heard about Maxwell pick-up—how in a flat 8 seconds, it accelerates from 5 to 25 miles an hour.

You are also probably acquainted with the fact that the simple device of a platform spring under the front end of the motor, combined with the balancing of reciprocating parts to the fraction of an ounce, practically eliminates any sense of vibration.

Are you aware, however, that all the way through the Maxwell chassis, you find chrome nickel or other high grade alloy steel for those parts which must stand heavy stress and strain—just as in cars of highest price?

The front axle, and all the parts on which depends the control of the car, are almost unreasonably over-strong.

A bull-dog for powerful pulling—this car; but it can't pull too hard for transmission and rear axle.

The steering knuckles, and the king pins upon which they turn, are of chrome nickel steel, heat-treated.

The thoroughness of good Maxwell strength is well illustrated by the frame, which is unusually deep, and braced by six stout cross members.

Good Maxwell strength, in a word, is a match for Maxwell performance and dependability.

All these are a part of that complete and unusual goodness which scores of thousands of owners declare makes the good Maxwell the most care-free and economical motor car they have ever possessed.

Maxwell dealers are in a position to extend the convenience of time-payments on a plan that is attractive to the buyer.

Eighty tramp steamers have still to arrive in Montreal for October loading, and charters are being reported daily for November.

Additional large quantities of grain will be carried out by the regular liners, so that every indication points to the next two months being the busiest in the history of the port of Montreal.

ROBERT BRUCE MANTELL, in Shakespearean Repertoire, Grand Opera House, To-night.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

ROBERT MANTELL COMING TO CAPITOL ON MONDAY AND TUESDAY.

Will Be Seen as Cardinal Richelieu in Famous Romance of Old France.

One of the most unusual announcements in local theatrical history was made on Thursday when the Capitol advertised the presenting of the famous legitimate actor, Robert B. Mantell, in his first screen production "Under the Red Robe," next Monday and Tuesday.

Following the appearance of this great actor at the Grand Opera House last night and to-night, screen fans anticipate unusual pleasure in a comparison of the work of the eminent actor on the stage with his appearance on the screen.

Mr. Mantell appeared as Cardinal Richelieu at the Grand last night; in "Under the Red Robe" he is seen as the fafous Cardinal whose slightest whim rules France. Mr. Mantell is supported by his wife, Miss Genevieve Hamper, and Alma Rubens on the screen. Many favourite screen players appear with him also.

"Under the Red Robe" is adaptation of the famous old-time romance by Stanley Weyman, and is a story of the blood-curdling days when might, not right, ruled the people of France. The scenes are laid in one of the bloodiest times in all history, and offer plenty of opportunity for thrilling and tense moments. A splendid love theme lends romantic glamour to the story.

A Pathe News, a comedy, and a ten-reel feature make an exceptionally lengthy programme.

ERNEST TORRENCE IN "THE SIDESHOW OF LIFE" AT THE CAPITOL

WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY

Supported by charming Anna Q. Nillson, Ernest Torrence, the rugged scout of "The Covered Waggon," will be seen at the Capitol next Wednesday and Thursday in "The Side Show of Life,' an adaptation of William J. Locke's widely-read novel, "The Mountebank."

This is a glamorous story of a poor actor, who, during the Great War, achieves promotion step by step, and finally finds himself a General at the end of the hostilities. The story takes up his life from then on. This is by no means a war romance.

BLANCHE SWEET IN GREAT PICTURISATION OF "TESS OF THE D'URBERVILLES" AT CAPITOL FRIDAY AND SATURDAY.

Blanche Sweet in Marshall Neilan's production of Thomas Hardy's celebrated story, "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," will be the feature attraction at the Capitol next Friday and Saturday. This is a brand new picturisation of this great drama.

SCHOOL TEACHERS TO ATTEND CAPITOL IN BODY TO SEE "THE SIDE SHOW OF LIFE."

School teachers attending the convention here next Thursday will attend the Capitol Theatre in a body on Thursday evening to see Wiliam J. Locke's story, "The Mountebank" or, as called on the screen, "The Side Show of Life." One hundred and ten loge chairs have been reserved for the party.

Local film fans present last night at the Capitol Theatre had the pleasure of welcoming back to pictures one of screendom's most popular luminaries. After an absence of more than a year William Farnum returned to the world of lights and shadows in "The Man Who Fights Alone," his first starring vehicle under the Paramount banner.

The picture was adapted from the powerful story 'The Miracle of Hate' by William Blacke and James Shelley Hamilton. It is a gripping drama of a strong, virile he-man, a civil engineer who becomes warped in soul and body by a strange combination of circumstances, in which all the people he loves best—his wife, his child and his best friend—seem to become his enemies.

You can't help sympathising with him although you readily see that his suspicions are without foundation and his bitterness of his own making. The terrific struggle between love and hate in his soul finally results in one of the most smashing climaxes ever put on the screen. We would be doing an injustice to those who have not as yet seen the film if we gave even an inkling of the dynamic climax. That one exciting moment alone is worth several times the price of admission.

Watching Farnum in his vivid character portrayal of the hero we could not help feeling thankful that he has come back. The screen can ill afford to lose him. The dramatic intensity with which he plays his part will linger in your memory long after the picture is a thing of the past.

Lois Wilson, lovelier than ever, is featured in the principal feminine role opposite the star. Edward Horton also has a featured role as the "other man." He gives an unusually excellent account of himself. Others in the strong supporting cast include Barlowe Borland, Lionel Belmore, George Irving, Dawn O'Day, Rose Tapley and Frank Farrington.

What more need be said for the direction than that Wallace Worsley who made the "Hunchback of Notre Dame" is responsible for the production.

One of the dandy Harold Lloyd comedies, "Number, Please!" accompanies the week-end programme. This went over big last night with its audience.

As a special added attraction, the Capitol has Mr. Gus Hill, possessor of a pleasing baritone voice, in two illustrated songs. Mr. Hill sang "June Night" and "Doole-doo-doo," both popular numbers, which proved very entertaining and got plenty of applause. Mr. Hill appears again this evening at the Capitol.

POPULAR SONGS AS ADDED ATTRACTION AT THE CAPITOL

As a splendid added attraction the Capitol offers Gus Hill singing two popular song successes: "June Night" and "Doodle-doo-doo." Mr. Hill received big applause at his apeparance on Friday. He wil sing again tonight.

AT THE ROYAL.

SQUIBS COMING AGAIN!

At Royal Thursday, Friday, Saturday, in Her Last and Greatest Adventure of All, "Squibs' Honeymoon."

Picture patrons will never forget Betty Balfour in "Squibs," "Me and My Gal," "Squibs Wins the Calcutta Sweeps." Betty is a born comedienne, and once seen, it is hard to forget her expressive little face and animated gestures. 'Squibs Honeymoon" has that sure touch of humor, sympathy and innocent fun that characterized all the abovementioned productions, and it is the last of a successful series. Her wedding is one of the most beautiful ever screened, but her honeymoon is a scream. It is booked for the Royal Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week.

AT THE ROYAL.

Youth, Pep, Beauty, Jazz, Action, Luxury—A story of Pleasure-Mad Youth, that tries to Answer the Question: "Has the Poorly-Dressed Girl a Chance?"—At the Royal on Monday.

The feature picture at the Royal Theatre on Monday will be the much talked about distinctive picture "The Rejected Woman," bringing together for the first time such popular players as Alma Ruben, Conrad Nagel and Wyndham Standing. The drama itself is bound to be of great appeal, dealing with the problem of beautiful women and beautiful clothes and their relation to each other. Also appearing in the picture are Leonora Hughes, internationally and a group of wealthy New York society men and women. Many of the scenes are actually reproductions of such institutions of Luxury as Sherry's famous restaurant in Park avenue, the Hotel Ambasador and the steamship "Paris."

"The Rejected Woman," written by John Lynch is a story of the gay and brilliant life of a rich New York man and of the realization of the poor girl who loves him that she can never win his love in return without the expensive finery and culture of the women in his set. These things she must have because the love of this man is vital to her very existence. How she goes about the acquisition of the coveted requisites of her love campaign, and the price she pays, form the basis of an absorbing drama SWIFT-MOVING IN IT' ACTION, and illumined by vivid flashes of the inner life of New York's wonderful Park avenue crowd of jazzy youngsters.

To aid Albert Parker, director, in developing this story properly. Distinctive Picture Corporation engaged a splendid cast. Besides the stars and featued players there are Bella Lugosi, known as the Hungarian Barrymore, Antonio D'Algy, brother of Helena, the famous "Follies" beauty, George MacQuarrie, Madame La-Violette, Fred Burton and Aubrey Smith, the celebrated English actor.

As extras for the scenes in Sherry's restaurant and in the Ambassador, Distinctive Pictures Corporation was lucky in obtaining the services of Mrs. Ira Hill, Mrs. George Cissel, Miss Constance Berry, Miss Alice Brady, Miss Kendall Lee, Lee Finney, John Wolfe, a New York architect, and Jimmy Thompson, once engaged to marry the $40,000,000 Rogers heiress, Millicent, who recently eloped with Count Salm von Hoogstraeton.

THE SCENES OF JAZZ

in "The Rejected Woman" gave Miss Rubens, Miss Hughes and the society girls an opportunity to wear wonderful gowns and negligees, especially designed by Adrian, maker of costumes for the Music Box Revue. The sets for the picture were made by Clark Robinson, also the art director for the Music Box Revue and for New York's celebrated Capitol Theatre.

Exterior scenes were taken in the Laurentian Mountains, 80 miles north of Montreal, where Miss Rubens and Mr. Nagel went in the dead of winter for three weeks of strenuous effort.

AT THE GRAND.

"RICHELIEU."

Discriminating play-goers always regard a visit from Robert Mantell as an outstanding feature of the theatrical season, and on this present occasion they have all the more reason for thing so, inasmuch as the famous tragedian is carrying with him even more massive productions than ever, while he is surrounded by a thoroughly well-balanced cast. The theatre of this continent owes much to Mr. Mantell, who more perhaps than any one man has preserved and keeps alive the matchless plays of yesterday.

For his opening vehicle at the Grand last night, Mr. Mantell selected Bulwer Lytton's great historic drama, "Richelieu," a most happy choice. The role of the Cardinal is one of the most remarkable in the history of the stage, and Mr. Mantell's interpretation, ripened and mellowed by many years' experience in the part, will be stamped indelibly upon the memory of those fortunate enough to see it last night. The veteran tragedian is at the height of his genius perhaps in his picture of the Cardinal, who was the real ruler of France. The famous scene when he takes his ward Julie under the protection of Rome to save her from the amorous Louis XIII. was electric in its thrill, and Mr. Mantell's mastery of his profession was exemplified in every line of his performance.

Miss Genieve Hamper, Mr. Mantell's charming and accomplished leading lady, was of great assistance in the success of the presentation. Her personality and her rich voice made the role of Julie De Mortemar one of the high lights of the production.

The supporting company is thoroughly adequate, and if there is any fault-finding to be done it lies in the fact that several members of the cast spoke rather rapidly and none too clearly; not a usual thing with a Mantell production, and a defect the eminent actor-manager can be counted upon to eliminate.

Outstanding was the performance of A. C. Henderson as Joseph, a clever bit of acting indeed. Vaughan Deering interpreted the role of Barabas very convincingly, and Edmund Dalley, John Knight, Miss Theresa Colburn and other members of the company contributed meritorious performances.

The scenic investiture and the costumes were in keeping with the high standard of the production. Mr. Mantell has shown us nothing better in all the years he has been coming to us.

This afternoon "As You Like It" was presented, and to-night a rare treat is promised in the presentation of Shakespeare's thrilling tragedy, "Richard III.," one of Mr. Mantell's most effective parts. The Collen Cibber version of the tragedy will be used, a departure from the play as Shakespeare wrote it, but a very effective production in which Mr. Mantell and his associates can be relied upon to give a striking performance.

IN MEMORIAM.

KITNEY. — In loving memory of my dear mother, Mrs. Kitney, who died on 4th October, 1923.
In heaven there was a vacant seat,
An empty crown was there;
The angels' eyes were turned to earth
In search of one the crown to wear.
They fell on our darling mother,
On one we loved so dear;
They took her to her home above,
And left us lonely here.
—Inserted by Mr. and Mrs. Walsh and Family.

KITNEY. — In loving memory of my dear wife, Eliza Kitney, who died on 4th October, 1923.
Our lips cannot speak how we miss her,
Our hearts cannot tell what to say;
God only knows how we miss her
In a home that is lonesome to-day.
—Husband.

HOUGHTON.—In loving memory of George Houghton, who was killed in action, 4th October, 1916.
Gone, but not forgotten.

FLOOD DROWNS 100 VILLAGES

Peasants In India Driven To Seek Refuge In the Tree Tops.

CROPS RUINED.

ALLAHABAD, India, Oct. 4.—(United Press.) — Floods spreading southward from Northern India have inundated 100 villages. The Jumna river has reached the walls at Delhi and the great Jumba bridge is threatened.

The country between Bare-Eilly and Isanagar on the Rosilkund and Kumaon railway, is entirely submerged.

The entire Delhi area has been covered by the flood waters, extending as far as six miles from the banks of the swollen Jumna and tributary streams.

Crops are ruined and peasants are taking refuge in the tree tops.

Chiropractic
WHAT IS IT?

QUESTION—"What is Chiropractic, and what does the Chiropractor do when he gives an adjustment?"

ANSWER—Chiropractic is a philosophy, science and art of things natural and a system of correcting displaced vertebrae of the spinal column for the restoration of health. The Chiropractor by a thorough examination of the spine determines which vertebrae are in abnormal alignment. Then by means of scientific movements of his hands he adjusts the displaced vertebrae to bring them to normal position. This releases pressure from the spinal nerves and enables them to carry a full quota of functional energy to the tissues and restore them to health.

If you are not in good health, have your spine examined and let us tell you more about Chiropractic.

BRITISH SHIP WITH 5,900 CASES OF LIQUOR SEIZED BY U. S. AGENTS

Trawler Seized 14 Miles Off New Jersey Coast One of Smugglers' Fleet.

AGENTS LURED OWNER

Posed as Rum Runners, Visited Craft and Arranged for Delivery of Cargo.

NEW YORK, October 6. — The British trawler Frederick B., with a large liquor cargo and crew of 20, was brought into this port on Saturday by the Coastguard cutter Manhattan, which captured the trawler under the Anglo-American liquor search treaty.

The trawler is described by the Federal authorities as one of a fleet used by an international ring of American, Canadian, and British bootleggers to smuggle more than $1,000,000 worth of bootleg liquor into the United States.

The trawler was seized fourteen miles off Monmouth Beach, N.J.

Members of the Coastguard who boarded the trawler found her cargo included 5,500 cases of whisky and a large quantity of grain alcohol. The trawler, according to the Federal authorities, arrived off New Jersey last Monday fom Halifax and St. Pierre, Miquelon, where she was loaded with 5,900 cases of whisky and alcohol. Bad weather delayed her seizure.

Seasoned bootleggers and rum-runners were duped by Prohibition agents investigating the international liquor smuggling ring so completely that they unwittingly aided in the seizure of the British ship. For months the Prohibition authorities have been pushing negotiations with the owner of the fleet, including the trawler.

Agents Pose as Bootleggers.

Prohibition Agent Saul Grill, who laid a trap that resulted in the arrest of a large number of persons in the alleged $80,000 New Jersey beer conspiracy, once more assumed the role of a bootlegger. Prohibition Agents W. E. Dunnigan, Norman Nichol, and Arthur Sleator also posed as bootleggers.

From time to time they met the owner of the trawler in New York City. They carried on negotiations at elaborate dinner and theatre parties. The investigators, by the free use of champagne and other liquor, soon established themselves in the mind of the owner of the trawler as prosperous Pennsylvanians. They proposed to buy 25,000 cases of whisky. The price was to be $22.00 a case.

The Frederick B. made a voyage from Halifax to a point off the New Jersey coast about six weeks ago, according to Division Prohibition Chief Romaine Q. Merrick, who directed the investigation. The trawler was engaged in the liquor trade then under the name of the Bernard M.

"We have evidence which proves that the two names were used by the same boat," said Chief Merrick.

The negotiations with the liquor trader had progressed favourably before the trawler arrived the first time. The Prohibition agents, still impersonating bootleggers, entered into negotiations with a rum-runner. He agreed to furnish a motor boat with a speed of 22 knots to bring the liquor ashore.

The bootlegger agreed to navigate the boat himself. Prohibition Agents Nichols and Sleater with two Customs inspectors made the trip to the trawler with the bootlegger. They bought $1,000 worth of liquor and agreed to repeat the trip for additional consignments.

First Effort Fails.

The rum-runner was then directed to head for Long Branch, which he did. The trip required one and a half hours, which made it impossible for the Federal authorities to proceed against the British trawler under the "one hour steaming from shore" provision of the liquor search treaty.

Excuses were made to the owner of the trawler by the Prohibition agents for their inability to purchase additional liquor at that time as they had agreed. They informed him that they encountered some hitch in their plans, and that they would become active in the liquor market when the trawler made the next trip.

The Prohibition authorities were prepared to resume business with the trawler when she arrived off Monmouth Beach last Monday. They had made a deal with another rum-runner, owing a speedboat to smuggle liquor from the trawler.

Nichols and Sleater, with two Customs inspectors and the bootlegger, went out to the trawler on Friday evening. The rum-runner had guaranteed a speed of 30 knots on

FIGHTS SON

Father will oppose son in the campaign for the United States Senate in Minnesota this fall. Merle Birmingham, independent candidate on a beer and wine platform, has found that his most bitter opponent—politically — is his own father, the Rev. Thomas C. Birmingham of Milford, Neb. The Rev. Mr. Birmingham has addressed a letter to the voters of Minnesota asking that they defeat his son.

NEWS OF DEATH WAS SENT TO WRONG MAN

Telegram Brought Son 3,000 Miles—Found Father Well.

SARNIA, Oct. 6. — (Canadian Press). — It was a peculiar thing that Thomas C. Hughes and R. Hughes, both sons of Sarnia folk, should be located at Souris, Manitoba. Thomas C. Hughes was the son of Anthony Hughes, well-known dairy farmer and stock breeder, who died on Wednesday last, and R. Hughes, the son of the Rev. Dr. W. R. Hughes, of Point Edward. On Monday last a telegram of an urgent nature was delivered to R. Hughes, signed "Mother." It should have been delivered to Thomas C., but neither knew that a namesake was living in Souris having parents in Sarnia. R. Hughes immediately packed up and started for home, the telegram telling of the impending death of his father. He had no doubt that the telegram was his, bearing the news of sadness coming to the home away down East. When he arrived home he found his father, Rev. Dr. Hughes, in his usual good health. The telegram was from Mrs. Anthony Hughes to her son Thomas, far in the West. It was a long trip for Mr. Hughes of over 3,000 miles, yet it was the call of filial love that took him full speed from his western home where he is a teacher of science in the Collegiate.

DRIVER PLUNGED CAR THROUGH BRIDGE RAIL

Blinded By Approaching Headlights—Post Pierced His Lung.

CHATHAM, Ont., Oct. 6.—William Simpson, of this city, is in a critical condition as the result of injuries sustained Saturday night when the motor truck which he was driving crashed into a railing on a bridge near Port Alme.

It appears that Simpson was driving to the city along the lake shore road and as he was crossing the bridge over a deep ravine known as the Askew Gully, he was blinded by the headlights of an approaching car. Losing his sense of direction, the truck swerved and sideswiped the railing along one side of the bridge. Six posts were snapped off before the heavy vehicle was brought to a stop.

One of the posts went through the windshield, striking Simpson in the chest. One of his lungs is punctured, several ribs broken and it is feared he has sustained other internal injuries. His recovery is very doubtful.

ROBERT LITTLE AT DAIRY SHOW

Campbellford Man In Tenth Place With Showing Of Ayrshires.

CHICAGO, Ills., Oct. 6.—(Canadian Press). — Ontario Ayrshires won the first prize in the State herd class, Quebec coming second, at the second day's judging in the National Dairy Show at Milwaukee Saturday. Uniformity and quality in the line up did the trick. Cummings Bros., Lancaster, were first on junior yearling heifer, Kemptville Agricultural School eighth, Experimental Farm, Ottawa, ninth, Melvin Bros., Mosse Creek, tenth on heifer calf.

Cummings won seventh on record cow, Robert Little, Campbellford, tenth. Experimental Farms second on produce of cow, Kemptville School eighth, Experimental Farms sixth on exhibitors' herd, second on fine cows. R. R. Ness and Sons won fifth on junior yearling, second on heifer calf, "Miss America," also seventh place in senior record class, third on Primrose first junior class with Burnside Andrietta Blossome, third on get of sire, third on exhibitors' herd, second on young herd, fourth on fine cows. The exhibit as a whole was a splendid one. The Ayrshires were the only breed that had five entries in a State herd, the number required to qualify. Wisconsin, Massachusetts, and Ohio were the other States, and for the Canadian herds to win was a great victory for Canadian Ayrshires.

$1,500 DAMAGES WHEN BARN BURNS

Otonabee Farmer Loses His Barn, Season's Crop and a Number of Pigs.

A fire caused by spontaneous combustion yesterday morning about 10 o'clock, caused damage estimated at about $1,500 to the buildings and crop on J. M. Walsh's farm in Otonabee, about half a mile outside the city limits.

The barn, including the season's crop, and a number of pigs, were a total loss, while the house, which had caught fire from sparks, was saved by the Peterboro Fire Department, who answered a call about 11.30.

When the Peterborough fire fighters arrived at the scene of the fire, the barn was a total wreck, and nothing could be done, but the shingles on the house which were burning, were extinguished before any further damage was done.

Mr. Walsh said that he did not know how many pigs were burned, but that there were quite a number, and that the loss would run between $1,000 and $1,500.

Mr. Walsh had noticed a few days ago that the grain in the barn, which had not yet been threshed, was in a heated condition and had hired a man to come and turn the grain this morning at 6 o'clock, but he left it too long as he was one day late, the fire doing its damage yesterday.

BRITISH CRISIS SEEMS A FARCE

Observers See Parties, Seeking Advantage, Manoeuvring Into Tangle.

TALK UNPOPULAR

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The political comedy, entitled "Imminent General Election," which is being played on the Westminster stage this past week, appears to be approaching a farcical denouement.

The first act began with a scene showing all the wirepullers and gossips of the Opposition parties in the House of Commons gathering together to turn the Labor Government out of office. They were joined by the tub-thumpers of the platform and press, with Lords Beaverbrook and Rothermere making the air hot with sizzling predictions of the immediate doom of Premier Ramsay MacDonald and his colleagues.

Act II. was staged at St. Stephen's, the Houses of Parliament, partly in the debating chamber of the Commons, but chiefly in the smoking room and lobbies, and also in odd corners remote from observation. Conservative and Liberals appeared to be actuated by a common decision to join forces, and that of course, could have only one result.

Mr. Lloyd George did not make many appearances before the footlights, but he was playing an important role in the prompting box. Ramsay MacDonald had only one entrance in this scene, but he then declared that if he were defeated in the House he would appeal to the country.

In the third act, on which the curtain has just fallen, both the Liberals and Conservatives were discovered carefully considering their position. What were they to go to the country on? The question of whether Sir Patrick Hastings, Attorney General, had exceeded his authority by changing his mind in regard to the prosecution of an unknown writer of communistic theories was not one over which the el-

BOY TRAPPED IN TREE BY ELECTRIC CURRENT

Finds Himself Fastened to Limb, But Escapes Unhurt When Power is Shut Off.

MOUNT VERNON, N.Y., Oct. 6. — Trapped in a tree charged with hundreds of volts of electricity on Greendale Avenue in the Green Court development, Valentine Becker, a 12-year-old boy, of 18 Beekman Avenue, was in imminent danger of death for several minutes until the power in the lines was shut off. Then Valentine was able to climb down to the street. He was not hurt, despite the nerve-racking experience.

Valentine had gone seeking horse chestnuts with several companions. He selected a tree and climbed up among the branches; suddenly he found himself "fastened" to the tree. He could move but slightly. His cries attracted people in the vicinity, who saw that the tree was charged, and a hurry call was sent to Police Headquarters. Chief Atwell and Patrolman Gleason hastened to the scene, while Lieutenant Curtis called the Westchester Lighting Company.

In the meantime, however, Roy G. Hyer, superintendent of construction of the company, was apprised of the boy's predicament. He shouted to Valentine to remain quiet and not attempt to pull himself away. Then Mr. Hyer telephoned to the company offices and gave instructions that the power be shut off.

JURORS LOSE JOBS

Crown Will Take Action to Reinstate Them.

MONTREAL, October 6. — Two English-speaking men who served on juries in the Court of King's Bench are now jobless.

One was engaged on the trial of Christopher White, who was found guilty of murdering a night watchman, which trial took over a week, while the other juryman tried three cases, and was absent from his employment most of a week.

It is declared by Crown authorities that the action of employers in filling the men's positions is absolutely illegal, and proceedings will be taken against them to reinstate the men.

WARSAW MAN HURT.

Mr. Harry LaPorte Pinned Under Overturned Car.

WARSAW, Oct. 6.—Mr. Harry LaPorte, of Warsaw, was in an accident yesterday that might have resulted more seriously than it did.

About noon he was driving through Warsaw, and at the bridge near the Presbyterian church the car plunged through the side of the bridge and took a drop of about ten feet, turning completely over.

The steering gear of the car was not working properly, and was the immediate cause of the accident.

Mr. LaPorte was the only occupant of the car, and was thrown from the front seat to the back, where he was pinned so that it was impossible for him to get out without help. His right leg was crushed and his left arm bruised, and he had three severe cuts on his head and face. He, however, is fortunate in having emerged from the accident with no more serious results.

HELD FIELD DAY.

On account of the rain on Saturday afternoon the Y.W.C.A. Field Day was not such a success, in point of numbers, as had been anticipated. However, those who braved the inclement weather had a very good time, and enjoyed the weiners roasted over the small camp fires.

"GOODBY" AND "GOOD LUCK"

President Coolidge regrets losing his assistant secretary of navy. But at the same time he wishes Colonel Theodore Roosevelt the best of luck as he bids him goodby. If Teddy should defeat Al Smith in the New York gubernational elections, the Empire State is safe for "Cal," the politicians figure. And the president seems to feel the same way about it, judging from his smile.

SETTELL PLANNED TO BE AT SEA BEFORE FRAUD WAS DISCOVERED

Did Not Expect Banker's Suspicions Would Be Immediately Aroused—Sorrow for Aged Mother's Sake—Signed the Cheque for $29,925.

HAD PREPARED FLIGHT FOR A YEAR

HAMILTON, Ont., Oct. 6.—How he brooded on the plan which on Friday he put into effect since May, 1923, until it became an obsession with him, how he got passports during 1923, and how he had been working for days upon the 20-page typewritten letter to Sir Adam Beck was told Saturday by Clarence Settell, former Hydro employee, held here without bail charged with obtaining by fraud the sum of $29,925, the proceeds of a cheque which purported to be made out in his favor, and signed on behalf of the Hydro Power Commission of Ontario, by Sir Adam Beck and W. W. Pope.

Settell insisted that the cheque was not a forgery in so far as the two signatures were concerned. He presented the cheque, he said, to Mr. Pope and later to Sir Adam, and, according to his story, they signed the cheque without comment. Settell said further that he had intended to go to Buenos Aires, had his plans not miscarried.

Settell stated that he had planned to be miles out at sea on the way to Buenos Aires before the cashing of the cheque was discovered by the Hydro office at Toronto.

"I had been thinking over the matter for the past year," Settell stated. "Since May, 1923, I had been making my plans, I got my passports made out in 1923 to Buenos Aires, South America, where I have a friend. No one knew of my plans. What I did was done by myself and myself alone.

Says He Got Real Signatures.

"As far as the signatures themselves are concerned the cheque was not a forgery," continued Settell, "I got a blank voucher cheque, made it out on the typewriter myself, and marked it 'Advance for purchase right-of-way'."

Then Settell stated positively that he presented it to Mr. Pope and to Sir Adam Beck to sign. This was a week ago last Thursday, said the accused man, and both officials signed the cheque.

"Didn't they ask you what it was for?" he was asked. "No," he replied. "They didn't say a word."

"I planned to sail at 11 o'clock on Saturday morning from New York for Buenos Aires on the ship 'Voltaire'," stated Settell. "I booked my passage from Toronto by writing a letter, enclosing $50 as a deposit on my ticket. I figured on making a clean getaway. The man who stood in the way of my whole plan was W. Childs, of Hamilton.

Plan Became Obsession.

"But I have nothing against Mr. Childs," insisted Settell. "He was only doing his duty in doing what he did. The only person to blame in the whole thing is myself. I have made a fool of myself in this. The matter has been on my mind for so long that it became an obsession with me, and I was determined to get away. I planned that cashing of the cheque would not be discovered by the Toronto office until Tuesday, when the cheque would be returned through the clearing-house to the bank in Toronto, when it would come to the notice of the Hydro. By that time I would have been on the sea on the way to South America.

Knew Constable Kelly.

"It was the greatest shock of my life when at Niagara Falls I sighted Constable Pat Kelly as I was making my way to buy a ticket to cross the bridge. I have known Kelly for years and there he was only thirty yards ahead of me. I could have run away, perhaps, but what was the use. I never dreamed he was after me until he came up to me and

PLANE CRASHED OFFICER KILLED IN DAYTON RACE

Capt. Skeel, One of the U. S. Army's Best Aviators, Met Instant Death.

CROWD OF 50,000

Plane's Speed 225 Miles an Hour—Wing Torn Off—Impact Terrific.

DAYTON, Ohio., Oct 6.—While diving from a high altitude to attain speed as he approached the start on pylon in the Pulitzer prize race a Wilbur Wright Field Saturday afternoon, Captain Burt E. Skeel, regarded as one of the best pilots in the country, crashed to the earth in view of 50,000 spectators and was instantly killed. The fatality, the first that has marred the Pulitzer trophy conces in five years, was due to the sudden crumpling and falling of one of the wings of his plane when Captain Skeel was about 1,000 feet in the air.

Instantly the plane was seen to head straight for the earth and in a few seconds the other wing and parts of the fuselage were torn asunder, falling like fluttering leaves. The machine, a Curtiss, R-6, landed at the side of a ditch about ten feet from an arterial highway clogged with automobiles with such force that the moist earth, leaves and drift wood were thrown 200 feet into the air as though a volcanic disturbance had propelled it.

Aviators agreed that Captain Skeel was travelling more than 225 miles an hour, with his 520 horse power engine wide open, when the wing fell off. The engine was still running when the plane struck the ground, but the gas tank did not explode.

Captain Skeel's body could not be found in the wreckage, and it is thought it is buried deep in the mud of the ditch on the edge of which the plane landed. When darkness set in army searchlights were brought to Government Sale and Morals.

THE sale of liquor under so-called Government control has proved a failure wherever it has been attempted. Note the following:

PROMOTES DRINKING IN THE HOME.

First—Liquor being sold in sealed packages, drives drinking into the homes. On a British Columbia Government permit a woman in 68 days obtained 13 bottles of Scotch whisky, 70 bottles of rum, 1,960 bottles of beer. On a similar Government permit, a man in 30 days received 169 barrels of beer for his own personal use.

IT INCREASES IMMORALITY.

Second—The sale of liquor by the Government promotes immorality.

	Bawdy Houses.	Men and Women Frequenters
In 1918, in British Columbia, under Prohibition there were	76	118
In 1922, under Government control, there were	197	746
First six months of 1924, under Government control	116	663

IT INCREASES BOOTLEGGING.

Third—Under Government sale bootlegging increases. This is because bootleggers can buy their supplies legally and without fear of detection.

Mr. R. A. Pooley, M.L.A., a prominent lawyer of Victoria, B.C., says: 'In my own riding of Esquimault, 18 bootleggers get their supplies from one brewery and have hundreds of customers."

Robert McPherson, Police Commissioner, Vancouver, says: "I would not advise Ontario to adopt Government control. In Vancouver bootlegging and disorderly houses are flourishing, and some of our raids appear to have been tipped off."

VOTE FOR THE O.T.A.

Government Control In Quebec.

In order that the Citizen sof Peterborough may secure first-hand information on the Liquor Situation in Quebec, which is under Government Control, arrangements have been made for the holding of a PUBLIC MEETING in the GRAND OPERA HOUSE, THURSDAY EVENING, 9TH OCTOBER. This Meeting will be Addressed by Rev. J. J. HART, of Montreal, who will show 75 Lantern Slides, showing the exact conditions that prevail under Government Control. Church Notes.

Baptist Church—Next Sunday, Mr. Telford of Kenmore, will preach both morning and evening.

There were special harvest festival services both morning and evening. Rev. G. C. Clarke, B.A., the Rector, preached two very able sermons on Thanskgiving themes. Special anthems were rendered at both services —the morning anthem, "The Lord is my Shepherd," and the evening one, "Praise the Lord, O My Soul."

The solos in the anthems were taken by Rev. G. C. Clarke, Major J. M. Bygott, and Miss Isabelle Bygott.

The church was filled to its utmost capacity at both services.

The decorations for the occasion were very beautiful and excelled other years.

"IT IS MY DUTY TO TELL THE FACTS"

Says Toronto Man In Telling His Experience With Tanlac.

"After what Tanlac has done for me I consider my duty to tell others of its merits," is the candid statement of Rober Harding, painting contractor, 261 Pacific Avenue, Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

"About a year ago," says Mr. Harding, "stomach trouble and its attendant ills had me worn down almost to the point of desperation. I seldom had any desire to eat and when I did it was generally followed by intense pains in my stomach, extreme dizziness and sensations of nausea. I would often go to work without eating a bite of breakfast. Naturally, I felt tired-out most of the time and was losing weight.

"After taking three bottles of Tanlac my appetite revived, my stomach was freed of all pain and discomfort after eating, the dizziness disappeared, and, in fact, Tanlac toned up and invigorated my whole system. Tanlac will always get a strong recommendation from me."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitutes. Over 40 million bottles sold.

PLANE CRASHED

the spot, while soldiers prodded the ditch and the swampland surrounding it.

Wife Sees Husband's Fatal Fall

The accident cast a damper on the crowd and there was little interest manifested in the race itself All social events on the program for Saturday night were called off by Maj. Gen. Patrick, Chief of the Army Air Service, General Patrick and other officers went immediately to the box occupied by Mrs. Skeel who saw her husband's plane fall. She bore the shock bravely.

The Pulitzer race, the chief event of the international airplane meet, was the last on a programme which had been run off without a single mishap. There were only four contestants this year, they being from the army. The navy, which won the prize last fall, had no entry because of lack of an appropriation.

At intervals of 10 seconds, Lieutenant W. H. Mills in a Verville Sperry racer; Lieutenant Wendell H.Brookley, in a Curtiss R-6 racer, and Lieutenant Rex Stoner, flying a Curtiss PW-8-A took off and sped away to a point ten miles back of the western end of the field, where they climbed into the sky and began the customary dive toward the Pylon to gain the maximum of speed. Captain Skeel was the last to leave the starting line and there was oft repeated comment among the fliers that "there goes the winner!"

The crowd, keyed to a high pitch of enthusiasm over the initial burst of speed, turned their eyes westward and scanned the skies for the appearance of the contestants. The first to be sighted was Lieut. Mills, travelling 215 miles an hour. Then the announcer spoke into the loud speaker which broadcast the details of the race, "Here comes Skeel. Note his speed."

Captain Skeel was a mile and a half from the starting point when a sudden swerve of his plane showed that something was wrong. In an instant the spectators saw a wing buckle, free itself from the fuselage, and glide away. It seemed as if the plane disintegrated under the force of the wind and the stresses that affected all parts of the falling craft. A murmur of horror, heard all over the field, was followed by silence as the plane dropped out of sight behind the trees at the western end of the field. The sight of the leaves, earth and wood hurled into the air, and plainly visible at a mile's distance left no doubt that Skeel had been killed.

BRITISH SHIP

condition that $1,000 be put up to insure him against loss in the event of the capture of his speedboat.

The Prohibition agents not only agreed to put up the $1,000 demanded, but they promised to give the skipper of the speedboat a bonus.

Dry Agents Wade Ashore.

They went alongside the Frederick B., bought 25 cases of liquor and instructed the hired rum-runner to make straight for Long Branch. He made the trip in 42 minutes. The Prohibition agents, in effecting the quickest landing possible, waded ashore at Long Branch. The rum-runner merely supposed they were avoiding piers and other landings where they might be discovered.

While hurrying to a telephone to notify the Coastguard in Manhattan to capture the trawler the agents were arrested by a member of the Coastguard on duty at Long Branch. They had difficulty in convincing him that they were not rum-runners. He became covinced of the truth of their claims only when he checked up the telephone number called by the Prohibition agents and heard their conversation.

The Prohibition agents then returned to the rum-runner and ordered the smuggler to head for the Battery. At first he hesitated. He maintained that he had agreed to smuggle liquor ashore but that he had not contemplated landing it where he was sure of being arrested.

"But we've fixed the Coastguard and the Marine Police," was the reassurance of the Prohibition agents.

The sceptical rum-runner reluctantly steered for Manhattan. All the way up the coast he kept up a rapid-fire interrogation of the fictitious bootleggers who hired his boat. He wanted to know how they managed to "rig the customs men and the police." He admitted that it didn't seem as simple to him as the Prohibition agents explained.

The bootlegger was so nervous as he approached the Battery that he nearly rammed a ferryboat. In a heavy perspiration he steered his boat up to the dock at the Barge Office and fumbled with the hawsers by which he made her fast.

Customs inspectors in uniform, members of the Coastguard who are waging an unremitting blockade against the rum-runners, and other Government officials were on the pier They went about their business hardly giving notice to the unloading of the liquor cargo from the smuggler.

Rum-runner Gets His Bonus.

The Prohibition agents paid the rum-runner his bonus. He put off without interference from any source. The rum-runner, as he headed down the bay, waved his hat at the Prohibition agents, and shouted:

"I've got to hand it to you."

The evidence landed at the Battery furnished the basis for seizure of the British ship. The cutter Manhattan, under command of Captain Oscar Vinge, was ordered to go out and capture the trawler, the third boat seized by the Manhattan within two days.

The Coastguard cutter arrived with her prize in the morning. The master of the trawler was ordered to drop anchor off the Statue of Liberty. A customs guard was placed on the trawler and the office of the United States Attorney was notified.

Major John Holley Clark, Jr., went aboard the liquor ship and questioned the master and other men members of the crew. On returning to Manhattan, Assistant United States Attorney Clark said he had learned that the trawler disposed of 400 cases of whisky.

More Big Seizures Expected.

"I consider this one of the most important seizures since the negotiation of the liquor search treaty," said Major Clark. "It will probably be followed by other large seizures. We have evidence against leading bootleggers in the United States and Canada. There is also a Canadian bank involved in this case. One of the officers of that bank is probably connected with this case.

"The liquor ring deposited funds also in American banks, but we have no evidence that the American banks had any knowledge of the illegal traffic in which their depositors were engaged.

"The offence charged is punishable by two years in prison or a $10,000 fine or both. We are going to ask for the maximum penalty."

The crew of twenty aboard the trawler included two woman cooks. One of them gave her name as Mrs. McLean. She said she was a widow and that her home was in Halifax. She had been cook on the trawler for two years. A younger woman aboard the ship was listed also as cook.

Folowing Assistant United States Attorney Clark's visit to the ship, two of the crew, Harry Klein, 35, and L. Fletcher, 45, both of Newark, N.J., were taken ashore and arraigned before United States Commissioner Boyle on charges of violating the Customs law. They were held in $5,000 bail for a hearing to-day. The other members of the crew will be arraigned to-morrow.

The Frederick B. is a trawler of 196 tons. She is 120 feet long, and usually carries a crew of thirty men.

The Federal authorities have been informed that the trawler is one of four ships operated by the Canadian liquor trader. Concerning the liquor trader, who is now being sought, Division Chief Merrick said:

"Our boys have been in touch with him for six weeks, but he has disappeared. He is supposed to be one of the biggest operators out of Canada."

SHENANDOAH TO SET AIR RECORD

Flight of 7,000 Miles To Pacific Coast and Back Will Be Longest.

TEST OF MOBILITY

LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 4.—The Shenandoah, the naval dirigible, will leave the naval air station at Lakehurst early next week to make the longest flight ever attempted by an airship. The trip will take the dirigible to Fort Worth, Texas; San Diego, Cal., to Camp Lewis, Washington, on the Pacific Coast, and is expected to last seventeen days. Approximately 7,000 miles will be covered. Commander Zachary Lansdowne and a crewd of forty men will handle the great vessel on this journey.

"We have several purposes in mind in making this flight," the pilot said to-night. "First of all, we want the people of the West Conat to see the Shenandoah and, secondly, we intend to demonstrate that a craft of this type is not chained to its hangar; that it can operate at great distances from its home base."

Mooring masts have been erected on the flying field at Fort Worth, at San Diego and at Camp Lewis. Commander Lansdowne pointed out that even while the Shenandoah is swinging at anchor on these masts, it is still in the air, so that the distance it covers on the coast-to-coast flight is not broken by these stops.

The flight probably will start on Tuesday or Wednesday, depending on the time of the arrival of an additional supply of helium which is being sent to Lakehurst from Texas.

Extra Helium Along the Route.

Great care has been taken in making preparations for the success of the flight. Spare parts have been shipped to the mooring points along the route and quantities of helium will be on hand should the ship lose any during its flight. Lieut. C. E. Rosendahl, mooring officer of the dirigible, has been in Texas several days awaiting the arrival of the big airship. He will supervise the mooring at Fort Worth and then will go aboard the Shenandoah.

Naval observatories along the line of flight will be in constant communication with the radio operator on the Shenandoah to give weather reports, so that the dirigible can mount above storms and ride around stiff gales.

SETTELL PLANNED

said: 'Hello, young man. Where are you going?'"

The detective was present during the conversation and here Settell injected with a laugh. "He might have winked his eye and looked the other way. But he didn't."

Settell then told how he had last week written letters to his mother, his wife and his sister in Montreal, and how he had enclosed to each of them $1,500. He stated that he also sent several notes to other people in Toronto.

"I put all these letters in a large envelope and sent them to my sister in Montreal, instructing her to mail them from there," he stated. "Some were registered and others were stamped special delivery. I also sent a 20-page closely typewritten letter to Sir Adam Beck to Montreal to be posted there to Sir Adam.

"I certainly hope he gets the letter," stated Settell.

Settell refused to divulge the contents of the letters. He explained that he had been working on the letter for some time at nights. The other letter he wrote a few days ago. He emphatically denied that he had gambled or speculated in any form.

"I didn't take any money to cover up my losses," he said. He explained that he thought back over the past 10 or 12 years and the things he had done for the Hydro during that time. He thought the amount of the cheque would be a fair reward for those services.

"I have never made a crooked move before in all my life," he said. "If I had wanted to make money I could have made plenty. I have many times been tempted with large sums of money and offered bribes. Not long ago in the King Edward Hotel in Toronto a proposition was put up to me to write an inside story of the Hydro for 150,000 books to be published. I was to get 65 cents for every book that was sold. When the man made me that offer I slapped his face and walked away.

"I have not 'held out' on the police at all," averred Settell. "I have made a clean breast of the whole affair and have told the truth. I'm sorry for my family and my mother. She is 82 years old and I am afraid of the effect the shock of this news will have on her."

Settell concluded he would go to Buenos Aires after it was "all over," as he didn't want to stay around Toronto after what had happened.

On the way from St. Catharines to Hamilton Settell was more like the host of a Hydro party on a trip than a man under arrest facing a grave charge. He told stories and referred in his humorous philosophical vein to his predicament.

Your Sins Will Find You Out.

"It just proves the truth of the old saying," said the former private secretary, "be sure your sins will find you out."

He then said he had a hard bed to lie on. "I found is so last night. That cot in the cell at Niagara Falls was certainly hard."

He recounted the various steps of his getaway which ended in disaster and told of letters that he had sent to various relatives. "I was leaving the country alone. No one was going along with me," he said.

Constable Kelly accompanied Settell on the return trip and attracted almost as much attention from the crowd gathered in front of the police headquarters in Hamilton as did the accused.

Seeing the crowd and newspaper photographers Settell "crashed the gate" into the building. Throwing a coat over his head he rushed into the building through the spectators.

Settell is anxious to get bail and hopes that his old chief and associates at the Hydro will do something for him. He explains that there will be no loss to the Commission or Sir Adam as the money which will be recovered when all the letters come to hand will be more than the total of the cheque. Settell says that he had not only the proceeds of he check but $400 he had saved up in addition.

Something Entirely New!

POTATO OMELET.

Four thin slices of bacon, 2 cups diced boiled potatoes, 1 teaspoon of salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 4 eggs, and 4 tablespoons milk.

Cut the bacon in inch squares and fry in a frying pan until crisp. Pour off all but 1 tablespoon fat. Add potatoes, season with salt and pepper, cover and cook over a low fire until very hot. Beat eggs with milk, season slightly with salt and pepper, and pour over potatoes. The pan should be very hot when the eggs are added. Reduce heat and cook until eggs are set. If the oven is going for toast put the pan on the middle grate to slightly colour the top of the eggs. Fold and serve.

UNHAPPY VETERANS.

The terrible tragedy in Ottawa in which a veteran of the Great War murdered his wife and children and the suicide of another ex-service man indicate that, although many of the men who fought overseas have apparently recovered completely from the effects of their experience, there are others whose cases require sympathetic treatment and attention.

It is not safe to assume that all are doing well.

There are, unfortunately, too many who find it hard to fight the battle of life, who were shaken more than the authorities imagined by the shock and hardships of the war, who are less fit than the pension board's findings pronounced them to be.

They have been discharged with a small pension—sometimes none at all—and have not been able to get into the old swing of things.

The result is sometimes tragic, as the Ottawa case demonstrates.

Organizations having to do with the welfare of returned soldiers should not relax their vigilance.

There may be men in their own particular district who are fighting a desperate battle, who need a helping hand and who might be saved by a little practical sympathy and help.

It is too much to think that every man who went through the blood-bath of Europe came home as fit in every sense as when he left his native land.

FIRE PREVENTION.

This is Fire Prevention Week throughout Canada, and Peterborough is asked through a proclamation of His Worship the Mayor to enter into the spirit of the occasion.

A programme has been outlined by Fire Chief Gimblett, and the citizens generally are urged to co-operate.

There are three trenches of defence in dealing with fire, and they are the first line, not allowing fires to start; the second line, minimizing combustible material and making construction such that if the fire does start it cannot spread; and the third line, extinguishing fires after they have assumed serious proportions.

To rely solely upon the third line is extremely dangerous tactics, yet that is what most cities have been doing, with grievious results.

There is much that can be done by individual citizens in strengthening our first two trenches.

Around most homes, and nearly every place of business, there are conditions conducive to the rapid spread of a fire.

This week should see these conditions remedied.

It should also find citizens resolved that they will be careful in their habits in order to reduce to a minimum the danger of a fire breaking out.

It is a matter of record that the majority of fires are the result of carelessness.

Is it not worth while trying to improve that percentage?

THE PLEBISCITE.

There are two classes of people who have no need to ponder over how they will marke their ballots on October 23rd.

One is composed of people so bitterly opposed to the use of liquor that they would not countenance the sale of it in any form, and the other of those so anxious to secure liquor as a beverage that they do not care anything about any other aspect of the question.

Between these two diametrically opposite groups there is the great mass of citizens who are desirous of voting in the best interests of the Province, and many of whom are unable as yet to decide which policy they should support.

It is this undecided class that will ultimately determine whether Ontario will retain the Ontario Temperance Act or adopt a system of Government control.

Just now there are thousands of voters who are endeavouring to come to a final conclusion as to the respective merits of the two questions.

They realize that under the Ontario Temperance Act certain conditions have arisen—bootlegging, the manufacture of home-brew on a large scale, illicit drinking in motor cars.

On the other hand, they appreciate the fact that the Temperance Act has been a boon to many families.

They see its good points and its defects, and they are striving to decide whether the Government control system proposed as a substitute for the present legislation will eliminate bootlegging and home manufacturing.

The ultra drys and the out-and-out wets are doing most of the talking, but in the final analysis it will be the host of electors between these two classes who will have the last word.

WAR ON BOOKIES.

Two of the city employees alleged to have been involved in the shortage scandal now being investigated are said to have been patrons of local handbooks. A branch bank manager, now awaiting trial on a charge of appropriating bank funds to his own use, was a pawn in the hands of slick gamblers, it is believed. As a result of these disclosures another crusade against handbooking is certain, says the Hamilton Spectator. It is a campaign that will have the wholehearted support of every self-respecting citizen, and yet it is a hopeless task upon which the police will be dispatched. Stores and offices where it is suspected bookmakers have their headquarters will be raided, and if a conviction is secured in every case it will continue to be ridiculously easy for those who feel so inclined to make a wager. It has been said that prohibition of liquor cannot be made effective because Mother Nature has placed alcohol in every blade of grass. And it is undeniable that she has placed the gambling instinct in every human being who walks the earth. The wise curb the instinct, but all are not wise. The axis around which the modern world revolves is the pepogram: "I'll take a chance on anything, once." When the barrooms were in their heyday, before prohibition had been thought of as a national measure, it was illegal to operate a handbook, yet the business has waxed fat and flourished in brazen defiance of the police and the statute books. Police authorities declare that enforcement of prohibition is not so difficult as the enforcement of the law against handbooks. A bottle of whiskey makes a bulky parcel, but fifty betting slips can be carried in the vest pocket and an oral wager occupies no space at all. The police will continue to be impotent mediums in the war against the vice until the general public is educated to the utter futility of ever expecting to get something for nothing. If additional evidence was needed to emphasize the appalling toll the "bookies" take, the cases now before the court have provided it.

WHICH IS BRITAIN'S "THIRD PARTY?"

British politics are simply following the course of nature in rejecting a foreign body. That foreign body is a "third party."

No homogeneous democracy has ever given a permanent place to a third party. Where a number of very different communities are bound together in one national assembly, we have, it is true, a collection of insoluble racial or linguistic "groups." But where the "groups" are largely political in their origin—as they are in France, for instance—they tend irresistibly to fuse into two opposing parties which fight for possession of the powers of government. There may be border "groups" between the two parties that sway this or that, according to the paramount issue of the moment—just as there are happily, independent voters among the people. But the French Chamber today is either Poincarist or Herriot-Briandist.

The only question in Great Britain seems to be the delicate one—Which is the "third party?"'

Outsiders often see most of the game. So that it may not be wholly an impertinence to say that from this distance it looks as if the historic Liberal party were in great danger of being ground between the upper and the nether millstones. Labor stands stoutly for the demand of the less favored sections of the community to be given a larger share of its products, while the Conservative party pursues its ancient and traditional policy of defending the tested and successful institutions of the past until evolution has bettered them.

* * * *

Until Labor became articulate, Liberalism was the official champion of change. It was the political organ through which the "Have Nots" wrenched privileges from the "Haves"—to employ the vivid, if somewhat propagandist, language of its admirers. But the Liberalism of the Palmerston era would look like extreme Toryism today. In fact, no Tory party dare appear half so Tory as "Old Pam." Gladstone, too, was far more Conservative than Baldwin—to say nothing of the young radicals of the present party whose social program would have given even Chamberlain qualms.

The truth is that no party is "against the people." The fundamental difference between Conservatism and Liberalism is one of method in serving the people. The Conservative thinks they need guidance, help, protection and, perhaps, a little chastening. The Liberal trusts them more. But all Liberals think they need leadership—some more than others. And all Conservatives realize that democracy is in the saddle and that "our masters" must be educated.

So much aside. Labor has now come forward to displace Liberalism as the political organ of "the disinherited." The moment Labor became a serious political entity, Liberalism to a great extent lost its mission. No active, aggressive Liberal party—the heir of Cobden, Bright, Gladstone and Chamberlain—can possibly play the part of a moderating or middle party. The work of moderation can only be done by a "group" and not a party in any case. Such a group appeared in the Liberal Unionists. But the hot, fierce clash of systems can only come between the two geat parties.

So if Labor is to persist as a great party, it is difficult to see an important future for Liberalism. So long as Labor can secure the services of men like MacDonald, it is an entirely available alternative to Conservatism. It can be entrusted with the responsibilities of government. It is, in fact, a sort of new Liberal party. Naturally its opponents call it "Socialistic." "Socialist" is an epithet. But where is the party today that is not Socialist in many of its policies?

But the epithet indicates the likely location of the new battle-front. Churchill is trying to arouse the nation against "Socialism." The Liberals who feel that way will rally to him—or his cry—eventually; and the Liberals who inherit from the Left Wing of the old days, will go over to the new Liberal party which calls itself by the more aggressive name of Labor.

It is no wonder that the official Liberal party of today hesitates to sign the warrant for its own execution.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

"Keep the home from burning."

Fire Prevention Week is a challenge to the community to eliminuate fire hazards and to reduce fire losses.

They are already discussing the next mayoralty campaign in Kingston. Another sign that winter is on the wing.

With the fall fairs nearly all over Ontario should be able to count upon some fine weather now.

Just one of the coincidents that cause a smile. A Moderation League poster suggesting "It is time for a change" has as its neighbor an automobile advertisement asking "Why pay more?"

The question, "How will the bootleggers vote?" may perhaps be answered by the statement that most of them are too busy to take the time to register their views.

The theatrical world owes much to such men as Robert Mantell who keep fresh the sterling old classic plays in spite of the fact that a greater pecunial reward could be obtained from more modern but less worthy vehicles.

A verger was showing a visitor round a church. The passage through the woden altar-rail was flanked by two stout posts with particularly large and round wooden knobs on top. Nothing interesting about them. No one would think of photographing one of them. But he would after hearing the verger, "A little while ago, sir," he said, "we had a short-sighted bishop here and he confirmed one of them knobs."

QUEBEC CREAMERY BUTTER

MONTREAL, Oct. 5.—The offerings of creamery butter at the Quebec Agricultural Co-operative Society auction sales last week amounted to 4,600 packages. There was steady demand for No 1 creamery and all the lots offered were sold under the hammer, the final sales being at 35 1-4c per lb, and No. 2 creamery at 34 1-4c per lb but the prices bid for pasteurized creamery were below sellers views.

MONTREAL PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Oct. 5—The export business in grain here on Saturday was quiet, there being few firm bids in the situation for foreign buyers for any lines which exporters attributed to the erratic and excited state of the Winnipeg market. The cash grain trade was featured by the strength that developed for Ontario malting barley and prices scored an advance of 4 cents per bushel with sales of No. 2 extra at $1.08 and No. 3 grade at $1.07 per bushel, ex-track. There was no change in prices for Ontario oats.

Prices on all lines of millfeed were advanced $1.00 per ton. A fair amount of business was done with the United States at this advance. The trade in rolled oats was feature less.

Owing to the continued strong up ward tendency of both cash and future wheat prices in the Winnipeg market, the local flour situation on Saturday displayed further strength. Spring wheat grades registered a further gain of five cents a barrel under a moderate demand. An increase of 10 cents per barrel on winter wheat flour was announced, although the volume of business was small.

Prices on all grades of eggs were well maintained locally and under a good demand from English importers storage extras moved up 1 cent per dozen.

An easier feeling prevailed in the butter and prices closed with a net decline of 1-2c to 3-4c per lb. The local cheese situation was unchanged

Good demand was made for old crop beans and prices quoted steady and were quoted at 2.95 to 3.10 per bushel for one pound pickers. The new crop is not expected till October 30.

CHICAGO LIVESTOCK

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—Sharp upturns in the prices of wheat to-day followed a brief setback during the early dealings. Big export business had a decided tendency to hoist values, and so likewise did snowfalls and rain over the Canadian prairies. Closing quotations here on wheat were strong, 2 1-2 to 3 1-8 cents net higher, December 148 1-4 to 148 3-8 and May 152 7-8 to 153, with corn 7-8 cents to 2 cents up. Oats ranging from 1-4 lower to 1 1-4 cents gain and provisions at 12 off to a rise of 17 cents.

At first the selling movement which forced down the wheat market yesterday was again somewhat in evidence, but was quickly checked when signs began to appear that ex port demand was active. Before the day was ended it was estimated that as much as 2,000,000 bushels of wheat had been purchased for shipment to Europe. Largely as a result the new advances in prices which were witnessed kept their hold well against reactions, and the close was within half cent of the topmost figures attained.

Reports that Japan had bought future deliveries of wheat at Liverpool were current, and were said to explain in some degree why the Liverpool market made little or no response to yesterday's decline in America. The cold wet weather prevailing in the Canadian northwest, delaying the crop movement and damaging the quality of receipts was also associated with the firmness of quotations at Liverpool. Particular interest concerning the Liverpool-Chicago difference amounted to 24 1-2 cents, the widest spread yet this season.

Hogs, receipts 2,000; strong to mostly 10 cents higher; quality consideration; supplies light; top 11.35; bulk desirable 180 to 220 pound weight 11.15 and 11.35; good and choice 250 to 320 pound butchers largely 10.90 and 11.25; bulk packing sows 9.60 and 9.90; estimated holdover 1,500.

Cattle receipts 500; compared week ago, practically all grades fed steers and yearlings 50 cents higher; weighty offerings losing part of sharp early advance; western grassers and stockers and feeders 25 to 40 cents up; extreme top yearlings 12.00; mixed yearlings upward to 11.60; best matured steers 11.25; top weighty range steers 8.25; she stock generally steady, slow; fed heifers scarce 50 cents higher; bulls 25 to 40 lower; vealers 50 to 75 high er; week's bulk prices follow:

Beef steers 8.85 and 11.00; western grass steers 6.50 and 7.35; stockers and feeders 5.50 and 7.00; fat cows 4.00 and 5.75; beef heifers 5.00 and 7.50; canners and cutters 2.75 and 3.25; veal calves 11.50 and 12.50.

Sheep, receipts 500; to-day's receipts practically direct; for week, around 1,750 direct and 375 double deck westerns 50 per cent. being in feeder condition; compared week ago fat lambs generally 50 higher; spots more; fat sheep 25 cents higher; feeding lambs steady; weeks' bulk prices follow:—

Fat range lambs 13.25 to 13.75; top 13.85; natives 12.75 and 13.25; top 13.60; best clipped lambs at 11.25 and 11.50; top fat ewes 7.00; desirable feeding lambs 12.50 and 13.00; top 13.10; full month breeding ewes 6.50 and 8.25; yearling breeders 11.00; feeding ewes 5.00 and 5.75; yearling feeder wethers 9.50 and 10.00.

BRITISH CRISIS

ectorate was likely to get excited, and attempts that had been made, either to suggest that there had been interference with the course of justice or to implicate the Prime Minister, had failed completely if not even ignominiously.

Liberals Get "Cold Feet."

As a consequence, Liberal feet began to notice that a cold draught was blowing, and though it is understood that the Lloyd Georgites were still disposed to support the Tory motion of censure on the Government, Mr. Asquith ruled otherwise, and a Liberal amendment was drawn up, designed to enable the members of that party to vote with the Government against the Unionists, with whom they had semed to be as thick as thieves when the comedy began.

Thus, any serious danger to the Cabinet over the Hastings incident, at next Wednesday's debate in the House appeared to have been obviated, although it had to be borne in mind that an artificial creation of a false situation may influence the final direction of the plot of even a political piece. That will be seen on Wednesday next.

Meanwhile, however, the Tories on their side had been thinking hard, and the outcome of their deliberations is seen to-day. Lord Beaverbrook's big guns and small are now booming and rattling that a general election just now is unthinkable. The revival of trade and industry recently begun would suffer a devastating blow from a third November election in three years. The Government has no right to "hamstring reviving business because their law office has blundered," says The Evening Standard, which suggests that if Ramsay MacDonald should be defeated on Wednesday, and should elect to resign he ought not to go to the country, but leave it to a Conservative Cabinet, supported by the Liberals, to carry on the Government.

Laborites Standing Firm.

The Labor Party, it may be noticed, is in no mood whatever to accept this advice. Rightly or wrongly, Ramsay MacDonald and his chief advisers believe that if they stand firmly, Opposition parties will run away from the prospect of a general election concerning which there is doubt of the country's dislike.

This is the position upon which the curtain will rise next week for the fourth act in the comedy in which, by the way, few people except the politicians themselves had taken any interest for the reason that there has been an air of uncertainty about the whole thing which would dawn on an ordinary theatrical production.

It would, of course, be rash to predict what will happen next Wednesday, for some of the leading characters in this "imminent general election" comedy may find difficulty in eating their previous protestations and the unwanted issue may be forced upon them. That would be— to them—a tragedy. But, in the general opinion of detached observers, the fourth act is more likely to end in a farce.

A THOUGHT.

A SAFE MAN.

There is a type of man who is built for success.

He may have genius or just ordinary talent—no matter. The point is that he always 'arrives.' While others plod a weary way, he goes ahead. Those who take note of his progress often cannot accoun for it. So they say he is 'lucky.' Or they whisper it about that he has a pull with the boss.

"But the secret is deeper than that. He is a man that is thoroughly dependable.

"What is a dependable man You can tell him by these earmarks:

"First, he is one that you can reply upon to do his own thinking Business requires thinking, and one to do it. The dependable man never side-steps his share, nor tries to pass it along to someone else.

"Next, he is one whose judgment you can trust. He doesn't do foolish things. He knows his own abilities; and, not being conceited, he is equally aware of his own weaknesses. He has the happy faculty of understanding other people's viewpoints and of seeking their advice when he ought. Also, he knows when to act on his own initiative.

"Finally, he is a man you can listen to, taking stock in whatever he says. You are sure that he speaks only after due reflection. He does not talk to the galleries or for the purpose of "grinding his own ax."

"Such a man is safe. Important duties may be intrusted to him and he will handle them with diligence, good sense and earnestness.

"Be dependable—a burden lifter. By lightening the anxieties of those who must give account for your doings, you will make yourself their favorite. And they will help you achieve your ambitions."

Health Fables

As most people know, but give little attention, the type of shoes worn and the fit of them are all important factors in the comfort and health of the feet.

Children between the ages of 9 and 14 should be watched closely and care taken in fitting them to shoes. This is the period of greatest growth and the question of foot expansion should not be forgotten.

Around the age of 13 children—girls in particular—are likely to begin to get fussy about styles in shoes and from 14 to 21 is a period when this style idea gets first firmly implanted.

In old age a good shoes fit is even more important. The foot having attained its complete maturity is very sensitive to changes in organic life and the freest foot action should be allowed.

Shoe fitters and shoe salesmen should be acquainted with the structure of the human foot and its various pecularities.

Different ages require different shapes and different occupations change the shoe requirement.

If the child arrives at maturity with sound feet the chance for comfort in later years is good, provided good shoes judgment is used.

SOCIALIST IS NAMED CANON OF WESTMINSTER ABBEY AND ENGLAND'S "DIE-HARDS" GASP

By MILTON BRONNER.

LONDON, Oct. 6—All the die-hards in England—political, social, financial and ecclesiastical—have been jarred to the spine by the news that the King, upon recommendation of Premier MacDonald, has approved the appointment of Socialist Frederic Lewis Donaldson to be Canon of Westminster Abbey.

What the accession of MacDonald to the premiership was, so is the accession of Donaldson to the Canonry. It is nothing less than a sensation.

Donaldson owes his new place directly to his friend, the Premier, who was backed up in it by the almost unanimous demand of the trades unions of the United Kingdom.

As a prominent churchman, Dr. Donaldson stands in a class by himself.

A graduate of Oxford University, his first parishes were in various parts of London where he came into contact with the poor and the humble and became passionately devoted to their cause. But it was when he became Vicar of St. Marks in the great industrial city of Leicester that he made England sit up and take notice. He was one of the founders of the Christian Social Union and of the Church Socialist League.

In 1905 when unemployment was rife all over England, he headed a march of the unemployed of Leicester to London. He took his flock to Lambeth Palace, rang the bell, and invited the archbishop to come out and speak to the men.

When I asked the first Labor Canon of Westminster Abbey for a message, he said:

"All through my life as a clergyman I have affirmed and reaffirmed the indelible union between the deep spiritual truth of the Gospel and the great Labor Movement which agitates the world.

"The latter, when analyzed, expresses the people's passion for a new, a fuller and better human life. It is false to say this means simply the loaves and fishes. It means this, but it also means life intellectual and life spiritual.

"All the great prophets of Labor have made this their cry and it is to this that the people's response has been made. My prayer as Canon of Westminster will be what it was before—that Labor shall use its power for the whole good of all classes, especially of the poorest and weakest. In this way only can the kingdom of God come on earth."

FASHIONS FROM PARIS

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, N.Y., Oct. 6—(United Press)—

Cigarette Hat.

From Paris comes the cigarette hat which has two little side pockets in the crown— one, to hold gold-tipped cigarettes and one to hold a coloded silk handkerchief. These hats are made of colored felt and the cigarettes supplied with them are real. They are ertailing in New Orleans for $12.50 each which is rather cheap for a cigarette-case, hat, and handkercief all combined in one,—to say nothing of the real gold-tipped cigs!

Saint Patrick may have chased all the snakes out of Ireland but he had nothing on the leather goods people who have corraled every lizzard and crocodile in existence and made them up into bonnets and slippers for the Fair sex. It is reported that there aren't enough reptiles left to supply the demand for the milliners alone. At any rate, we have just discovered among the Parisian imports leathers that once were cowhides—dyed to resemble crocodile and lizzard skins. These are made up into sports hats and shoes for the most part although there are belts and handbags which also use these reptile substitutes.

Parisian Fashion Notes.

V-shaped necklines are outnumbering batteau shapes in the Paris Fall fashion collection.

Frocks have long sleeves or none.

Nude hosiery is one the decline and darker shades to match the shoes are more in vogue.

Bronze satin slippers are being stressed for dress wear. They are worn with bronze-toned hosiery.

Skirts remain 12 to 14 inches from the floor. In most cases they are so scant as to make walking in comfort almost impossible. For the American trade, skirts are especially designed in wider widths.

Black velvet hats with high, square crowns and very narrow brims which turn upwards in back are worn by the Parisian who is already wearing her Fall bonnet.

Without Stockings.

At beach resorts, women are appearing without any stocking whatsoever. One sees them in sports attire with sun-browned ankles and even at smart afternoon functions.

Fringed squares resembling Spanish shawls are being used for Beach year over the abbreviated bathing-suit. They are gayly printed silk crepe with brilliant colored fringe carrying out the main color of the printed square.

Blond tulle and chiffon frocks are worn by many of the younger women. hey are particularly lovely on women with blond coloring and very gay wraps are worn over them. Full, fluffy frocks are still in evidence for dance occasions for younger girls and matrons.

Gunmetal pearls of large size, both in chocker and three-quarter length are in great favor with the Parisian women. Chocker necklaces with pendants of small beads are also liked.

As many as 20 bracelets are being worn at a time. Real diamonds are worn with rhinestones imitations so that the real stones add to the brilliancy of the imitation ones. A popular bracelet is of the flexible type with three rows of stones joined together at the clasp. The outer rows are of rhinestones and the middle row is imitation sapphrie.

Colored canes are still popular.

The wearing of real or imitation flowers on the chiffon evening scarf is greatly favored just now. The flower is placed so that it will be on the left shoulder.

"Pass at your own risk" is the warning of a French frock, for it offers the very newest version of the excessively slender silhouette.

THE latest French silhouette is newer rather than new. In other words, it is a fresh development of the tube silhouette reduced to still more narrow and slender lines. It is made as narrow as one can walk in at the bottom and as close as one can sit in at the hip. It is easy through the body, but the armhole is small, the shoulder narrow, which helps keep the line straight. One of its most attractive versions is seen in a tiered and paneled frock of black rep with the new scarf collar and cuff of sea-blue Georgette and with blue buttons holding the panels.

LABOR PARTY IS READY TO FIGHT

Expects Call For Election on Wednesday—Willing To Test Issue.

LONDON, Oct. 6 — (United Press.)—The Labor Party expects a call for a general election immediately after the passage of the bill amending the Irish treaty by establishing an Ulster boundary commission, General Secretary Brockway told the United Press to-day. Passage of the bill is scheduled for Wednesday.

"Labor is ready and willing to go to the people on the Irish treaty," Brockway said. "Premier MacDonald has always worked toward the peace of Europe and a constructive programme for the future Socialistic govenment."

OLD-TIMES.

Old documents, come to light in New Hampshire, show that Judge Jonathan Lawrence 72 years ago paid these prices when he traded at the "general store":

Butter, 20 cents a pound; eggs, 12 cents a dozen; apples, 19 cents a peck; flour, $5.25 a barrel; gloves, 28 cents a pair; flannel, 30 cents a yard; sheeting, 12 cents a yard.

Some of these prices are not as low as you'd expect. Prices reach about the same high peaks every 50 years. Wheat sold for $3.50 a bushel at times after the Napoleonic and American Civil wars.

HIGH CROWNS.

Small hats are severe in outline, have very high crowns, and narrow brims, the large ones are picturesque, but quite unpretentious.

WHEAT MARKET SET BACK BY SELLING

Stiff Resistance To Higher Prices Developed As Reaction.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6— Stonewall resistance against higher prices which developed in the grain markets Friday, achieved at least temporary success. Selling expanded in a manner seldom equalled and forced wheat back to below $1.50 a bushel, May delivery, but only after a new record of $1.53 7-8 had been attained.

Fresh gains of five cents in rye were also virtually nullified and advances in oats and corn were turned into declines.

It was certain that a great part of the selling came from holders who were in a position to collect profits and who preferred to do so at once rather than to risk uncertainties of the future. There were also indications, however, that much of the pressure was due to traders who believed themselves justified in anticipating a reaction from such extraordinary upward swings as the markets have shown of late.

Closing prices which ended the day's wild flurries were in general described as unsettled, with experts divided in opinion regarding whether to look for immediate additional weakness or a display of fresh strength. Wheat finished half to 1 1-2 cents net lower, December $1.45 5-8 to $1.45 3-4 and May $1.49 7-8 to $1.50.

KING ABDICATES CREATES A STIR

Hussein Leaves His Throne When Capital Is Beseiged By Tribesmen.

CAIRO, Egypt, Oct. 4.—(United Press.)—Abdication of Hussein, king of the Hedjaz, created a great stir throughout Moslem circles in the Near East to-day and may result in a serious situation for British influence.

The king's desire to step down, it was said here, was caused by antagonism against him, which spread through Arabia. The antagonism, however, was against the king in person more than his dynasty, and it is possible his eldest son, Ali, may assume the throne.

Ali now is reported en route to England. He is known to favor continuance of his father's pro-British policies. Hussein announced his abdication yesterday after Wahibi tribesmen had been beseiging his capital, Mecca, for several days.

ALTITUDE GIVES FLAVOUR TO TEA.

Orange Pekoe Is Simply Name of the Leaf.

"Let me have a pot of orange pekoe tea."

How often we hear this expression in restaurants and tea rooms. Yet, if you asked, "What is orange pekoe?" the answer would almost invariably be, "I don't know, but it is supposed to be good tea."

Orange jekoe is simply the name of the leaf and the distinguishing mark of the size of the leaf. It is not arbitrarily nor necessarily the best tea by any means. You may have good, bad, or indifferent orange pekoe tea.

Goodness of the leaf is judged by the flavour, which depends upon two things, the elevation at which the plant is grown and the care exercised in the manufacture of the tea.

The higher the elevation of the tea garden the richer the leaf is in essential oil, which constitutes its flavour.

REICHSTAG TO DISSOLVE ?

Political Situation In Germany Continues Chaotic —Lack of Co-operation.

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—(United Press)—There was considerable talk about impending dissolution of the Reichstag in Government quarters again to-day, although some well informed persons believed it was merely a political club to influence negotiations for a continuation in power of the present cabinet.

The general political situation continued chaotic with the government unable to get a clean-cut working majority in favor of its program of complete cooperation with the allies in working out the Dawes program.

ENGLAND WATCHES PASSING AWAY OF VICTORIAN FIGURES

LONDON, Oct. 6.—The death of Lord Knollys, following closely that of the venerable Sir Dighton Probyn, is another reminder that the great Edwardian circle is drawing in. Both Lord Knollys and Sir Dighton spent their long lives in the service of England's royal family.

Lord Knollys, formerly trusted confidant of Queen Victoria, served the late King Edward for more than 40 years as private secretary, a capacity in which he also served King George until the weight of years forced his retirement. His contemporary, Sir Dighton Probyn, for many years comptroller of the household of the late sovereign, in fulfillment of a promise he made to King Edward when the latter was dying, continued on in the same capacity with the widowed Queen Alexandra.

The Queen Mother, now going on 80 years, and herself in feeble health, is bowed with grief at the loss within a short space of time of two trusted friends. Queen Alexandra is in the seclusion of Sandringham, and so great are her infirmities that her friends conclude she will not again appear in public.

The servant of three sovereigns, of two of them in a very confidential capacity, the recipient of many royal confidences, the possessor of many court secrets, Lord Knollys had a diversified character and a wide knowledge of the world and its ways. He knew King Edward in all his moods and was that sovereign's trusted companion when he was Prince of Wales.

No offer could ever tempt Lord Knollys to divulge any of the material in his possession concerning what went on in inner court circles, with the life of which he had intimate knowledge. An American publisher is said to have sent him a blank check so that he could fix his own price for a book of court reminiscences. The check was torn up and thrown into the waste paper basket.

In the good old days when King Edward as Prince of Wales was doing what he could to dispel the gloom which enshrouded the mid-Victorian court, Lord Knollys was often the butt of the practical jokes which the heir to the throne and his set dearly enjoyed.

On one occasion Lord Knollys had the laugh on his side at the expense of one of the practical jokers of the royal set. "Bay" Middleton, the famous sportsman, had a penchant for catching a friend by the coat-tails and ripping the garment to the neck.

Lord Knollys one evening offered a particularly tempting chance to Capt. Middleton, which was at once seized upon, to the great amusement of the Prince of Wales, who, however, was surprised to observe Lord Knolly's unconcern. On inquiring why his secretary did not seem to mind the ruin of a perfectly good coat, the Prince of Wales was informed by Lord Knollys that, suspecting Capt. Middleton's intentions, he had taken the precaution of borrowing one of the captain's coats for the evening.

Outside on the poop-deck he found Asad alone now with Marzak under the awning. Night had fallen, the great crescent lanterns on the stern-rail were alight and cast a lurid glow along the vessel's length, picking out the shadowy forms and gleaming faintly on the naked backs of the slaves in their serried ranks along the benches, many of them bowed already in attitudes of uneasy slumber. Another lantern swung from the mainmast, and yet another from the poop-rail for the Basha's convenience. Overhead, the clustering stars glittered in a cloudless sky of deepest purple. The wind had fallen entirely, and the world was wrapped in stillness, broken only by the faint rustling break of waves upon the beach at the cove's end.

Sakr-el-Bahr crossed to Asad's side, and begged for a word alone with him.

"I am alone," said the Basha curtly.

"Marzak is nothing then," said Sakr-el-Bahr. "I have long suspected it."

Marzak showed his teeth and growled inarticulately, whilst the Basha, taken aback by the ease reflected in the captain's careless, mocking words, could but quote a line of the Koran with which Fenzileh of late had often nauseated him.

"A man's son is the partner of his soul. I have no secrets from Marzak. Speak, then, before him, or else be silent and depart."

"He may be the partner of thy soul, Asad," replied the corsair with his bold mockery, "but I give thanks to Allah he is not the partner of mine. And what I have to say in some sense concerns my soul."

"I thank thee," cut in Marzak, "for the justice of thy words. To be the partner of thy soul were to be an infidel unbelieving dog."

"Thy tongue, O Marzak, is like thine archery," said Sakr-el-Bahr.

"Aye—in that it pierces treachery," was the swift retort.

"Nay—in that it aims at what it can not hit. Now, Allah, pardon me Shall I grow angry at such words as thine? Hath not the One proven full oft that he who calls me infidel dog is a liar predestined to the Pit? Are such victories as mine over the fleets of the unbelievers vouchsafed by Allah to an infidel? Foolish blasphemer, teach thy tongue better ways lest the All-wise strike thee dumb."

"Peace!" growled Asad. "Thine arrogance is out of season."

"Happy so," said Sakr-el-Bahr, with a laugh. "And my good sense, too, it seems. Since thou wilt retain beside thee this partner of thy soul, I must speak before him. Have I thy leave to sit?"

Lest such leave should be denied him, he dropped forthwith to the vacant place beside Asad and tucked his legs under him.

"Lord," he said, "there is a rift dividing us who should be united for the glory of Islam."

"It is of thy making, Sakr-el-Bahr," was the sullen answer, "and it is for thee to mend it."

"To that end do I desire thine ear. The cause of this rift is yonder."

And he jerked his thumb backward over his shoulder toward the poop-house.

"If we remove that cause, of a surety the rift itself will vanish, and all will be well again between us."

He knew that never could all be well again between him and Asad. He knew that, by virtue of his act of defiance, he was irrevocably doomed; that Asad, having feared him once, having dreaded his power to stand successfully against his face and overbear his will, would see to it that he never dreaded again. He knew that if he returned to Algiers there would be a speedy end to him. His only chance of safety lay, indeed, in stirring up mutiny upon the spot and striking swiftly, venturing all upon that desperate throw. And he knew that this was precisely what Asad had cause to fear. Out of this assurance had he conceived his present plan, deeming that if he offered to heal the breach, Asad might pretend to consent so as to weather his present danger, making doubly sure of his vengeance by waiting until they should be home again.

Asad's gleaming eyes considered him in silence for a moment.

"How remove that cause?" he asked. "Wilt thou atone for the mockery of thy marriage, pronounce her divorced and relinquish her?"

"That were not to remove her," replied Sakr-el-Bahr. "Consider well, Asad, what is thy duty to the Faith. Consider that upon our unity depends the glory of Islam. Were it not sinful, then, to suffer the intrusion of aught that may mar such unity? Nay, nay; what I propose is that I should be permitted—assisted even—to bear out the project I had formed, as already I have frankly made confession. Let us put to sea again at dawn—or this very night, if thou wilt—make for the coast of France, and there set her ashore that she may go back to her own people and we be rid of her disturbing presence. Then we will return—there is time and to spare—and here or elsewhere lurk in wait for this Spanish argosy, seize the booty and sail home in amity to Algiers leaving this incident, this little cloud in the splendor of our comradeship, behind us and forgotten as if it had never been. Wilt thou, Asad—for the glory of the Prophet's Law?"

The bait was cunningly presented, so cunningly that not for a moment did Asad, or even the malicious Marzak, suspect it to be just a bait and no more. It was his own life, become a menace to Asad, that Sakr-el-Bahr was offering him in exchange for the life and liberty of that Frankish slave-girl, but offering it as if unconscious that he did so.

Asad considered, temptation gripping him. Prudence urged him to accept, so that affecting to heal the dangerous breach that now existed he might carry Sakr-el-Bahr back to Algiers, there, beyond the aid of any friendly mutineers, to have him strangled. It was the course to adopt in such a situation, the wise and sober course by which to ensure the overthrow of one who, from an obedient and submissive lieutenant, had suddenly shown that it was possible for him to become a serious and dangerous rival.

Sakr-el-Bahr watched the Basha's averted gleaming eyes under their furrowed, thoughtful brows, he saw Marzak's face, white, tense and eager in his anxiety that his father should consent. And since his father continued silent, Marzak, unable longer to contain himself, broke into speech.

"He is wise, O my father" was his crafty appeal. "The glory of Islam is above all else Let him have his way in this, and let the infidel woman go. Thus shall all be well between us and Sakr-el-Bahr"

He laid such stress upon these words that it was obvious he desired them to convey a second meaning.

Asad heard and understood that Marzak, too, perceived what was here to do; tighter upon him became temptation's grip; but tighter, too, became the grip of a temptation of another sort. Before his fierce eyes there arose a vision of a tall, stately maiden with softly rounded bosom, a vision so white and lovely that it enslaved him. And so he found himself torn two ways at once. On the one hand, if he relinquished the woman he could make sure of his vengeance upon Sakr-el-Bahr, could make sure of removing that rebel from his path. On the other hand, if he determined to hold fast to his desires and to be ruled by them, he must be prepared to risk a mutiny aboard the galeasse, prepared for battle and perhaps for defeat. It was a stake such as no sane Basha would have consented to set upon the board. But since his eyes had again rested upon Rosamund, Asad was no longer sane. His thwarted desires of yesterday were the despots of his wits.

He leaned forward now, looking deep into the eyes of Sakr-el-Bahr.

"Since for thyself thou dost not want her, why dost thou thwart me?" he asked, and his voice trembled with suppressed passion. "So long as I deemed thee honest in taking her to wife I respected that bond as became a good Moslem; but since 'tis manifest that it was no more than a pretence, a mockery to serve some purpose hostile to myself, a desecration of the Prophet's Holy Law, I, before whom this blasphemous marriage was performed, do pronounce it to be no marriage. There is no need for thee to divorce her. She is no longer thine. She is for any Moslem who can take her."

Sakr-el-Bahr laughed unpleasantly.

"Such a Moslem," he announced, "will be nearer my sword than the Paradise of Mahomet."

And on the words he stood up, as if in token of his readiness.

Asad rose with him in a bound of a vigor such as might scarce have been looked for in a man of his years.

"Dost threaten?" he cried, his eyes aflash.

"Threaten?" sneered Sakr-el-Bahr. "I prophesy."

And on that he turned, and stalked away down the gangway to the vessel's waist. There was no purpose in his going other than his perceiving that here argument were worse than useless, and that the wiser course were to withdraw at once, avoiding it and allowing his veiled threat to work upon the Basha's mind.

Quivering with rage, Asad watched his departure. On the point of commanding him to return, he checked, fearing lest, in his present mood, Sakr-el-Bahr should flout his authority and under the eyes of all refuse him the obedience due. He knew that it is not good to command where we are not sure of being obeyed or of being able to enforce obedience, that an authority, once successfully flouted, is in itself half-shattered.

Whilst still he hesitated, Marzak, who had also risen, caught him by the arm and poured into his ear hot, urgent arguments, enjoining him to yield to Sakr-el-Bahr's demand.

"It is the sure way," he cried insistently. "Shall all be jeopardized for the sake of that whey-faced daughter of perdition? In the name of Shaitan, let us be rid of her; set her ashore as he demands, as the price of peace between us and him, and in the security of that peace let him be strangled when we come again to our moorings in Algiers. It is the sure way—the sure way"

Asad turned at last to look into that handsome, eager face. For a moment he was at a loss; then he had recourse to sophistry.

"Am I a coward that I should refuse all ways but sure ones?" he demanded in a withering tone. "Or art thou a coward who can counsel none other?"

"My anxiety is all for thee, O my father," Marzak defended himself indignantly. "I doubt if it be safe to sleep, lest he should stir up mutiny in the night."

"Have no fear," replied Asad. "Myself I have set a watch, and the officers are all trustworthy. Biskaine is even now in the forecastle taking the feeling of the men. Soon we shall know precisely where we stand."

"In thy place I would make sure. I would set a terp to this danger of mutiny. I would accede to his demands concerning the woman, and settle afterward with himself."

"Abandon that Frankish pearl?" quoth Asad. Slowly he shook his head.

"Nay, nay She is a garden that shall yield me roses. Together we shall yet taste the sweet sherbet of Kansar, and she shall thank me for having led her into Paradise. Abandon that rosy-limbed loveliness"

He laughed softly on a note of exaltation, whilst in the gloom Marzak frowned, thinking of Fenzileh, his mother.

"She is an infidel," his son sternly reminded him, "so forbidden thee by the Prophet. Wilt thou be as blind to that as to thine own peril?"

Then his voice gathering vehemence and scorn as he proceeded:

"She has gone naked of face through the streets of Algiers; she has been gaped at by the rabble in the souk; this loveliness of hers has been deflowered by the greedy gaze of Jew and Moor and Turk; galley-slaves and negroes have feasted their eyes upon her unveiled beauty; one of thy captains hath owned her his wife." He laughed.

"By Allah, I do not know thee, O my father Is this the woman thou wouldst take for thine own? This the woman for whose possession thou wouldst jeopardize thy life and perhaps the very Bashalik itself"

Asad clenched his hands until the nails bit into his flesh. Every word his son had uttered had been as a lash to his soul. The truth of it was not to be contested. He was humiliated and shamed. Yet neither was he conquered of his madness, nor diverted from his course. Before he could make answer, the tall martial figure of Biskaine came up the companion.

"Well?" the Basha greeted him eagerly, thankful for this chance to turn the subject.

Biskaine was downcast. His news was to be read in his countenance.

"The task appointed me was difficult," said he. "I have done my best. Yet I could scarce go about it in such a fashion as to draw definite conclusions. But this I know, my lord, that he will be reckless indeed if he dares to take up arms against thee and challenge thine authority. So much at least I am permitted to concede."

"No more than that?" asked Asad. "And if I were to take up arms against him, and to seek to settle this matter out of hand?"

Biskaine paused a moment ere replying:

"I cannot think but that Allah would vouchsafe thee victory," he said.

But his words did not delude the Basha. He recognized them to be no more than those which respect for him dictated to his officer.

"Yet," continued Biskaine, "I should judge thee reckless, too, my lord, as reckless as I should judge him in the like circumstances."

"I see," said Asad. "The matter stands so balanced that neither of us dare put it to the test."

"Thou hast said it."

"Then is thy course plain to thee" cried Marzak, eager to renew his arguments. "Accept his terms, and—"

But Asad broke in impatiently.

"Everything in its own hour, and each hour is written. I will consider what to do."

Below, on the waist-deck, Sakr-el-Bahr was pacing with vigitello, and vigitello's words to him were of a tenor identical almost with those of Biskaine to the Basha.

"I scarce can judge," said the Italian renegade. "But I do think that it were not wise for either thou or Asad to take the first step against the other."

"Are matters, then, so equal between us?"

"Numbers, I fear," replied viritello, "would be in favor of Asad. No truly devout Moslem will stand against the Basha, the representative of the Sublime Portal, to whom loyalty is a question of religion. Yet they are accustomed to obey thee, to leap at thy command, and so Asad himself were rash to put it to the test."

"Aye—a sound argument," said Sakr-el-Bahr. "It is as I had thought."

Upon that he quitted Vigitello, and slowly ,thoughtfully, returned to the poop-deck. It was his hope—his only hope now—that Asad might accept the proposal he had made him. As the price of it he was fully prepared for the sacrifice of his own life, which it must entail. But it was not for him to approach Asad again; to do so would be to argue doubt and anxiety and so to court refusal. He must possess his soul in what patience he could. If Asad persisted in his refusal undeterred by any fear of mutiny, then Sakr-el-Bahr knew not what course remained to him to accomplish Rosamund's deliverance.

Proceed to stir up mutiny he dared not. It was too desperate a throw. In his own view, it offered him no slightest chance of success; and did it fail, then, indeed, all would be lost—himself destroyed and Rosamund at the mercy of Asad. He nourished the faint hope that in that coming fight—if, indeed, the Spaniards did show fight—some chance might perhaps present itself, some unexpected way out of the present situation.

He spent the night under the stars, stretched across the threshold of the curtained entrance to the poop-house making thus a barrier of his body whilst he slept, and himself watched over in his turn by his faithful Nubians, who remained on guard. He awakened when the first violet tints of dawn were in the east and, quietly dismissing the weary slaves to their rest, he kept watch alone thereafter. Under the awning, on the starboard quarter, slept the Basha and his son, and near them Biskaine was snoring.

CHAPTER XXVII

THE MUTINEERS

Later that morning some time after the galeasse had awakened to life and such languid movement as might be looked for in a waiting crew, Sakr-el-Bahr went to visit Rosamund.

He found her brightened and refreshed by sleep, and he brought her reassuring messages that all was well encouraging her with hopes which he himself was very far from entertaining If her reception of him was not expressedly friendly, neither was it unfriendly. She listened to the hopes he expressed of yet effecting her safe deliverance and whilst she had no thanks to offer him for the efforts he was to exert on her behalf—accepting them as her absolute due, as the inadequate liquidation of the debt that lay between them—yet there was now none of that aloofness amounting almost to scorn which hitherto had marked her bearing toward him.

He came again some hours later in the afternoon, when his Nubians were once more at their post. He had no news to bring her beyond the fact that their sentinel on the heights reported a sail to westward, beating up toward the island before the very gentle breeze that was blowing. But the argosy they awaited was not yet in sight, and he confessed that certain proposals which he had made to Asad for landing her in France had been rejected. Still she need have no fear, he added promptly, seeing the sudden alarm that quickened in her eyes. A way would present itself. He was watching, and would miss no chance.

"And if no chance should offer?" she asked him.

"Why then I will make one," he answered lightly almost. "I have been making them all my life, and it would be odd if I should have lost the trick of it on my life's most important occasion."

This mention of his life led to a question from her.

"How did you contrive the chance that has made you what you are? I mean," she added quickly, as if fearing that the purport of that question might be misunderstood, "that has enabled you to become a corsair captain."

"'Tis a long story, that," he said. "I should weary you in the telling of it."

"No," she replied, and shook her head, her clear eyes solemnly meeting his clouded glance. "You would not weary me. Chances may be few in which to learn it."

"And you would learn it?" quoth he, and added, "That you may judge me?"

"Perhaps," she said, and her eyes fell.

With bowed head he paced the length of the small chamber, and back again. His desire was to do her will in this, which is natural enough—for if it is true that who knows all must perforce forgive all, never could it have been truer than in the case of Sir Oliver Tressilian.

So he told his tale. Pacing there he related it at length, from the days when he had toiled at an oar on one of the galleys of Spain down to that hour in which aboard the Spanish vessel taken under Cape Spartel he had determined upon that voyage to England to present his reckoning to his brother. He told his story simply and without too great a wealth of detail, yet he omitted nothing of all that had gone to place him where he stood. And she, listening, was so profoundly moved that at one moment her eyes glistened with tears which she sought vainly to repress. Yet he, pacing there, absorbed, with head bowed and eyes that never once strayed in her direction, saw none of this.

"And so," he said, when at last that odd narrative had reached its end, "you know what the forces were that drove me. Another stronger than myself might have resisted and preferred to suffer death. But I was not strong enough. Or perhaps it is that stronger than myself was my desire to punish, to vent the bitter hatred into which my erstwhile love for Lionel was turned."

"And for me, too—as you have told me," she added.

"Not so," he corrected her. "I hated you for your unfaith, and most of all for your having burned unread the letters that I sent you by the hand of Pitt. In doing that you contributed to the wrongs I was enduring, you destroyed my one chance of establishing my innocence and seeking rehabilitation, you doomed me for life to the ways which I was treading. But I did not know then what ample cause you had to believe me what I seemed. I did not know that it was believed I had fled. Therefore I forgive you freely a deed for which at one time I confess that I hated you, and which spurred me to bear you off when I found you under my hand that night at Arwenack when I went for Lionel."

"You mean that it was no part of your intent to have done so?" she asked him.

"To carry you off together with him?" he asked. "I swear to God I had not premeditated that. Indeed, it was done because not premeditated, for had I considered it, I do think I should have been proof against any such temptation. It assailed me suddenly when I beheld you there with Lionel, and I succumbed to it. Knowing what I now know I am punished enough, I think."

"I think I can understand," she murmured gently, as if to comfort him, for quick pain had trembled in his voice.

He tossed back his turbaned head.

"To understand is something," said he. "It is half-way at least to forgiveness. But ere forgiveness can be accepted the evil done must be atoned for to the full."

"If possible," said she.

"It must be made possible," he answered her with heat, and on that he checked abruptly, arrested by a sound of shouting from without.

He recognized the voice of Larocque, who, at dawn, had returned to his sentinel's post on the summit of the head land, relieving the man who had replaced him there during the night.

"My lord My lord!" was the cry in a voice shaken by excitement, and succeeded by a shouting chorus from the crew.

Sakr-el-Bahr turned swiftly to the entrance, whisked aside the curtain, and stepped out upon the poop. Larocque was in the very act of clambering over the bulwarks amidships, toward the waist-deck where Asad awaited him in company with Marzak and the trusty Biskaine. The prow, on which the corsairs had lounged at ease since yesterday, was now a seething mob of inquisitive, babbling men, crowding to the rail and even down the gangway in their eagerness to learn what news it was that brought the sentinel aboard in such excited haste.

From where he stood Sakr-el-Bahr heard Larocque's loud announcement.

"The ship I sighted at dawn, my lord!"

"Well?" barked Asad.

"She is here—in the bay beneath that headland. She has just dropped anchor."

"No need for alarm in that," replied the Basha at once. "Since she has anchored there it is plain that she has no suspicion of our presence. What manner of ship is she?"

"A tall galleon of twenty guns, flying the flag of England."

"Of England!" cried Asad in surprise. "She'll need be a stout vessel to hazard herself in Spanish waters."

Sakr-el-Bahr advanced to the rail.

"Does she display no further device?" he asked.

Larocque turned at the question.

"Aye," he answered, "a narrow blue pennant on her mizzen is charged with a white bird—a stork, I think."

"A stork?" echoed Sakr-el-Bahr thoughtfully.

He could call to mind no such English blazon, nor did it seem to him that it could possibly be English. He caught the sound of a quickly indrawn breath behind him. He turned to find Rosamund standing in the entrance, not more than half concealed by the curtain. Her face showed white and eager, her eyes were wide.

"What is it?" he asked her shortly.

"A stork, he thinks," she said as if that were answer enough.

"I'faith, an unlikely bird," he commented. "The fellow is mistook."

"Yet not so much, Sir Oliver."

"How? Not by much?"

Intrigued by something in her tone and glance, he stepped quickly up to her, whilst below the chatter of voices increased.

"That which he takes to be a stork is a heron—a white heron, and white is argent in heraldry, is't not?"

"It is. What then?"

"D'ye not see? That ship will be the Silver Heron."

He looked at her.

"'Slife" said he. "I reck little whether it be the silver heron or the golden grasshopper. What odds?"

"It is Sir John's ship—Sir John Killigrew's," she explained. "She was all but ready to sail when—when you came to Arwenack, He was for the Indies. Instead—don't you see?—out of love for me he will have come after me upon a forlorn hope of overtaking you ere you could make Barbary."

"God's light!" said Sakr-el-Bahr, and fell to musing.

Then he raised his head and laughed.

"Faith, he's some days late for that"

But the jest evoked no response from her. She continued to stare at him with those eager yet timid eyes.

"And yet," he continued, "he comes opportunely enough. If the breeze that has fetched him is faint, yet surely it blows from Heaven."

"Were it——" she paused faltering a moment. Then—

"Were it possible to communicate with him?"

"Possible—aye," he answered.

"Though we must needs devise the means and that will prove none so easy."

"And you would do it?" she inquired, an undercurrent of wonder in her question, some reflection of it in her face.

"Why readily," he answered, "since no other way presents itself. No doubt 'twill cost some lives," he added, "but then——"

And he shrugged to complete the sentence.

"Ah, no, no Not at that price!" she protested.

IT MAKES THE POLICE GRAYHEADED

New York police maintain that the nation's worst traffic tangle is at Columbus Circle, New York, where seven busy streets meet. Street cars, pedestrians and thousands of automobiles would be in a constant tangle were it not for a force of traffic police forever kept at the corner.

CUPID WINS

The former German kaiser and ex-Miss of Baden ended their friendship when Max, one day back [illegible], told the former emperor that the war was lost. However, Cupid overcame the handicap, and Prince Wolfgang von Hessen, nephew of the kaiser, and Princess Maria Alexander, daughter of Max, were married the other day. Picture shows them immediately after the ceremony.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

The next thing the elephant and the Twins did in the jungle playground was to slide down the sliding-board.

"You go first," said Tommy Tiger to the Twins, "and Weeny can go next and I'll go last. It's lots of fun for it has so many bumps on it."

So Nancy took her turn and Nick took his turn, and then Weeny climbed up the steep ladder at the back to take his turn, with Tommy behind him so he could be all ready to go when Weeny reached the bottom.

But the very minute Weeny reached the top, the whole business crumpled up like a jack-knife and you couldn't tell which was Weeny and which was Tommy and which was sliding-board.

"Oh, oh, oh!" screamed Nancy. "Help, somebody, quick!"

"I'm all right!" called Weeny cheerfully. "If only Tommy Tiger would take his paw out of my eye."

"Eye, yourself!" growled Tommy. "I can't move because you are sitting on my tail."

"Here, I'll move these boards and then you can both get up," said Nick. "There! Now you're all right."

So Weeny and Tommy both crawled out, all covered with mud and dirt, but not mad a bit.

"Ha, ha, ha!" laughed Weeny.

"Ho, ho, ho!" roared Tommy. "We didn't get our ride but had a lot of fun, anyway. I'll tell you what let's do next. Let's go swimming. The swimming pool is right over there."

"I didn't know tigers could swim," said Nick.

"Sure they can! Especially circus tigers," said Tommy. "Come on, everybody."

"We'll keep them on," said Nick. "They are magic so they won't get wet."

So off they all went to the jungle swimming pool.

Tommy dived in first with a splash.

"Fine!" cried Nick.

"That's nothing!" said Tommy. "Why, in the circus I dive twice as far, and sometimes I jump through a hoop of fire. That's what they call me, 'Fire and Water Tommy.' Come on in, the water's fine!"

So Nancy and Nick stepped right in.

"Oo! Ee! Isn't it grand!" said Nick. But he said no more, for at that minute Weeny gave a run and jump and landed right in the middle of the swimming-pool. And Tommy Tiger and Nancy and Nick disappeared like sugar in a teacup

For when Weeny went in, the water went up as though the whole Atlantic Ocean had been emptied into it.

"My goodness!" cried the elephant. "Where are you, everybody? Where did you go? Oh, there you are. Wait and I'll save you."

"Get out of the water. That's the quickest way to save us," cried Tommy.

"I think I'll be going," said Weeny, after that. "If I stay around any longer there won't be any playground left."

STAYS SOBER 10 YEARS. SEEKS $10,000 REWARD

Railroad Man Sues Frank R. Jones Estate for Fulfillment of Alleged Promise.

NEW YORK, October 6. — A suit to recover $10,000 from the estate of Frank R. Jones, wealthy brewer of Portsmouth, N.H., was filed in Suffolk Superior Court by Michael Crowley, employed by the Boston & Maine Railroad.

Crowley alleged that Jones promised to give him $10,000 if he would remain sober for ten years, and that he had carried out his part of the bargain.

Attached to a declaration in the suit filled by Crowley's counsel was a letter dated 15th September, 1923, and purporting to be signed by the New Hampshire brewer, saying:

"I promise to pay Michael Crowley the sum of ten thousand dollars ($10,000) if he abstains from drinking any liquor for the next ten years. My estate is bound to pay the same. If I pass away during that time the men or trustees will pay him."

Another letter, with a signature, said to be that of Martha F. Jones, wife of the brewer, and the date 18th September, 1903, said:

"The promise of my husband to Michael Crowley, as provided, that the sum of $10,000 with interest be paid, will be made good. My estate is bound in honour, my husband and myself, to pay the same. The above is a promise I make."

SWAM 12 MILES.

Daughter of Police Chief of Pictou, Nova Scotia, Finished Strong.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 6.—(Canadian Press).—Miss Eva Morrison, daughter of Chief of Police David A. Morrison, of Pictou, Nova Scotia, yesterday swam to Boston light, classic test of New England distance swimmers, in seven and a half hours. The temperature of the water varied from 50 to 54 degrees.

Coming from the water in a strong condition, she aided in drawing the row-boat which had accompanied her, up to the beach.

She is 19, and has had a varied career as a stenographer, telephone operator and music student.

Her ambition, she said, is to swim the English Channel.

GERMANY SEEN ON WAY TO RECOVERY

When the Political Storms Cease Germany Will Make Big Advancements.

By CARL D. GROAT.

BERLIN, Oct. 6. — (United Press).—New and serious political battling is destined for Germany in the next days as an aftermath of the Dawes struggle.

The Reichstag, scheduled to reconvene October 15, but perhaps summoned earlier by the Government, will witness a rattling skirmish over protective agrarian tariff, with nationalists and junkers on one side and socialists and communists on the other.

Demand Dissolution.

The socialists are demanding dissolution of the Reichstag.

That body is no longer representative of the nation. They insist that the populace shall be asked directly if it wants a Government coalition, including the nationalists, and whether it wants breadstuffs increased in price through tariffs similar to those prevailing in Germany before the war.

On the other hand, the nationalists are clamoring for their "pound of flesh"—payment for rounding up sufficient voters to pass the Dawes bills.

In the first place, they want products protected. If this is done, it automatically means that the nationalists must come into the coalition, because once the tariffs are passed, the Marx-Stresemann minority regime cannot count further on benevolent neutrality from the socialists. That means they must strengthen their structure by building rightward.

The Eight-Hour Day.

At the same time, the battle will bring up in all probability the great question of the eight-hour day in Germany. The socialists point out that the Dawes report expressly stated Germany's labor should not be put on a standard of life lower than that of other countries.

But the big industrialists have long since scrapped, in practise, the eight-hour day, and, according to the socialists, are preparing to pay reparations chiefly from the sweat of the laborer's brow.

The socialists maintain that this method of paying reparations will never do.

Tariffs and hours—these two things furnish the ground-work for a pretty row, the outcome of which is thoroughly in doubt.

It is, however, possible that new elections will be the outgrowth of this internal strife. In this case, it is more than likely that the extreme right and left wings will suffer sharp loses.

As Whole Satisfied.

The nation as a whole is satisfied with the prospects for peace and order, offered by the Dawes report, and this means inroads in the extremist ranks.

The "Putsch" spirit has disappeared and it is safe to predict that Germany, barring quite unforeseen circumstances, will now settle down to the ordered routine which marked its course before the war. It will still have many internal political bickerings, but the danger of civil war and bloodshed have gone with the acceptance of the Dawes scheme.

Business is looking up. The first week after signature of the Dawes measures saw a sharp drop in unemployment in the Ruhr and elsewhere, and a general toning up of business.

This was due to the substitution of certainly for uncertainty—and was born of the conviction that Germany has now a chance to wipe out her obligations and again get on her feet.

SETTELL CONFESSED FORGERY AND THEFT

Thought Money Was Coming To Him For His Work.

NIAGARA FALLS, Oct. 4.—(Canadian Press).—Clarence Settell, private secretary to Sir Adam Beck, arrested here yesterday, made a full confession to-day of the forgery and trip to Niagara Falls. Settell had booked his passage from New York to Buenos Aires, and was to have sailed from New York to-day. The accused denied having lost money by gambling, but claimed he had not got a square deal from the Hydro. He stated that many men had gone to work for the Commission and are getting more than he was. He believed the money he took was coming to him because he had not been paid enough for his services.

RED-BEAUTY

Indians have their beauty shows just like the white folk. But there was much wailing through western tepees this year. Those fair maidens with copper skins, who had fallen into the bobbed-hair ranks, were barred from the beauty pageant at the Pendleton (Ore.) round-up. Even so, there were plenty of good-looking maidens, who hadn't shorn their locks, on hand. Witness Esther Motanic (tribal name White Fawn) of the Umatillas.

RUSSIA SEIZED CHINA RAILWAY

Steals a March on France and China—Breach Between Governments Widens.

MANAGER ARRESTED.

(By Ray Marshall, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

PEKING, October 6. — The break between the Central Chinese Government and Rusia widened to-day, one of the highest officials of the Peking Administration givin the United Press the following statement:

"China has no intention of asking any foreign power, especially Russia, to mediate in the present struggle.

"We are fully aware that Russia has signed a special agreement with Chang Tso Lin (the Manchurian rebel leader) designed to steal the Chinese Eastern Railway.

Foreign legations in Peking to-day received a report that agents of Russia and Marshal Chang actually have taken possession of the railway's headquarters in Harbin, following the completion of the so-called Mosow-Mukden agreement providing for cooperation between Russia and Chang To Lin.

Russia it would appear has stolen a march on both France and China, as the French have been giving for complete control of the railway.

It is also reported that four of Changs representatives from Mukden and four Russian representatives have assumed control of all affairs of the railway.

M. Ostroumoff, general manager, and M. Gonbati, head of the land department of the railway, have been arrested and placed in prison charged with embezzlement, according to unconfirmed but apparently reliable report. Many diplomats here believe that the situation now is such that the interests of all nations in the railway are considerably complicated.

APPOINTED JUDGE.

OTTAWA, Oct. 6 — (Canadian Press).—Hon. P. J. Byrne, Attorney General for New Brunswick, has been appointed Judge of the King's Bench of New Brunswick in succession to Judge J. H. Barry, recently appointed Chief Justice of New Brunswick.

50.

Fifty direct descendants attend the sixty-fifth wedding anniversary celebration of A. J. Wakefield and wife at Pana, Ill.

If every one reproduced as prolifically as the Wakefield family, and death did not intervene to make room for newcomers, a century or less would have this earth so tightly packed with folk that no one could lie down. Standing room only.

We have to get out to make room for newcomers. Nature has this for her scheme and she will never tolerate its frustration by medical discoveries enabling people to live an average of 150 or more years. New ways of death will develop as old ones are conquered.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

By SISTER MARY

STALE BREAD.

There are any number of ways in which stale bread can be turned into a real asset.

When bread becomes stale, dry it immediately. If allowed to accumulate for any length of time it's apt to become mouldy and really worthless. Put the crisp bread through the fine knife of the food chopper and the crumbs are ready for "crumbing" purposes.

Buttered toast crumbs should not be mixed with plain bread crumbs unless used at once.

If an entire loaf of uncut bread becomes too dry for table use try "French toast." This is delicious for breakfast or luncheon.

There is a luncheon dish of bread and cheese that is nourishing and "tasty."

The bread puddings are almost legion and range from the simplest affair for children to a rich and plum-y suet pudding for gala days.

"Stale" bread crumbs and "dried" bread crumbs are two different ingredients and can seldom be used as substitutes for each other.

French Toast.

Eight slices bread cut about one-half inch thick, 1 egg, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1-4 teaspoon cinnamon or nutmeg, 3-4 cup milk.

If eggs are plentiful two should be used in place of one. Less milk is necessary.

Beat egg slightly, add milk and seasonings and mix well. Dip bread in mixture and fry to a golden brown in half butter and half lard. Serve very hot with syrup. Do not let bread stand in the egg mixture after dipping. Dip each piece and fry immediately.

Emergency Luncheon Dish.

Butter thin slices of stale bread. Line a baking dish with the buttered side toward the dish. Sprinkle with grated or finely chopped cheese, season with salt and paprika and a tiny dash of mustard. Add another layer of bread, sprinkle with cheese and seasonings. Pour over one egg well beaten with one cup milk. Cover with a layer of bread, buttered side up. Let stand until the bread absorbs the milk. If the bread is not soft, carefully pour milk in at the side of the dish. Bake in a moderate oven until the cheese is melted and the top is brown.

Jam Sandwiches.

Eight slices of stale bread, butter, jam, frying batter.

To make frying batter—one cup flour, 1 tablespoon melted butter, 1 tablespoon cream, 2 eggs, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons warm water.

The bread should be cut about one-quarter inch thick. Make sandwiches, spreading half the slices with butter and jam and covering with the remaining slices. Cut sandwiches in neat squares or triangles, depending on the original shape.

Sift flour into mixing bowl, add salt, yolk of one egg and cream. Slowly add water, beating until smooth. Beat vigorously. Let stand half an hour. Beat whites of eggs until stiff and dry and fold into mixture. Dip each sandwich in the batter and fry in deep hot fat until a golden brown. Serve very hot.

FABLES ON HEALTH

WATCH SURPLUS FLESH.

When Mr. Mann, of Anytown, took out life insurance he learned a few things about weight that he had not thought about before.

Many men to whom he had had formerly pointed as "fine, big specimens," suddenly seemed less a cause for envy.

Statistics gathered by the insurance companies cover a broad field of underweight and overweight figuring, and framework and general physical structure enter into many of the considerations.

However, mortality experience on youthful underweights has been unfavorable, and mortality experience on elderly overweights has been equally unfavorable.

The age of 35 becomes the dividing line. It is pointed out that the lowest mortality is found among those who average just a few pounds over their normal weight before 35 and a few pounds under the average weight after thirty-five.

After 25 any marked overweight is considered a "risk," pointing to faulty living or its presence as a physical handicap.

Some 15 or 20 pounds overweight after the age of 35 should be a signal to get in and reduce.

If paint brushes are to be unused for a while, moisten them with paraffin oil before putting away.

Signs of disaffection among Wu's troops because only one months' salary have been paid with eight months overdue, is also reposted.

DR. HOWARD TAYLOR.

Well Known Missionary Is a Visitor In Peterboro.

Dr. Howard Taylor, of the China Inland Mission, and son of the celebrated Dr. Hudson Taylor, founder of the Mission, is a visitor in the city over the week end. He preached in St. Paul's church yesterday morning, and in All Saints' church last evening. There were good congregations at both churches to hear a speaker whose work in China has made him a notable figure in the missionary annals of the time.

At St. Paul's church yesterday morning, Rev. Dr. Taylor spoke briefly but very interestingly, taking his text from the 8th verse of the 14th chapter of St. Mark: "She has done what she could," and illustrating his discourse by examples of self-sacrificial devotion to the cause of Christ, drawn from his own experience with native workers in China.

"If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily, and follow Me," said Christ. "That is what we all want to do. The missionary service of the church of Christ is in a somewhat peculiar sense a service of sacrifice. The missionary leaves home and friends to go to strange lands, where he lives among sometimes hostile people, in loneliness and danger, risking his life and his health, so that he may follow the example of Christ, who left His father's throne to come down to a life of self-renunciation and suppreme sacrifice. But he gets wonderful returns of peace and blessing and spiritual and material gains."

Dr. Taylor spoke of a Chinese pastor who had, by thrift and foresight, managed to save the sum of one thousand dollars after many years, and who, instead of using it, as he had first intended, towards the education of his grand-children, was led by the Lord to devote the sum towards the furtherance of the work of the Inland Mission. His second instance was that of a young Chinese man to whom Dr. Taylor's own father had once said that he would meet him in heaven. Impressed by the occurrence, the boy, then a servant, secured an education which fitted him to practise medicine. His enterprise and energy in his work finally brought him a great honor in the shape of an offer of supervision of a big hospital from the governor of one of the provinces, with a salary of $80 a month, which the speaker said would be equivalent to about $800 a month in this country. After consideration, the young man refused the flattering offer, and chose rather to devote himself to the cause of missionary work among his own people, going to the farthest corner of the Empire, where he inaugurated a new missionary centre. "And I believe that man is one of the happiest men in China to-day."

"The Lord is no man's debtor. He repays in full what is given to Him. He will say to each one of us, if we strive to follow after Him, in His way of sacrifice, at the moment when we appear before His throne and see Him in all His glory: "Thou hast done what thou couldst."

HORSE CHARGES DOWN GEORGE ST.

One Foot Slipped and Horse Goes Down, Avoiding What Might Have Been a Serious Accident.

What might have proved to have been a very serious accident, occurred last evening at 8.15 o'clock, when a touring car driven by Mr. Fred Brooks, skidded int a horse and buggy owned by Blewett's Livery and carrying three occupants, a man, a woman and small girl, at the corner of George and McDonnel streets.

When struck by the car the left shaft of the buggy was broken and the bridle became loose, giving the driver very little power to control the horse. The steed broke away as soon as it was hit by the car and headed down George street on the gallop, slipping and skidding in its hurried flight, while the buggy with its three occupants was swaying from one side to the other. The horse slipped on the wet road and slid into the ditch, where it was held down by the crowd of spectators, who had gathered around, until it had cooled off a bit, and was bridled. It was then allowed to rise to its feet.

SEVEN KILLED IN POLITICAL FIGHT

Fighting Started When the Police Attempted to Break Up Meeting of Former President.

SAVANA, Oct. 6.—(United Press) —Seven persons were killed and 57 wounded in political rioting at Camaguey last night, according to messages received here.

The fighting started when the police attempted to break up a meeting of former President Monocal, who is campaigning for another term as President of the Republic.

The firing lasted two hours and order was not restored until the military were called out.

The clash came as a climax to an eventful day for Monocal and his party who are campaigning throughout the Republic on a special train.

Early yesterday morning the train was fired on by unknown persons between the towns of Florida and Esmeralda and later at Central Agramonte, four coaches were derailed.

The Assistant Chief of Police of Camaiguay and two policemen are among the dead. Two citizens and a city inspector were also killed.

The bloodshed at Camaguey followed earlier fighting Saturday when one man was killed and three wounded in a political quarrel in a cafe at Cienfuegos, Province of Santa Clara.

The guard around the Presidential Palace in Havana was doubled this morning and a censorship was placed on telegraphic communications between the capital and Camaguey.

Local newspapers supporting Monocal's candidacy charged the Government with supporting the elements opposing him and said that the news favoring the Monocal ticket was delayed continually.

DR. TAYLOR TELLS ROTARY OF CHINA

Outlines Progress Of Missionary Work and Relates Interesting Events.

Dr. Howard Taylor, of China, was the speaker at the Rotary Club luncheon to-day, where he gave a pleasing summary of the work accomplished by Christian missionaries in Inland China. Dr. Taylor kept his audience interested throughout with stories of achievement, although many had expected a discussion of the present puzzling political situation in the Eastern empire.

President I. W. McDermid occupied the chair.

As an indication of the immense size of China, Dr. Taylor pointed out that there are only three persons outside the Empire for every one within it. The Chinese have been trying experiments, he said, along the lines of the United States Republic, but have not yet met with any great success.

When Dr. Taylor's father went to China first, there were only 300 Chinese Christians in the world. He pleaded for help for Inland China, but was told that nothing could be done. Finally he decided upon action himself, although he was a short man and comparatively unknown. Going out in the confidence of God's help he was certain the closed country would be opened up to him. It was determined that no request would be made for money. The work has continued 58 years, and to-day there are 1,200 missionaries in the Inland China field. No financial difficulties have ever been met, and at no time has the society been in debt.

Dr. Taylor has travelled over all the most thickly populated parts of China and was received with hospitality and cordiality by the Christian communities everywhere.

One of the big results of Christianity, though indirect, has been the partial doing away with opium smoking of which there has been a recrudescence all over China. Foot binding has also been done away with in one province where the governor is half persuaded to Christianity.

Fines and imprisonment failed to persuade the women to allow their feet to grow, but the governor enlisted the school boys in his service and formed them into a league with the motto, "Never marry a woman with small feet." This was effective.

Dr. Taylor told interestingly of the development of individuals and states under the guidance of missionaries and native Christians.

SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

Thirty-five Out of Thirty-six Pupils Passed.

Queen Alexandra Home and School Association had a most enjoyable open meeting on Friday evening, Mr. R. C. Flitton, in the chair.

The principal, Mr. M. H. Park in well chosen remarks, congratulated the class for their good standing, thirty-five out of thirty-six having passed. He explained that the meaning of the certificate was entrance to a higher sphere of education, increased responsibilities and a greater part in the life of the community. It stands for moral and physical training, as well as the acquirement of knowledge. He wished the candidates success in their future work and assured them of his continued interest in their careers. Then presented the certificates, which were tied with the school colors—black and gold. And concluded with the last stanza from Sir Henry Newbolts, "The Torch of Life".

"This is the word that year by year
While in her place the school is set
Everyone of her sons must hear,
And none that hears it dare forget.
This they all with a joyful mind
Bear through life like a torch in flame,
And falling, fling to the host behind—
Play up! Play up! and play the game!"

All enjoyed the really splendid programme—duet, guitar and voice, the Misses Trutheway; reading Miss Alma Stinchcombe; vocal solo, Miss Beulah Payton and piano solo Master Hedley Vickers.

Congratulatory remarks by Mr. P. P. Westbye and Mr. F. H. Dearborn.

The members were reminded of the meeting on Monday evening, when Mrs M A. Morrison will give an address on the Plebiscite.

Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Geo. Lee and members of the association. The table was very attractive with decorations and flowers in the school colors. Mrs. M. H. Park and Mrs. F. H. Dearborn cut the ices.

The meeting closed by singing "God save the King".

Substance vs. Shadow

Foodstuffs and Furniture for the People or Fat Profits for Liquor Interests?

BREWERS, distillers and bootleggers (the liquor interests) want your vote for government sale on October 23rd. It's a matter of cold business with them. ¶Eight lean years for booze under The Ontario Temperance Act. Eight good years for the rest of the people of Ontario. ¶Your votes have told the liquor traffic repeatedly that you want no more of the waste, the misery, the sordidness, that follow in its wake. But the traffic dies hard. ¶Booze has bluffed and cajoled much! Has threatened and defied often. Old John Barleycorn, who never has respected law, now says you must change the law to suit the will of the law defiers. In other words, give him and his bootlegging ally the same old fat profits as in pre-O.T.A. days. ¶As a straight business proposition, you have no choice but to turn him down. You have your own home and family to think of, and your own business to consider. After all, nobody can be blamed for preferring foodstuffs and furniture for himself, to bulging wads in the pockets of the liquor interests.

90% Less Drinking Under O.T.A.

The Ontario Temperance Act, in eight short years, has gone a long way toward overcoming the evil results of a century or more of easy access to booze. Statistics show 90 per cent. less drinking in Ontario. The quantity of beer manufactured in this province last year was little more than one-quarter of what it was in 1914, and this 1923 total of 6,399,667 gallons included the legal "temperance beer", the strong beer exported from Ontario to the U.S., and the quantity sold for medicinal purposes through our provincial dispensaries. The consumption of strong drink in Ontario is not one-tenth of what it was before the enactment of the O.T.A.

This great saving in Ontario's drink bill is evidenced in better-furnished homes, better-clothed families, increased bank deposits, and other savings and investments, and in finer opportunities for wholesome recreation. According to foremost real estate dealers, prohibition has increased ownership of homes by from 10% to 20%.

Boon to Ontario Wage Earners

Employees and employers have gone strongly on record in evidence that the O.T.A. has brought priceless benefits to Ontario citizens. Replying to a Government questionnaire, 70 per cent. of our leading manufacturers declare that the O.T.A. has "made for increased production of goods".

76 per cent. say it has "increased the workers' regularity of attendance immediately after pay day";

74 per cent. assert that it has "improved their capacity, work and their ability to perform their duties";

82 per cent. state that the O.T.A. has "resulted in more comfortable homes and better supplies of food and clothing for wives and children";

And 85 per cent. agree that drunkenness and poverty are less common than before this province adopted The Ontario Temperance Act.

Taxes Soar Under Government Sale

Under so-called "Government Control" more liquor is manufactured, drinking, drunkenness and crime increase, taxes grow steadily higher and home standards and conditions are deplorably lowered.

In Quebec, the government sales system has enormously increased the manufacture of beer. In consequence brewery stock has increased in value by 1,500%, and the liquor interests are that much richer in pocket. But not so the people.

In "wet" Montreal only 5 per cent. of the people own the houses they live in—in "dry" Toronto 55 per cent. of the citizens own their homes.

Quebec spends only 75 cents per head of population for educational purposes; Ontario spends $2.32 per capita.

For civic recreation, Montreal spends only 32 cents per capita—Toronto spends $2.39 per capita.

Government Sale Comes Heavy on the Worker

In British Columbia the consumption of liquor has tremendously increased under their government sale system. In Vancouver the cost of the police force increased 70%, the cost of administering justice increased 90% and the jail population 200%.

No wonder taxes have grown so burdensome in British Columbia! Here's an actual example of a Vancouver worker's tax bills on his house and lot: 1919, $62.99; 1920, $68.19; 1921, $78.06; 1922, $101.61; 1923, $106.69; 1924, $140.65.

While the British Columbia working man groans under ever-increasing taxation, the bootlegger piles up his profits. Bootlegging in B.C. is a vast, organized business, with an annual turnover of $12,000,000 worth of booze—a sales volume equal to that of all the government liquor stores. The last report of the B.C. Liquor Control Board admits that the bootlegger is becoming an increasingly embarrassing problem in British Columbia.

In Manitoba and Quebec, the situation is equally serious.

Ontario Must Stay Dry

Ontario citizens are not prepared to go into the booze business on a fifty-fifty basis with the bootlegger.

Ontario electors want bootlegging reduced to the minimum.

The way to scotch the bootlegger is to give the Government a mandate to "continue and strengthen" and to "actively and vigorously enforce" The Ontario Temperance Act.

An overwhelming majority for "Continuance" will save Ontario from the stupendous economic, social and moral blunder of trading the substance for the shadow.

For the Honor of Old Ontario mark your ballot thus:

1	Are you in favour of the continuance of The Ontario Temperance Act?	X
2	Are you in favour of the sale as a beverage of beer and spirituous liquor in sealed packages under Government control?

John D.'s Secret of New Youth at 85 — Buttermilk!

Richest Man in the World Went Hungry for Years, Built His Eat Normal Person Up His Health as He Did Fortune, and Now Can Just Like Any Other

AN amazing metamorphosis has come into the life of John D. Rockefeller.

The richest man in the world is better physically, in some respects, at 85, than he was at 58!

He has found the secret of new youth, that elusive thing for which Ponce de Leon searched so diligently but futilely.

De Leon, temperamental and impulsive, never had a chance to win the coveted prize.

John D. Rockefeller persevered. With the same patience and doggedness that were responsible for his building up a personal fortune of $1,250,000,000 he searched for the secret that would help him overcome the thing that was sapping his vitality, that was making his living moments miserable, that was slowly, but surely, ending his days—indigestion.

He found it—found the secret of youth for him, at least. And what do you suppose it is? Not the crystal wafers of a Florida spring for which Ponce de Leon searched, but—

BUTTERMILK!

By drinking buttermilk morning, noon and night, Mr. Rockefeller has finally conquered his enemy.

For years the richest man in the world went hungry!

Almost everything he ate was followed by indigestion, so acute, so terrible, so nerve-racking that he eventually gave up trying to eat. He kept himself alive with crackers and milk or predigested foods that neither satisfied nor nourished him.

The richest man in the world saw men in the ditch eat corned beef and cabbage and bacon and eggs and pork and beans. His mouth watered over every bite they took. Gladly, at times, would he have given up his billion for a good feed of corned beef and cabbage! And hungered, he went back to crackers and milk!

Naturally, the greatest stomach specialists attempted to cure Mr. Rockefeller. But their efforts were in vain.

In his younger days, before he became the richest man in the world, Mr. Rockefeller had, as his private physician, Dr. H. F. Biggar, of Cleveland, almost his own age. Dr. Biggar fills the dual role of personal friend and private physician. But with all his ability and personal interest he could not help Mr. Rockefeller.

About ten years ago, while Dr. Biggar was spending a vacation with Mr. Rockefeller at Pocantico Hills, they fell to discussing the theories of Professor Elie Metchnikoff on the prolongation of life. Metchnikoff always advocated the use of lactic acid in the treatment of stomach troubles. A very religious man, he frequently turned to the Bible to clinch his arguments. He often called attention to the fact that Moses, enumerating in his fifth book the food which Jehovah had given his people to eat, specified: "Soured milk of kine and goat's milk, with fat of lambs and rams of the breed of Bashan, and goats with the fat of kidneys" (Deut. xxxii—14). As a matter of fact, in the English version of the Bible, the word "butter" is used instead of "soured milk." Metchnikoff, however, followed the translation of Ebstein, who calls it soured milk. (Incidentally, the prophet said something in the same sentence about the "pure blood of the grape," but Metchnikoff, and Dr. Biggar, too, seem to have ignored that.) In Genesis xviii—8, Metchnikoff pointed out, "it is recorded that Abraham, when he entertained the three angels, set before them 'soured milk and sweet milk and the calf which he had dressed.'"

Dr. Biggar urged Mr. Rockefeller to try the sour milk treatment. But Mr. Rockefeller could not bring himself to the point of drinking it. He had a great deal the same opinion as Stephen Leacock, who facetiously wrote: "It is now proven beyond doubt that anybody who takes a gallon of sour milk night and morning can live forever. The only question is—is it worth it?"

When the physician called attention to the fact that practically the same results could be obtained through the use of buttermilk, Mr. Rockefeller readily consented to try it. For, while he disliked sour milk, he could drink buttermilk, and rather liked it.

It was a long, slow and tedious undertaking. In the first place, Mr. Rockefeller, in all the years that he was undergoing the treatment, used no buttermilk except that produced from the milk of his own cows at Pocantico Hills. And these were no ordinary cows.

Mr. Rockefeller drank a quart of buttermilk three times a day. In order that it should be of the best quality and that it should always be fresh, Ellis, the superintendent of the Rockefeller place at Pocantico, scoured the countryside for three additional cows. They were finally selected by Dr. Devine, the Rockefeller veterinarian, from more than twenty that were offered. These twenty underwent the most stringent examinations and were pronounced perfect cows. Ellis paid $500 each for them and they and their offspring have been furnishing the buttermilk to Mr. Rockefeller ever since.

No matter where he went the oil king had his buttermilk sent to him from Pocantico—to Florida, to White Sulphur Springs, to Cleveland, and to his town house in New York City.

On several occasions when the Rockefellers held their annual outings it was noticed that buttermilk was always taken along for Mr. Rockefeller. It came to be one of the family jokes. One time, when the family was picnicking at Leno, Mass., Mr. Rockefeller produced his bottles of buttermilk. That was five years ago.

"He is very strong for it," said one of the members of his party. "It is his favorite 'tipple.'"

And so it was. Just as making money had been a passion with him until he accumulated his vast fortune, so drinking buttermilk had similarly become a passion.

Of course there were other things that went to make up Mr. Rockefeller's dietary schedule. One of them was a tablespoonful of olive oil with each meal. Mr. Rockefeller considers that this tones up the system and keeps his joints in such condition as to give him sprightliness that would not be expected in a man of his age.

Gradually Mr. Rockefeller began to eat things that he had not thought of eating for years. First came lamb chops and eggs.

Supplementing the buttermilk treatment, everything possible was done to give Mr. Rockefeller an appetite. For instance, when Dr. Walter B. Cannon, of Harvard University, discovered how the thoughts of the brain could influence the stomach, his disclosures were immediately applied to Mr. Rockefeller. Dr. Cannon, experimenting with a cat, discovered, by means of X-ray photographs, that when the cat was made angry, the movements of the stomach ceased. But when the cat was happy, as indicated by its purring, the stomach worked more vigorously than ever.

The thing to do then, in Mr. Rockefeller's case, was to keep him happy. Some people imagine that the possession alone of a billion dollars would make them happy. But apparently other things are required. So Mr. Rockefeller was relieved, principally by his son, of all his business responsibilities. He was ordered to play nine holes of golf a day. As the weather grew cooler each year he would shift from Pocantico Hills to White Sulphur Springs, then to Georgia and then on to Florida. If there was no golf partner for him among his friends, a young and vigorous employe of the Standard Oil Co. would act in that capacity. One of his duties (and the likewise self-imposed duties of Mr. Rockefeller's friends) was to compliment him on his game. That made him happy, too.

John D. Rockefeller finally won the hardest fight of his life—the one against indigestion. Just as he freely acknowledges that oil was responsible for building up his million-dollar fortune, so he gives credit to buttermilk for building up his health.

According to Mr. Rockefeller's associates, as well as his physicians, the richest man in the world is so vastly improved that there is every reason for believing that he will live to be one hundred years old. That is his ambition. Not only has he improved physically, but his mind is as keen to-day as it was thirty years ago. With the elimination of his stomach ailment he has become almost boyish in his interest in affairs and is enjoying life thoroughly.

For he can eat anything that any normal man can eat. He no longer envies the laborer his corned beef and cabbage. He can have his fill. And truffles and caviar and foie gras and turkey "stuffin'" and mince pie have no terrors to him. For he has found in buttermilk the secret of new youth.

18 SCORELESS INNINGS

Consecutive Zeros Hung Up in Two Games — McCormicks Win 3 to 1.

Before the biggest crowd that ever saw a junior game here the Lakeviews were beaten 3 to 1 at Riverside Park Saturday afternoon by the McCormicks of Toronto in the second game of the series for the Junior championship of Ontario Lew Lebarr's crew thus have to win the replay of their seventeen innings tie game in Toronto to even up the series and the young Petes declare they'l do that very thing, making a game on neutral ground necessary to decide the title.

Saturday's game lived up to advance notices and proved as promised one of the best ball tilts of the season.

Having gone scoreless during the last twelve frames of their long battle in Toronto the two outfits began on Saturday where they had left off a week ago and for six innings the plate was not crossed.

It was not until the seventh inning, afaer eighteen frames had been played without a marker that the teams broke into the run column. Both scored in that session but McCormicks grabbed three runs and the Lakeviews best comeback was one.

The only scoring of the game was done in the seventh so that out of the last twenty-one innings played by the two teams twenty have been without a counter being registered which must come close to being an O.B.A.A. record.

Pitchers' Battle.

Saturday's game was essentially a pitcher's battle between two crack left-handers, in Whitehouse and Rasson and although Whitehouse had big margin in strike outs his Toronto rival had a shade on him in control and in the hit column.

The McCormick portsider who incidentally has been picked by the Sunday World for the all star Toronto amateur team, the only junior in Toronto to be considered worthy of such an honour, did not mow down the Lakeviews on strikes as frequently as a week ago but his control was much better. He did not issue a complimentary and allowed but six hits, equally distributed among Whitehouse, Ash and Marchen. Rasson in addition to his fine pitching, fielded his position superbly, and got three hits in four times up, driving in the first two runs for his team.

Outside of the seventh frame, when the visitors bunched four of their eight hits and scored all their runs, Whitehouse had McCormicks ballfed He fanned thirteen and like Rasson fielded nicely and came through with two hits.

It was a fine all round exhibition by two splendid young box artists, both of which are ripe for senior company.

Clever Fielding.

The fielding was worthy of the pitchers and of the occasion. McCormicks went through the game without the semblance of an error, backing Rasson in faultless fashion. Sinclair the centre fielder had the best of the day and one that was a very material factor in the game when he threw Whitehouse out at the plate in the seventh inning on Ash's hit to centre. Sinclair drove the ball in on a line to Boyd, cutting Lakeviews out of a run and a good chance to get more for the Lebarr crew were staging one of their characteristic batting rallies and without that check might have pulled the game out of the fire.

Lakeviews also fielded well and the one error marked against them had no effect upon the result of the game.

Review of the Play.

The first frame was soon over. For McCormicks Swing fouled to Johnston and Madigan and Boyd fanned.

For Lakeviews Cameron rolled to Rasson, Lebarr flied to Sinclair in centre and Whitlow bounded to Henry.

Ensner opened the second for the visitors by a clean single to right but Whitehouse grabbed Henry's liner with one hand and doubled Eisner off first. Sinclair struck out.

Lakeviews lost a good chance. Whitehouse rolled to Madigan, Ash singled to left Marchen dropped a single into right, sending Ash to third and going to second on the throw to the difficult corner. Halliday, however, fanned and McIntyre's fly to short right was neatly taken by Madigan.

McCormicks also muffed an opportunity in their half of the third. Woodrow missed three but the third one was a wild pitch on which he made first. Gillespie fanned but Rasson singled to left and Swing walked filling the bases. Madigan rolled to Cameron who threw Woodrow out at the plate and Boyd fouled to Lebarr with Rasson trying to steal home.

In the Lakeviews half Johnston fanned, Cameron rolled to Henry and Lebarr struck out.

Whitehouse struck out Eisner, Henry and Sinclair in a row in the fourth while Lakeviews also died in order, Whitlow fanning, Whitehouse rolling to Rasson and Ash to Woodrow.

For Lakeviews Marchen bunted and was throw out by Rasson, Halliday flied to Swing and McIntrye lifted a fly to Gillespie.

McCormicks threatened in the sixth. Swing got a life when Lebarr fielded his bunt and tossed high to Marchen. Madigan sacrificed his team-mate to second. Boyd singled to short, Madigan going to third. Boyd stole second. Eisner hit to Whitehouse whose throw to Halliday nailed Swing at the plate and Henry grounded to Marchen.

Lakeviews again went out in order, Johnston and Cameron popping to Eisner and Lebarr fouling out to Boyd.

The Fatal Frame.

Sinclair opened the disastrous seventh by slashing a single down third base way. Woodrow sacrificed him to second. Gillespie singled to centre, going to second on the throw to third. With the Lakeview infield drawn in looking for a squeeze Rasson exploded a single along the ground into right scoring Sinclair and Gillespie and going to second on the throw in. Swing promptly doubled over Whitlow's head to score Rasson. Whitehouse then put on the brakes and fanned Madigan and got Boyd on a roller to Johnston.

The Lakeviews made a big bid to even it up. Whitlow rolled to Rasson but Whitehouse crashed a long double to right. Ash singled on a line to centre and Sinclair's great throw home nipped Whitehouse at the plate, Ash going to second on the play. Marchen singled to right, scoring Ash. Halliday's roller to Woodrow retired the side.

In the egihth Eisner got on by striking at a wild pitch on the third strike. Henry forced him at second, Cameron to Marchen. Sinclair fanned. Woodrow was hit, Gillespie rolled to Cameron and Henry was called out for interference when he collided with the shortstop.

In the homesters half Collins batting for McIntyre rolled to Henry, Rasson tossed out Johnston and Cameron rolled to Madigan.

Rasson first up in the ninth got a lucky hit when his roller bounced over Cameron's head but was out, Ash to Marchen, trying to stretch the rap into a double. Swing flied to Ash and Madigan fanned.

Lebarr rolled to Rasson and Whitlow fanned. Whitehouse beat out a hit to Eisner but was forced at second by Ash and the game was over.

CALLED IN THIRTEENTH.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 5.—The third game of the little world series between Baltimore of the International League and St. Paul of the American Association was called at the end of the thirteenth inning Saturday on account of darkness, the score standing tied at six all. It was a wild game, starting out as a farce and ending in a pitching duel between Thomas of the Orioles, who relieved Jackson in the fourth inning, and Fittery, a left hander, who was sent to the rescue of Faeth in the sixt inning. Each team has won a game.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

SECOND GAME NOTES

Lindstrom, Harris and Peckinpaugh Sparkled in the Field.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—(Canadian Press).—Two sparkling fielding plays featured Sundays' game. In the fourth inning Bluege sewed a base hit tag on a screaching grounder past third but Lindstrom threw himself far to the left, snared the ball and got his man. Manager Harris, of the Senators duplicated this feat in the final inning and saved the game for the Washington team when he took Meusel's grounder in his gloved hand, just back of first base, and threw Meusel out.

Peckinpaugh also produced a fielding feature which compares favorably with plays of Lindstrom and Harris, when he picked up Lindstrom's hot grounder in the eighth and from an awkward position tossed his man out.

Marberry surely lived up to his reputation as a relief hurler when he halted the Giant rally in the ninth. He came in with the score tied and the winning run on second base and Jackson at bat. He fanned Jackson on three pitched balls.

Manager Harris increased his already somewhat heavy hold on the fans affection with a drive in the fifth that took him all the way around the cushions and squared Washington's count with the New Yorkers on home runs.

The tension apparently was broken yesterday for the crowd acted like a regular every day crowd, cheered and booed to its hearts content. The customary seventh inning stretch produced fights and plenty of action in the bleachers.

JUNIOR PACKERS WIN ON PENALTY

Defeated Massey By 1 to 0 in Bradburn Cup Game Saturday.

GAME WAS CLOSE

The C.P.C. Juniors met the Masseys on King Edward Park on Saturday afternoon in the first round of this competition and a keenly contested game ended in a narrow victory for the Packers by one goal to none which was scored by Walley James from a penalty kick.

The Game.

The Packers won the toss and with the elements in their favor, and began to press through the agency of Mitchell, who made a dashing run, and sent across the goal mouth.Edgar fisted out. Downer met the return and sent just wide of the mark from the goal line. Dillingsley made a nice run and placed to Laughlin, who sent straight at goal, Bradley bringing off a great save. Halliday came to the rescue and sent out to Foster who sent high over the bar. The Packers were having much the better of it, and Edgar had a very anxious time. Strudley sent sending Mitchell and James away but Ashmore and Pulley were in fine form and averted danger by giving a corner. Mitchell took the kick, and placed among the crowd, one of the Massey players handled the ball in the danger zone. The referee who was on the pot pointed for a penalty. Walley James took the kick and gave Edgar no chance from the centre kick. The Masseys went away with a rush. Fowler sent to Evans, whose final effort missed by inches from the goal kick Chambers placed nicely to Foster and making for the Massey goal at full speed sent in a daisy butter, Edgar throwing himself full length to save and pushing the ball around the post; Mitchell took the corner and sent just wide. The Packers were busy around the Massey goal when the whistle blew for half time, with the Packers leading by one to none.

Second Half.

Upon resuming the Masseys seemed to be a new team. They put life in the game and in the first minute Bradley saved a tinging shot from Billingsley. Montgomery whose huge drives were of great advantage to the Packers, sent Mitchell away, but his centre went begging. Ashmore playing well to his forwards kept the Packers' defence on the move, and it looked a certain goal, when Evans was left unmarked, Bradley tipping the ball over the bar. Laughlin took the corner and Billingsley headed over the bar. The Masseys were having much the better of the argument and it took Bradley and his backs all their time to keep the lively Massey forwards from scoring.

The games continued fast until the call of time, and the Packers were left winners of a good and pleasant game and remain still undefeated by one goal to none.

The Teams.

WASHINGTON WIN SECOND GAME; PECKINPAUGH DROVE IN WINNING RUN AFTER GIANTS TIED IN NINTH

Spectacular Climax to Thrilling Battle Worthy of World Series Traditions.

MARBERRY CHECKED NEW YORK'S RALLY

Zachary Weakened in Ninth After Holding Giants to 4 Hits in Eight Innings.

HARRIS BRILLIANT

Senators' Leader Hit Homer With One On and Flashed on Defensive.

WASHINGTON, October 6 (Canadian Press)—Battling with the indomitable courage that carried them to their first American League pennant, Washington Senators yesterday turned the tables on the New York Giants, won the second game of the 1924 world's series, and put themselves back in the thick of one of the most stirring struggles ever staged for baseball's greatest honors.

In a flashing finish that was equally as spectacular as the climax to Saturday's opening tussle and twice as thrilling to another capacity home crowd of 35,000, Roger Peckinpaugh, veteran Washington shortstop, lifted himself to heroic heights by driving across the winning run in the ninth after the Giants had knocked Zachary, southpaw star from the mound and tied the score with two tallies in their part of the final inning..

The final score was 4 to 3, the same margin by which the first game was decided, and last night two of the "fightinest" clubs that ever met for the championship shifted their battleground to New York for the third game today.

Zachary Weakened.

Washington under the inspired leadership of its brilliant young pilot, "Bucky" Harris, seemed headed irresistibly toward victory to-day until the ninth inning and its pulse-gripping drama. Behind Zachary, who outpitched his southpaw rival, Jack Bentley after a shaky start, the Senators on the strength of a home run by Goslin in the first inning, with one on, and another circuit blow by Harris in the fifth, entered the final inning with a 3 to 1 lead. But there with triumph in his grasp, Zachary, whose slow curves had baffled the Giants and held them to one run and only four hits in eight innings, weakened and the National League champions quick to take advantage of their opportunity launched a desperate attack that, as suddenly as it flared up, was checked by Fred Marberry, relief twirler who rose heroically to the occasion by striking out Jackson on three pitched balls, with Wilson resting on second with a run that would have put the McGrawmen into the lead.

Credit To Marberry

Thus Marberry, who gained credit for the victory although he pitched only to one batsman, and Peckinpaugh whose smashing single drove over Judge with the winning run in the ninth, when another extra-inning battle seemed imminent, shared in the glory of Washingtons' world's series triumph with Harris, and Goslin, whose might bats put the Senators into a commanding lead.

The American League champions, who Saturday seemed more unnerved by the fuss and ceremony of the opening than did the Giants as a result of the scandal involving them, played with sparkling dash and spirit under Harris, whose dynamic personality and all-round brilliance stood out as one of the highest spots of the entire game.

Goslin Hit Homer.

Yesterday, the "master mind" McGraw, veteran Giant chieftain, failed in his attempt to make it two straight from the Senators. Having baffled Washington's heavy artillery of left-handed hitters in the first game with Art Nehf, veteran southpaw, McGraw, relied on his second port side star, Bentley to keep the big guns silenced. But this strategy went awry and the proof of it came in the first inning, when with two out, Sam Rice singled, and "Goose" Goslin, the team's "clean up" slugger, came through with a crashing home run into the bleachers in right centre, giving the Senators a lead that the Giants could never overcome. Bentley settled down after that and for the next seven innings he and Zachary waged a duel that was brilliantly close. Harris' homer, a shot that landed in the temporary left field bleachers, and a single by Rice in the fifth were the only hits in his seven inning span off Bentley, while Zachary allowed but two safe blows, and a run in the seventh that resulted from a pass to Kelly, Meusel's single and a double play which seemingly was deliberately employed to empty the bases at the expense of a run.

Three Double Plays.

This piece of defensive strategy, which seemed good at the time with the Senators well in the lead might have been costly had the Giants done more damage than they did in the ninth. But it also was typical of an exhibition of infield play, revolving around Harris, that scintillated from start to finish. Three rattling double plays figured in the defense that held the Giants at bay.

The first of these came in the opening inning and pulled Zachary out of the worst hole he faced until the ninth. Lindstrom and Frisch, the first two batters to face him, drove out solid singles and, with one out, the Giants filled the bases on Kelly's grounder to Harris, which the Washington pilot in his only mistake of the day threw wide to second in an effort to force Frisch. Meusel, however, brought the rally to an abrupt end when he hit sharply to Bluege and a double play followed via Harris and Judge.

Young opened the fourth with a single but Kelly slashed to Peckinpaugh, and another sortie was repulsed with a double killing.

"Rookie" A Star.

The Giants, too, shone in the field, with Freddie Lindstrom, the 18-year-old rookie at third base, as the outstanding star. Lindstrom made a startling stab of a hot shot by Bluege in the fourth inning, rolling to the ground and yet nailing his man in a play that ranks with the best the serics has yet seen. Again in the seventh, Lindstrom robbed McNeely of a hit with a fine stop and throw.

Tied Up In Ninth.

Thus, in rapid-fire fashion, the game came to its climax. Zachary paved the way for his own undoing in the ninth when he developed a sudden streak of wildness and walked Frisch, the first man to face him. Young popped out ;Kelly, hero of the Giants' victory Saturday followed with a long single to centre on which Frisch scored by an eye-lash in a daring race for the plate. Harris, momentarily, checked the rally when he made a remarkable one-handed stab of Meusel's sharp hit toward right and threw him out at first. Kelly got to second, however, and came home with the tying run, on another close play when Wilson singled.

This was the end for Zachary, but Marberry, enacting the role of relief pitcher in which he has starred all season, was equal to the emergency and fanned Jackson, for the third out, with three swiftly delivered strikes.

Washington, thus narrowly averting disaster, made short work of their last and winning attack. Judge walked, was sacrificed, perfectly by Bluege and raced across the plate amid a wild tumult when Peckinpaugh drove one of Bentley's curves far into left field. Meusel made a vain attempt to catch the runner at the plate but it was too late and Gowdy did not even make an attempt to get his man.

MONTREAL'S SQUAD SURPRISED TIGERS

M.A.A.A. Held the Champions to 11 to 10 Score in Rugby Opener.

MONTREAL, Oct. 6—Bryan Timmis blocked Gardners' punt on the Montreal 10-yard line two minutes before the end of the Hamilton-Montreal Interprovincial Rugby League game here Saturday. Booth was nailed for a rouge on the play, and thus the Tigers broke a 10-10 deadlock and beat the local Big Four club in the opening game of the season by 11-10. It was not a brilliant football exhibition, being marred by frequent fumbles and misplays, but excitement was maintained through the swaying of the tide, as the fortunes of one and then the other team had the ascendancy. Dr. Quinn on the Hamilton half line starred for the visitors, while Art Evans, former Tiger half-back, showed for Montreal, his field goals being equally spectacular to that sent between the posts earlier in the game by Quinn. The fine showing of Montreal against the Tigers was a surprise, as the Hamilton team started the game favorites.

Hamilton trotted out a somewhat changed team from last season, but one which proved equally as popular as others which have represented the Tigers, For Montreal, the team was an agreeable surprise Conceded little change before the game, they showed vast improvement over their performance of the previous week. The backs were particularly good, while the light line fought gallantly. Plays, though a few were mussed up, generally went with a snap.

Tigers earned their victory by dogged aggressiveness from start to finish and a superiority in punting and the use of outside wings. But it was a hard game for Montreal to lose.

Defeated Orillia in Second Game of the Senior O.B.A.A.

ORILLIA, Oct. 5.—Oslers advanced to the final with Galt for the Ontario championship by defeating Orillia 11 to 0 here Saturday afternoon. Orillia played good ball behind Cloutier for five innings but in the sixth they reverted back to their old form and seven runs was the result. Orillia only got two hits off Lewis and one off Spring who was put in to get his arm in condition for the next games with Galt. Breen played sensational ball in the field and Dodds and Egan led the winning batters. Cloutier's work was the only good feature of the Orillia team.

TWO STRAIGHT AGAINST LEAFS

Toronto Team Will Now Meet Brantford in the Finals of Juvenile Series.

McCormicks of Toronto, made it two straight against Maple Leafs in the O.B.A.A. juvenile semi-finals at Toronto on Saturday, by scoring the only run of the game. The Toronto team will meet Brantford in the finals.

Wills, the McCormick pitcher, tallied the lone counter in the third after two were out, when he hit down third base. The ball rolled along the line and went through Holland, allowing Wills to score easily. Bradley fanned the next batter.

The Leafs were given a fine reception by the Toronto crowd. Bradley, who opened strong against the Macs., and pitched brilliantly throughout the game, was accorded an ovation in the eighth when he went to work, and retired the homesters with runners at second and third.

BRIBE OFFERED

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.— President Ban Johnson of the American League made public a hitherto secret affidavit, revealing that crookedness was attempted in the first world's series ever played, when in 1903, Lou Criger, famous catcher wtih the Boston Red Sox, contesting with the Pirates, was offered $12,000 to throw games.

The affidavit relates that the attempted bribe was made by a professional gambler, introduced to Criger two years previously in the presence of John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants and Wilbur Robinson, pilot of the Brooklyn Nationals.

President Johnson said the affidavit was made by Criger in February, 1923 at a time when the famous catcher, rapidly failing in health, was starting for the west, abandoning all hope of living longer than a few weeks. Criger is still living in Nevada.

Criger in his affidavit declared he was introduced to a professional gambler by the name of Anderson, whose first name he does not recall, by Robinson in Baltimore in 1901.

According to Criger he did not see Anderson again until 1903, when he met him in the Monongahela Hotel in Pittsburgh.

Anderson, the affidavit relates, called Criger aside in the lobby of the hotel and offered him $12,000 in cash to throw the games so that Pittsburgh would win.

The famous catcher refused to have anything to do with the proposal.

ROUGH RIDERS LOST TO ARGOS

Score at Ottawa Was 5-3—Big Crowd Saw Rugby Game.

OTTAWA, Oct. 6—(By Canadian Press).—In perfect weather and before one of the largest crowds that has seen a rugby game here in years the Toronto Argonauts Saturday won the opening game of the local Interprovincial Union season when they defeated the Ottawa Senators by five to three. The game was just as close as the score indicates, and a turn of fate within the final ten minutes, rolled the tide in Argonaut's favor and robbed Ottawa of what seemed certain victory, or at the least, a tie.

The score was one all, at the end of the first period and when they changed over for half time, each had added a point, leaving it two to two. Argos went one up in the third session, and Ottawas faced a three to two score when the final period opened. The locals caught Argos in their end of the field and hemmed them in there, a series of kicking exchanges resulting in little gain for either team. Finally Sinclair punted out on a third down, from the Argonaut 15-yard line and Miller, taking the ball on the run, returned the punt behind the line. A flock of tacklers downed Reeves amid wild applause, for the tying point.

Then came the break Connel drew a penalty and Sinclair skirted the right end for twenty yards. Dinsmore shunted the play past centre when he took ten more, and the Argos board of strategy sent Hambly on for Sinclair to kick a point. Hambly booted far back to Tubman, who ran into the ball, just over the goal line. He bungled the catch and the ball bounded into touch behind the line, giving Argos a point. From the twenty yard line, Hambly made it sure a moment later when he kicked another to the dead line, bringing the total to five to three.

The game was not brilliant. It lacked the dashing, broken-field runs and spectacular plunges generally associated with the sport, but the closeness of the play made up for this and kept the huge crowd in a state of excitement throughout. It was a tense, hard battle of two teams between which there was little to choose The tackling on both sides was weak. Fear was the most effective wing man but the Ottawa line kept Captain Thom effectively bottled up for the entire game.

Bad generalship may be attributed as the chief cause of Ottawa's defeat Twice in the last period, when a point was precious, with only a few feet to go, to make a first down, they elected to kick and in both cases the range was too long to permit the punts to be effective. In the early moments of the game, from the Argo twenty yard line, a point was kicked when it appeared more advantageous to attempt a touch. Argonauts presented a much stronger team than was expected. Their half line was good and their line plunged well, at the same time holding Ottawa's fine letter than the locals did them. Hambly showed a nice boot and repeatedly outkicked Tubman, especially in the first half. Reeves was a sensation, running in the manner of Connacher. Dinsmore, Wright Sinclair, Fear and Miles were also prominent.

JOHNSON LOST OPENING GAME

Giants Seemed to be Helped By Scandal—Many Frills to First Game.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5. — In twelve innings of the best baseball that Calvin Coolidge the fan ever saw on the diamonds of Vermont or elsewhere, the Giants won the first world's series game from the Senators Saturday, 4 to 3, before a crowd estimated at 40,000.

But no team had a closer call or a more bitter fight. When the game ended the tying run was rushing toward the plate, but it never got there. George Kelly made a marvelous barehand stop of a grounder and, with the most powerful throwing arm in baseball behind it, the ball sped to first base just a flash ahead of Goslin of the Senators.

President Coolidge threw the first ball, but George Kelly threw the last one. By a hair-line decision the Senators went down fighting. The play was a fitting climax to one of the finest championship games ever played—not only in the pomp and pageantry of its setting, but in the grim battling of the two teams. Not always was it high-class baseball, but there was never a dull moment in Washington's first world's series contest.

When the story of the series is finally written, it may be found that the scandal which preceded it almost up to the first minute of play helped rather than hindered the Giants. If their spirit was broken and their pride tarnished, no one of the 40,000 spectators could detect it. On the contrary, the three men who played the most brilliant baseball for John J. McGraw were the three who were charged by one of their own team mates with having had a part in the attempt to bribe a Philadelphia player, but who were exonerated by Commissioner Landis.

Kelly, Frisch, Young All Star.

It was long George Kelly whose home run in the second inning, paired with one by Bill Terry in the fourth, gave the Giants a 2—0 lead. It was Kelly who made two spectacular plays in the twelfth and saved the game. It was Frankie Frisch who jumped into the air and cut down a line drive that would have spelled ruin if it had got past him. And it was Ross Young's single and Kelly's sacrifice fly that drove in the winning runs.

QUAKER-THISTLE DRAW IN PHELAN SOCCER GAME

Quakers' Two Clever Goals Upset the Thistles in Early Stages.

REAL CUP TIE

Thistle Forwards Versus Bain's Goalkeeping Very Thrilling.

Two goals each was the result of the Phelan Charity Cup final between the Quakers and Thistles at King Edward Park on Saturday afternoon and will meet again. Bain in goal for the Quakers was the hero of the game and Richmond unfortunate in front of goal. The Jags finished with ten men.

Features of the Play.

The Thistle were the first to make progress, and Burgess missed a glorious opening by shooting past. Immediately afterwards Gardner broke away for the Quakers, but Jackson robbed him when making track for Curtis citadel. The Scots went right back and forced two unproductive corners off Bain who made two spectacular saves. Richmond's first effort was turned around the post when the Quakers goalie threw himself outstretched across the goals to push the ball out of play. Then from the resultant corner kick he diverted the ball to Scott who punted clear. Carmichael returned the sphere to his left wing man rapidly and evading Metcalfe in the corner the Thistle player went close up against Bain. The Quakers defence men compelled him to shoot as he rolled over in midair while the ball skimmed the cross-bar. Excitement was at a high pitch as the Scots tried to convert and Bain receiving round of applause. From the goal kick, Scott showed capital control when he transferred the seige to the other end. Mayette accepting the chance made no mistake as he let drive for goal.

Quakers Opened the Scoring.

Judging the shot well, Curtis made a clever pick-up, but he was astonished when Gardner shoulder him and ball through after twenty minutes' play. Encouraged by their success the Quakers made the Jags look like lost when they overwhelmed them in defence as well as attack. The Thistle forwards made a desperate attack that was frustrated by Bain when he ran out of goal to spoil Richmond's good play.

Gardner's Magnificent Goal.

Play was keen and the players wasted no time in parting with the ball before being tackled which resulted in sky-high kicking. Scott at centre-half never left the Thistles centre-forward and was tackling, placing and punting to advantage. He placed to Gardner who in turn gave Mayette every chance to negotiate a counter that did come unexpectedly as Curtis let the ball roll out of his arms for the second goal. The Quakers goal had a charmed existence after this. Burgess beat three men in succession,. travelled into goal at fast pace to view his opponent between the sticks prevent a tally.

Richmond Out of Luck.

No sooner did this happen, Richmond heard the spectators shout "Oh!" from two long twenty to thirty yard drives. The pace was fast and Gardner, at the other end, came to grief when a lightning run was stopped abruptly by Anderson for a foul. Scott took the kick which Curtis grabbed smartly to prevent the Quakers forwards repeating the same tactics upon him. Rae and Anderson were showing great coolness under pressure, and the tide of invasion was well stemmed by the Thistle pair, otherwise the Quakers lead would have been far greater than a two-goal lead at the interval.

Half-time, Quakers 2, Thistle 0.

Half-time.

Regular cup tie methods were in evidence when the teams lined up for the second moiety. Fouls were very frequently given by the players and in this respect Williams gave away a foul outside penalty area that Richmond sent abegging to the wind. The Scots continued to hem the Quakers defence close in. They were given no mercy, no scope, no progress, and no opportunities in front of goal, which no doubt the Thistle forwards can verify, until Hotston outwitted the defence then chased closely by Honour was awarded a free kick outside the penalty area.

Richmond's Surprise Goal.

After seven minutes play, Richmond was privileged the free kick. The Quaker forwards packed up their goal, while the goalie was taken care of the vacant spot that Richmond did not choose but rattled the ball against the inside of upright, over the player's head, for the Jags' first goal. From the centre kick the whole line of Quaker forwards made things interesting around Curtis goal, and Gardner, Williams and Green failing to count from close range. On midfield play, the Quakers centre-half initiated a new move, he carried his half-backs and forwards right up against the full backs who immediately graced them that glorious position—offsides. Rae was injured and had to receive the trainer's attention.

Bain's Clever Goalkeeping.

There is no use trying to enumerate the play at this point of the game because it was a continual bombardment of the Thistle forwards against Bain in goal. The wing men on each side of Richmond were feeding him like a machine to make Bain give his best in goalkeeping. 'Twas thrilling to witness McPhail work close upon the Quakers' citadel and letting drive for goal amidst shouts of "goal," but the Quakers custodian threw himself upon the ground to tip the ball past for a fruitless corner. Jackson sent his forwards back again, then it was the Burgess-Hotston combination that found the same unsuccessful efforts nullified. Jackson retired injured leaving only ten players for the Jags. A wriggling run by the ex-Leicester Fosse player livened up matters, but the centre got too far out of position and foiled his attack thereby leaving Rae a clear field. The subsequent play was all Thistle, but at close quarters they were well held by Quakers full-backs.

Richmond Equalised.

Bain in between the sticks was the Jags' stumblingblock as he popped up from nowhere many a time to keep them from equalising, but he had to admit defeat when Anderson, now up on left wing, let Burgess beat two men with clever dribbling. He passed along the ground to his centre man, who simply tapped the sphere past the Quakers' goalie who was lying on the ground with his arms at full length for the equaliser. A few minutes later a well-contested ninety-minute cup tie finished the same as it started—no decision, 2 goals each. Quakers 2, Thistle 2.

NOTES OF THE OPENER

Johnson and Peckinpaugh Presented With Automobiles.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5. — The national capital paid homage to its idol before the first game of the world's series this afternoon.

Walter Johnson, finally come into his own, received a green Lincoln limousine from the fans of Washington. On a silver plate was inscribed: "To Walter Johnson, baseball's greatest pitcher, from his many friends of Washington, D.C., Oct. 4, 1924."

The Automobile Association of America added a life membership in the organization as a testimonial, the only other two life memberships having been given to the late President Harding and President Coolidge.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company gave the great pitcher full insurance on the car for as long as it runs. The District of Columbia license on the car is 100,000.

Johnson was not the only world's series participant honored, however. Roger Peckinpaugh of the Senators, received a tan Peerless touring car, presented by his admirers in Cleveland, his home town. The presentation was made by a delegation of Ohio fans. The town of Martinsburgh, W. Va., not to be outdone, rewarded its favorite sons, Hack Wilson of the Giants and Mure Shirley of the Senators, each of the players receiveing a gold watch.

Sam Rice came in for a different sort of reward. Secretary Wilbur of the navy pinned a medal on the breast of the Senators' fleet outfielder in recognition of "heroism under fire at Vera Crouz, Mexico."

Washington had waited long for a world's series and many of those who had tried to bring an American League pennant to the capital, and had failed, came back to see the youngster, Bucky Harris, reap his reward. Clark Griffith, who managed the Senators for many years, was present, of course in his official capacity as club president. With him were George McBride, manager in 1921, Clyde Millan, manager in 1922, and Donie Bush, manager in 1923.

Just before the Senators began their fielding practice three of baseball's greatest stars appeared in front of the Washington dugout and were snapped by the photographers. They were Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb and Geo. Sisler.

Bucky Harris called his team into the club house for final instructions before the game started and in the absence of the great Walter the photographers made a target of Mrs. Walter Johnson, the pitcher's wife, and Mrs. Johnson of Coffeyville, Kan the pitcher's mother.

The Fort Myer band of more than 100 pieces, paraded around the field, followed by a platoon of marines.

One-Eyed Connolly laid himself liable for suspension from the gate-crashers' union by selling programs. "I could have crashed the gate all right," Connolly said, "but I'm doing this for a new suit of clothes."

Buck Herzog, who only a few years ago was helping the Giants fight for a world's championship appeared in the press section to watch his old team.

The Giants seemed to have plenty of friends in the stands before the game started. As they lined up to have their picture taken they waved frequently to the spectators. After the hostilities commenced however it was much different and whatever New York cheers were sent out over the field were lost in the roar made by Washington fandom.

The cheer that greeted President Coolidge was but a whisper compared to the howl that went up when Johnson took his place in the box.

Among the fans assembled who were reported to be favoring Washington, were Mrs. Harris of Dover, Del., who has a son named Bucky on the Washington team; Mrs. Roger Peckinpaugh, Mrs. Joe Judge, Mrs. Sam Rice and Muddy Ruel's father and sister.

M'GRAW GIVES CREDIT TO NEHF

Says He Outpitched Johnson in Opening Game—Giants Got Break.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—"Nehf, in my mind, outpitched Watler Johnson Saturday and our chances of winning this series were considerably bettered, but I expect we will have a hard fight on our hands before we win," were John McGraw's sentiment after the thrilling battle at Griffith Stadium Saturday afternoon.

"We got a break in the twelfth inning," said the Giant leader, "by Rice trying to stretch his single into two bases. If he had stayed on first there would have been only one out when Goslin hit to Kelly and Harris would have crossed the plate with the tying run. As it was, Goslin's tap made the third out and gave us the game."

The Giants, wise in the ways of world's series, were jubilant but not hilarious. The dressing-room did not echo to the wild shouts that undoubtedly would have resounded from the Washington rooms had the Senators won, but the Giants dressed themselves hurriedly and with an air of being unconquerable. For a few tense moments the Senators had pressed them, but defeat was far from the minds of the National League champions after they had reached their dressing quarters and regained their usual confidence.

Cowdy the Most Jubilant.

The most jubilant of the lot, perhaps, was Hank Gowdy, the veteran catcher, who has been through the struggles of the baseball classic many times. He acted as if he had won his first game in the big leagues. He started his celebration when Kelly tossed to Terry for the last out, throwing his big catcher's mitt in the air and rolling over on his back, and he kept it up with laughter and shouts while he capered around the dressing-room.

Artie Nehf, the slight little left-hander who had beaten the great Walter Johnson, was in a happy frame of mind, but, realizing that he must bear other burdens before the series ends, he was the most quiet of the lot. The others came up to him and slapped him on the back, shouting words of praise in his ear, but the little fellow sat calmly unlacing a shoe, receiving the congratulations with hardly more than a smile.

Each of the players in turn expressed the belief that it was one of the greatest games in which he had ever played, but there was an atmosphere of confidence that prevailed.

Praise For Johnson.

"Johnson pitched a wonderful game and no one should expect anything more from him," said Manager Harris. "With men on bases he was almost invincible and Kelly's and Terry's home runs would have been caught on a larger field. I am not finding fault with anything in the game. Of course, we would liked to have won, but the series isn't won in a single contest and we gained a lot of experience and confidence that will stand us in good stead in the long struggle ahead.

"We're not beaten. Instead, I think we are on our way to winning."

The rest of the Washington players were in much the same frame of mind. Each seemed to have his own particular grievance for something he had left undone when the opportunity presented itself. Goslin and Judge bemoaned the fact that their drives in the tenth inning with the winning run on second base were foul.

McNeely couldn't forget the fumble in centre field and the wide throw that allowed the Giants to get their second run in the twelfth. Rice wished that he might have had just a stride more speed in trying to stretch his hit to two bases and Ruel wished that he might have driven Peckinpaugh home with the winning run in the ninth.

Johnson In Tears.

Over in one corner of the room sat Walter Johnson. The big fellow, who had labored so energetically through twelve long innings, drooped with fatigue and there were almost tears in his eyes as he said he had given everything he had to win.

"It was hard to lose," the big fellow murmured. "I would have given anything in the world to have won that game for Washington and the people who have expected so much of me. But I gave them everything I had and it wasn't good enough. I'm tired — you bet I'm tired—but I'll be all right again in a little while and I'm ready to go back in there any time Bucky wants me to — to-morrow if he says so." And the big pitcher's low lip quivered with emotion.

There was no player on the Washington team that took the defeat so much to heart. Rice, Judge, Goslin, Peckinpaugh, almost a hero, and the rest will be able to play again, but Johnson must wait before he will be able to face the Giants again. The others have several games to play, but Johnson may have only one more chance.

FIRE IN MEAT SHOP

Sunday Morning Blaze at Ingersoll of Unknown Origin.

INGERSOLL, Ont., Oct. 6.—Fire of mysterious origin was discovered early Sunday morning at the rear of William Carrolls' meat shop on Thames street Neighbors in the immediate vicinity gave the alarm about five o'clock and while the main portion of the store was saved, there was, nevertbless, considerable damage to the rear portion. Some time ago fire started in the same place and in apparently the same manner.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

"The meanest man in the world lives in California," said Gene Stratton-Porter, noted American authoress, during the filming of her production of her famous book, "A Girl of the Limberlost."

Mrs. Porter personally supervised the production.

"The cat of a friend of mine," continued Mrs. Porter, "every morning seemed to catch several humming birds. One morning she trailed the cat to some fruit trees of a neighbor. Here she discovered that little spring mouse traps had been fastened near the ripening fruit so that the humming bird would be caught by the leg when it came to peck the fruit, as humming birds do.

"It's bad enough to kill a humming birds, but to torture it by allowing it to hang by a broken leg in a mouse trap until a merciful cat comes along and kills it is inexcusable."

It might be added that the mouse trap catching of humming birds ceased at once after the facts were told to Mrs. Porter.

Aside from being the most outstanding figure among woman writers, Mrs. Porter has an international reputation as a naturalist. Many years of her life were spent in the woods, where she learned to understand the ways of bird, animal and plant life at first hand. Her books are illustrated with pictures she took herself in the exact spots which form the locale of the stories.

"A Girl of the Limberlost," in which pretty Gloria Grey enacts the featured role of Elnora Comstock and Emily Fitzoy that of the heart broken mother, Kate Comstock, is declared to be one of the most vivid photodramas of years. Directed by James Leo Meehan, it incorporates all of the dramatic incidents of Mrs. Porter's justly celebrated novel.

The picture will be presented at the Regent Theatre to-night.

AT THE CAPITOL.

ROBERT B. MANTELL IN GREAT ROMANTIC ROLE AT CAPITOL TO-DAY AND TUESDAY.

Famous Star Plays Cardinal Richelieu in Thrilling Drama of Intrigue and Love.

The great handicap that even the most famous stars are laboring under on the stage, will be shown vividly to-night at the Capitol, when Robt B. Mantell, the eminent tragedian, appears as Cardinal Richelieu in "Under the Red Robe." Most people have seen the famou actor in this great character on the stage; Richelieu, the all-powerful Cardinal, whoses lightest whim ruled France, surpassing even the authority of the King, his insatiable lust and greed, his terrible deeds to further his ambitions—these can only be suggested on the legitimate stage, but on the screen each move of the great Cardinal's schemes and the far-reaching results are vividly shown as only the camera can tell a story. Gorgeous scenes in the gay court of King Louis tell of the romance of those wonderful days. In his palace Richelieu sits scheming—schemes that bring shame and death to hundreds, cause wars, massacres, assassinations and suicides, and bring glory to few. All these go to make up the greatest screen productions ever shown in Peterborough. Filled with real thrills hair raising plots and gallant deeds "Under the Red Robe" is a fit picture for the work of Robert Mantell, the great tragedian, whose potent charm and wondrous art have made his name a house-hold word for more than twenty five years. In "Under the Red Robe" Mr. Mantell is supported by Alma Rubens, Genevieve Hamper and a remarkable cast of well known screen players. Undoubtedly those who saw him as Richelieu at the Grand Opera House on Friday night will be interested in comparing the work of this famous star on the stage with his apeparance on the screen in "Under the Red Robe." A comedy, Pathe News, and the Capitol orchestra, complete an exceptionally long and excellent programme. As the feature is ten full reels in length patrons are requested to come early as the evening performance will commence promptly at eight o'clock. Matinees at 2.30 sharp.

BEAUTIFUL DRESSES FIGURE IN FILM.

They Are Vital to "The Rejected Woman," Featuring Alma Rubens and Conrad Nagel.

Women and girl who love beautiful things—which means ten out of every ten—will have a treat in the negligees and fancy costumes worn by Alma Rubens, the star, and Leonora Hughes, the internationally known dancer who will be seen in "The Rejected Woman," which comes to the Royal Theatre to-day and remains for three days.

Inasmuch as this picture has as its keynote the desire of all girls for lovely things, Distinctive Pictures Corporation obtained the services of the most prominent dress designer in New York — Adrian, who does the work for the Music Box Revue and the other smart fashion productions of the Metropolis. Adrian is a 21-year-old boy who studied in Europe and who at the age of 19 had achieved foremost rank in the New York field of design.

Herewith is a brief description of four costumes which he prepared for use in "The Rejected Woman."

The Spanish costume worn by Alma Rubens in the masked ball scene is of soft ivory-white (wedding ring velvet) with a tight bodice and a three-tiered skirt. The skirt is ornamented with three exquisite white velvet roses, each petal being lined with black silk. Miss Rubens wears a high Spanish comb from which falls a rare old Spanish lace shawl, cascading to the floor and forming a long train.

Miss Ruben's Negligee.

Wedding ring velvet of creamy color is also employed in the making of the long, clinging negligee which Miss Rubens wears in her Long Island home in the picture. The neck line is slightly off the shoulders and is bordered by a narrow band of ermine. The negligee closely follows the lines of the figure in true Princess style from a rounded up cape of the velvet which only appears in the back. An exquisite flounce of pale ecru swings to the ground and into a long train. The whole effect, half revealing, half concealing, is a masterpiece of grace.

From the waistline a lovely handmade lavender French rose combined with silver foliage and buds trails almost the length of the skirt.

Leonora Hughes' Gowns.

The fancy dress costume worn by Miss Hughes and designed by Adrian is of mauve and blue georgette. The uneven skirt line is trimmed with garlands of pink and blue wistaria, and frames the hips, catching together the soft fichu. From the cavalier hat, long sweeping plumes of pink and lavender form a soft setting for the dancer's radiant countenance.

One of the most daring negligees imaginable is that worn by Miss Hughes in the scene in her home. It is a sleeveless negligee of black satin and sheer black lace, adorned simply with white gardenias. This was designed by Adrian. Miss Hughes also wore in "The Rejected Woman" one of her own designs for a dancing gown. This is of filmy white georgette over white georgette. An unusually deep collar of the material practically forms the top of the bodice and wing-like sleeves. This is bordered by opalescent pearl sequins. The skirt is of many petal points of georgette and has the same trimming.

Miss Rubens wears in the picture several wonderful fur coats provided by Jaekel's Fifth Avenue store, New York.

The stunning gowns and lavish settings in this picture, together with the remarkable acting on the part of Alma Rubens and Conrad Nagel, who is co-starred, make this photoplay a thing which no woman should miss seeing.

LEATHER PUSHERS AT ROYAL

The new series of "Leather Pushers" now running at the Royal have "caught on" with the many patrons. The applause that greets the title is proof of their popularity. They are decidedly worth while features and add variety and novelty to the programme. "Girls will be Girls" is the title of to-day's 'round' at the Royal.

"SQUIBS" BACK FOR HER HONEYMOON AT ROYAL THURSDAY.

"Squibs," as Betty Balfour is known, never fails as a comedienne. In "Squib's Honeymoon" at the Royal Thursday she is at her best. Wedding bells, a wild whirl of happiness, cutting the cake, bidding adieus, the express for Dover-Calais, Paris. Parisians do not speak Cockney, and funny things can happen—for instance! Well, every honeymoon is a great adventure, and Squibs has her greatest in more senses than one.

ARE YOU A FRIEND OF JACK MINER?

If not, let's get acquainted, because his is a friendship you will cherish always. Jack Miner, the Bird Man, as he is known throughout Canada and the United States. Perhaps Mr. Miner is best known through his wild geese, but all birds are his friends. His motion pictures tell the story of the wild goose. The charm of his other birds can best be learned by visiting his home at Kingsville.

Go there some June morning just as day is breaking and you will realize what Mr. Miner means when he says he protects the birds.

A magic melody charms the bird lover and rewards him for his early rising. From the pine grove and the hedges around the plains of peace and in the woods beyond countless bird voices join in the matins, heralding the dawn; you recognize the joyous trilling of the robin, the sweet note of the song sparrow, the thrilling carol of the oriole; wrens, thrushes, bluebirds, vireos, representatives of all the song birds assist in the chorus. As soon as the first beams of light appear all is hushed. Perhaps this morning chorus is their way of thanking Mr. Miner for the protection he offers them. Amid the thick branches of the pines and in the hedges they rest and brood in happy, peaceful security. During the day the cardinal bird adds a touch of colour with his brilliant plumage. The purple martins gather in friendly converse at evening about their aerial homes. From the distant fence corner Bob White discloses his presence with his staccato whistle.

Mr. Miner himself will tell you just what splendid friends the birds are and how they add their quota to the wondrous beauty of creation, when he comes to Peterborough.

"RICHARD THE THIRD"

The veteran Shakespearian actor, Robert Bruce Mantell, gave his third performance at the Grand Opera House on Saturday evening, in "Richard the Third". Although Mantell's admirers might doubt that he could better his previous night's superb presentation of Cardinal Richelieu, his portrayal of the role of the cruel Richard was probably his best performance, and evoked constant applause from his audience. The wonderful mimic powers of this fine actor, his splendid voice and majestic stage presence, which had such scope in the part of Richelieu, were subordinate to the crafty strength of the Hunchback Richard, climbing to a throne over the bodies of his murdered nephews.

Robert B. Mantell and his group of talented actors will long be remembered in Peterboro for their splendid portrayal of the works of the immortal Bard of Avon.

Another season's work for this popular city organisation is about to begin. During the past few weeks the board of directors of the choir has been hard at work preparing plans for a larger and more enthusiastic organisation. The first rehearsal will be held to-morrow night, 7th October, at the Greene Music Hall at 8 o'clock, and a full attendance of members and intending members is urged. At the close of this rehearsal, a social hour will be held.

QUESTIONS IN ACT.

United States Anxious To Trace Course Of Certain Liberty Bonds.

TORONTO, Oct. 6.—(Canadian Press).—Doubts were raised in the Supreme Court of Ontario to-day regarding the validity of Section 50 of the Ontario Evidence Act which has stood upon the statute books of the Province for forty years without question, and under which the United States Government recently secured an order for the examination of H. S. Osler, K.C., formerly president of the Continental Trading Company. The order was obtained for the purpose of tracing certain liberty bonds said to have been purchased for the company in New York and believed to have reached the hands of A. B. Fall.

A. W. Anglin, K.C., counsel for H. S. Osler and other witnesses who are wanted to testify on commission in this action against Mammoth and Sinclair oil interests, stated before Mr. Justice Ross that the Act is ultra vires of the Ontario Government. As this point cannot be argued without the presence of counsel for the Province, the matter was adjourned until October 16.

The point was raised when two motions came before His Lordship, one for the committal of Mr. Osler for refusing to testify, and the other to set side an order made by Mr. Justice Wright acting under the section in question, requiring Mr. Osler to attend for examination.

OBITUARY.

MISS ELLA CROWLEY.

The death occurred on Saturday morning last, at the residence of her sister, at 6 Inverlea street, of Ella Crowley.

The deceased, who was ill for a short time previous to her demise, was born in the Township of Douro, near Nassau. After teaching school in Peterboro and Norwood, for a number of years, during which time she made a host of friends, she graduated from the Peterboro Business College, and accepted a position with the Craddock-Simpson Company, of Montreal, which position she held until very recently, when advised by her physician to take a rest. Her parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Crowley.

Survivors are five sisters and one brother: Mrs. S. Redmond, of Otonabee; Mrs. W. J. Dupree of Rochester, N.Y., Miss Suzanne, R.N., of Toronto, and the Misses B. and Mary at home, and James Crowley, of Douro.

The funeral will take place at nine o'clock to-morrow morning to St. Peter's Cathedral and St. Peter's Cemetery.

JAMES SUMNER FUNERAL.

The funeral of the late James Sumner took place on Thursday, October 2nd, from his late residence, 103 Rubidge Street, and was conducted under the auspices of the Great War Veterans' Association, to All Saints' Church, where services were conducted by the Rev. J. D. Paterson. Interment was in Little Lake Cemetery, where the deceased was buried in the newly acquired G.W.V.A. plot, being the first Comrade to be laid to rest therein. Captain Whatley conducted the military ceremony, followed by the Last Post.

The late James Sumner, who met his death from illness caused by a gunshot wound in the right arm, received while he was hunting in the woods at North Monaghan, came to Canada eighteen months ago, and in that time had made a large circle of friends, both in North Monaghan and the city. He was a member of the Grey Birds' football team and took a keen interest in sports. He had seen service of over four years in the Royal Navy during the Great War, and was at Scapa Flow during the sinking of the German fleet.

The deceased is survived by a wife and child. His father and mother and two brothers, residing in England, also survive.

Among the many floral tributes at the grave were the following: Anchor, from his chums, Tom and Albert; Broken Circle, from Mr. and Mrs. Slater and family; Cross, from Dolly, Addie and Daisy Howden; Wreath, from Mr. and Mrs. Dawson; Wreath, from friends of Orpington Road: Anchor, from the Thistle Football Club; Wreath, from C.P.C. TURKS FORCING GREEKS TO QUIT CONSTANTINOPLE

Passports for 36,000 Issued for This Month—Fate of Rest Uncertain.

FIGHTING IN IRAK

Earthquake Killed 202 Persons and Destroyed Many Thatched Houses.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Turkey, Oct. 7.—Thirty-six thousand Greeks must leave Constantinople this month, says Tewfik Ruchidi Bey, retiring member of the Turkish commission for the exchange of populations. Sixteen thousand passports have been issued and 20,000 more are in preparation. The remaining 150,000 Greeks in Constantinople are wondering what will be their fate.

The Turkish agents sent to Salonikl to supervise the embarkation of Turks for the Ottoman republic met with strong objection on the part of the Moslems, who were mostly artisans desiring to go to Constantinople instead of to the cities in Asia Minor, to which the Government wishes to send them.

Constantinople is suffering from business depression and already contains too many unemployed artisans. The many widows in the party will be sent to Ouchak, Sparta and Kuthula, where they will be taught rug making in an effort to hold the rug business lost with the departure of the Greeks.

The frontiers of Irak (Mesopotamia) promise to form a source of contention for a long time to come. The dispute over them has not changed since the treaty of Lausanne was negotiated. The Turks want a plebiscite to be taken to determine whether the Kurds desire to belong to Turkey, while the British want a commission to decide the matter. Meanwhile each side proclaims its wish to maintain the status quo, but at the same time each accuses the other of violation. Probably both sides are at fault because the frontiers are not determined and the moving tribes recognize no government.

Bombing Picture in Papers.

The British are defending Irak with a fleet of airplanes, the results of whose bombing operations are shown pictorially in Turkish newspapers. The dispute does not seem to be a question of the possession of the Mosul oil fields, which are 500 miles from the sea, but so far as concerns the British it is a matter of maintaining communication with the east, of protecting the Persian frontier and of having a point far enough north to counteract a possible Russian expansion to the south. Mesopotamia contains one of the most important west and east caravan routes.

The Turks look upon the Kurds as Turkish and admit Kurd deputies to the Angora parliament. The danger from the dispute over Irak is not greater now than at other periods of the negotiations, but it is certain that Turkey will not be as easily resigned to lose that province as it was to losing other portions of the empire. The suggestion has been made that the affair could be settled by a compromise as to the northern frontier and giving a Turko-British company the right to exploit the oil fields.

British Air Raids Reported.

The Turkish secretary of foreign affairs asserts that British airplanes are continually attacking populations and troops in territory under Turkish occupation, causing important losses. The newspaper Tanine says that British air raids were made sixty miles north-west of Mosul. There, it declares, twelve Bristol fighters machine-gunned 2,000 Turks and Mosisem tribesmen. The air squadron was commanded by Dudley Cresbie, assisted by six lieutenants and ten artillerymen.

Before the raid the Turkish troops had joined with the tribesmen to force back British patrols that were attempting to force the district to pay taxes for crossing the Hazil River. The Turks obliged the patrol to retire in disorder to Amadia. The Turks were told to withdraw behind the "frontier" but refused. Thereupon the air raid was made.

'Quake Causes 202 Deaths.

The earthquake on the eastern border of Turkey caused 202 deaths, destroyed 3,872 habitations entirely and 2,500 partly. Many cattle were lost. The condition of the inhabitants is deplorable as they are without shelter and must face the coming winter without roofs over their heads. The monetary loss is not great as the houses were mainly of mud and thatch. President Mus-

PORTUGAL REPORTS

PRIEST PADDLED CANOE IN VALCARTIER FLOOD

Bridge Unsafe By Rise Of Water On Sunday.

QUEBEC, Oct. 7. — (Canadian Press).—So great were the floods in the Valcartier region Sunday that the small bridge spanning the river was affected and the Cure had to go to church in a canoe.

It is also reported that the power house was flooded and its operations seriously affected. A number of men were kept busy relieving the pressure by the use of a bucket brigade.

A grocery store located at some distance from the village proper was badly flooded, the floor being literally ripped from its foundations by the action of the water.

LIQUOR PIRATE OFFERS TO TELL

Phaff Asserts Disclosures Would Make New York Dry in Month

LIST OF SMUGGLERS

PARIS, October 7. — Sensational details of the liquor smuggling busines, showing how French and British liquor concerns finance the rum runners, will be divulged at the hearing Wednesday of Max Jerome Phaff, alleged pirate of the steamer Mulhouse, who has admitted to the authorities:

"I am an honest bootlegger, but never was a pirate."

The American authoriti s will keep their hands off the Phaff case. Although the smuggler sent a message to United States Attorney Hayward, saying "If you will act in my behalf I will hand you information which will enable you to make New York dry in one month," it is understood that Col. Hayward has decided against making any pact with the self-confessed breaker of the American law.

Has List of Smugglers.

Attorney Gide, Phaff's lawyer held up a typewritten paper, two yards away from my eyes, and said:

"Do you see that list? Well, every smuggler owning a motor yacht in New York is on that list."

He refused to divulge the list on the ground that he is bound by professional secrecy.

Well informed circles here expect that the preliminaries of the Phaff trial at Brest will last for months with his ultimate release for lack of evidence because the company, "Morue Francaise," owning the largest liquor fleet, with headquarters at the Miquelon Island, refuses to display the log book of the steamer Mulhouse and other evidence which might aid in convicting Phaff on the piracy charge.

"Tarred with the Same Brush."

Phaff's lawyer said:

"It is a case where the accusers and the accused are both tarred with the same brush."

Gide also says that he has evidence showing how big French and American cognac and whiskey distillers finance huge fleets of rum boats, retaining intimate interest in the business of the bootleggers ashore.

ACCUSED OF THEFT.

Mounted Policeman Arraigned at Regina on Charge of Stealing $1,000.

REGINA, Sask., October 6. — Constable Walter Balshaw, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, was arraigned in the city police court to-day on a charge of stealing $1000 from the Regina offices of the Assistant Receiver General. No plea was taken and the case was remanded to Friday.

ALDERMAN HAS PROTEST ABOUT CHIEF NEWHALL

Enquires Whether Head of Police Department is Still City Employee.

AT COUNCIL MEETING

Protest to Government Regarding Central Issue of Motor Licenses.

"Is the Chief of Police still in the employ of the city?" demanded Alderman Stocker as the members of the City Council were reaching for their hats preparatory to leaving last night's meeting. On being assured by Mayor Turner that Chief Newhall is still head of the City Police Department, the Alderman continued:

"He spent a week at Ottawa and a week at Montreal, and a Toronto evening newspaper carried an article about him having a high old time at Rice Lake. The force complains about being short-handed, but he has only been here for Mackenzie King's visit and to two Commission meetings. It would be interesting to know how often the police car has gone to the summer resort recently."

Mayor Turner: "I asked the Chief whether he was at the cottage and he said yes. It is not considered as a vacation but he is sleeping there, I understand."

Alderman Stocker: "Yes, and the police car takes him up and down? There was no intention of using that car for joy riding."

The Council adjourned.

Motor Licenses.

It was moved by Alderman Maher and seconded by Alderman Morrison:

"Whereas it has been suggested that the method of issuing licenses for motor cars be changed and that all such licenses be issued in Toronto,

"And whereas the proposed change would cause serious inconvenience to all owners of motor cars outside of Toronto, who would be compelled to have the required declarations taken before a justice of the peace or other qualified person and forward them with money orders or marked cheques to Toronto,

"And whereas under the present system the records of the ownership of locally owned cars are readily accessible for the police force, which is an advantage for the force and in the enforcement of teh law.

"And whereas the present method of issuing the licenses is satisfactory to the owners of motor cars in this city and in this district.

"Resolved, that this City Council request the Provincial Government not to adopt the proposed method of having the licenses issued in Toronto, and, so far as Peterboro is concerned, to continue the present way of having them issued through the local branch of the Motor League; and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Hon. the Minister of Highways and to Mr. W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P."

Hire Steam Roller.

Reeve H. B. Rye, of North Monaghan, appeared to ask the terms on which the City Council would hire the steam roller to the township. His Worship named the rate of $25 a day and the request was granted.

Reeve Rye expressed the opinion that the cleaning out of Park Street drain is not a matter for the action of the township. It had been suggested that a man be supplied by the city and one by the township. This road, Reeve Rye said, is under the care of the Suburban Area Commission.

Mayor Turner said the city intends to go ahead with the work.

Encourage Industry.

Alderman Fife urged a concession to the Canadian Nu Art Marble Co. on the grounds that this is a new venture with a bright future and should be encouraged in its infancy.

By-Laws.

Alderman Phelan introduced a by-law to fix the salaries of the assistant treasurer and stenographer as recommended in the Finance Committee report.

C.P.R. Engine Ran Away Crashing Into Box Cars

SASKATOON, Sask., Oct. 6.—Twelve persons had a narrow escape from death or serious injury early this morning when a Canadian Pacific Railway train, scheduled to leave at 7 o'clock, for Regina and Moose Jaw, ran away from the station, and did not end its trip until it had smashed into five box cars at Sutherland, travelling the intervening three miles without an engineer or fireman in the cab. No one was hurt, and beside the damage done to the box cars, the only damage was to the engine.

FACTORY GIRL DISCOVERED AS "GENIUS MIND" IN INTELLIGENCE TEST PLANS CAREER OF SERVICE

Meutal Cinderella an Obscure Worker in Plymouth (Mass.) Cordage Plant.

BRAINS AND BEAUTY

Bewildered Scientists at Harvard—Won't Consider Opportunity in Business.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 7.—Muriel Black, the "mental Cinderella" found hidden behind a small-salaried job in a Plymouth cordage plant, is not going to let sudden fame change her self-mapped course of life.

Long before a serious-faced group of scientists had crowned her with the title of "genius" she had determined to play fair godmother to the unhealthy, undernourished and mentall defective children of mill towns.

She was thus engaged in trying to build anew the warped little minds when a survey of industrial workers, sent out by the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, happened along and discovered in this pretty 24-year-old girl a "genius mind."

The tests, upon which Miss Black scored 175, were such as to have stumped some of the keenest executives. Her showing literally staggered the genius searchers. She was hailed as a young woman of amazing brain capacity and personality.

Already the eye of big business concerns are upon her. Heads of great corporatoins are ready to bid for her service. One executive declared she would be worth $50,000 in a few years.

Follows Own Plans

At all of which Muriel Black smiles perplexedly and protests:

"I'm not a genius at all. There's not a thing unusual about me. I've just been trying to get an education so that I may do things I have dreamed about since I was a little girl.

"Wealth and power! They do not interest me in the least. I really don't care about them. I want to study medicine and specialize in children's diseases, or probably in industrial ills. When I was a little girl I planned it all out and one day I met a woman physician and my dream for useful effort unfolded. That is what I am going to do."

And there is every reason to believe her dreams will come true. For many will be more than willing to help her and, if she does consent to take high-salaried positions in other lines, it will be to pave the way for realizing her ambition.

The story of her discovery is another variation of the Cinderella tale.

Took Night Course

She did welfare work with a railroad company, had a physical culture course in a girls' school, managed a taxi company and finally wound up in the little town where the Pilgrims landed working among the children of the mill hands and making enough money to take a night course in social psychology at Boston University.

Some time ago the Associated Industries began an 18-months survey of a number of factories to find evidence of misplacement or of unusual ability among workers. No "genius class" people hove in sight, but 2 boys were considered worthy of study—and, of course, Muriel.

They were taken to Harvard University and the intelligence tests applied. Of the 20 boys one went as high as 159—marking him unusually intelligent —while Muriel hit a high score of 175 which gave her a potential mental capacity greater than many leaders in business and thought.

She bewildered the scientists with her ready reasoning, excellent judgment, clear-headedness, and good common sense.

But to Muriel Black, all this means merely a quicker and better opportunity to bring health and happiness of children who haven't had a chance.

BEAUTIFUL BUT NOT "DUMB"

MISS MURIEL BLACK.

WORKERS' STATE IS LABOR GOAL

A. F. of L. Delegate Recites Program of British Trades Unions.

MANY OBSTACLES

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The recent British Trade Union Congress held at Hull, England, adopted The Workers' Charter, a summary of fundamental reforms desired by British labor. Peter J. Brady, President of the Federation Bank of New York, who attended the congress as the delegate of the American Federation of Labor, detailed these reforms as follows:

"Nationalization of land, mines, minerals, railways; a legal maximum working week of forty-four hours; a legal minimum wage for each industry or occupation; adequate maintenance of unemployed; training facilities for adults during industrial depressions; proper housing; free education by the State from the elementary school to the university; maintenance and compensation for industrial accidents and disease; pensions for all at the age of sixty; pensions for widowed mothers and dependent children."

Mr. Brady added:

"The putting into effect of this programme is what every Labor Government in Great Britain will try to do, little by little.

Predicts Sympathetic Hearing.

"Whether these far-reaching demands can be granted is another matter, but the delegates will at least find sympathetic audience for they will be addressing a member of their own political party and often a former leader of their particular union, or at least a colleague or

DRY AGENTS JAILED FAIR BOOTLEGGERS

Easy Money Lures Women In West Virginia To Make Whiskey.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Oct. 7. —Dazzled by the wealth and luxury in which successful bootleggers revel, women in large numbers are turning to manufacturing and selling moonshine whiskey in West Virginia.

This is the belief of officials of local branches of the State Prohibition Department and of Federal dry authorities.

As proof of their contention, they point to the scores of arrests of the fairer sex throughout the State in recent weeks on charges of dealing extensively in the illicit business of making and disposing of liquor.

In two days recently reports from prohibition agents all over the State told of the arrest of sixteen women on whiskey charges. The women violaters in the majority of cases, officials said, when meted out punishment commensurate with their misdeeds, regardless of sex.

POLLING TODAY IN BY-ELECTION

Both Camps Regard Result in Northumberland, N. B., as Uncertain.

STRENUOUS FIGHT

MONCTON, N.B., Oct. 7.—(Canadian Press).—Last night saw the close of the Federal by-election campaign in Northumberland, so far as meetings are concerned, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. John Morrissy. Both sides have put up a strenuous fight on the eve of voting, which takes place to-day.

Neither side is very confident of victory. It is generally conceded that the result will be close. That the Liberals regard the result as uncertain is evidenced by the fact that last night they had arranged for meetings in the big centres. Newcastle and Chatham, advertised to be addressed by Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice; Hon. A. B. Copp, Secretary of State; Hon. Charles Murphy, Postmaster-General; Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor; Hon. P. J. Veniot, Premier of the Province, the candidate, V. B. Snowball and others. The Conservatives also held meetings at important centres.

TWO YEARS FOR DRUNK.

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 6. — A sentence of two years in the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph was imposed to-day upon Donald Laughlin, 45 years old, when he pleaded guilty of drunkenness. According to police records Laughlin has been in court on drunk charges more than 20 times in a few months.

THRESHING RESUMES.

Weather Clears Over Prairies and Grain Rapidly Drying.

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 7. — Following a day of clearing sky and drying winds, the farmers in many sections of Saskatchewan and Alberta were preparing last night to resume threshing operations which were seriously interrupted by rain and snow during the latter part of the week.

Several points in Saskatchewan reported snow during Friday but with good weather over the week-end the grain was rapidly drying out. In Manitoba and sections of Eastern Saskatchewan there were exceptionally heavy rainfalls during the week-end, the former provinces having drenching rains at all points, and it will not be possible to start threshing operations until Thursday or Friday. The prospects of more favorable weather were much brighter last night for Manitoba.

ELLIS TO HANG FIVE BANDITS

Last Multiple Hanging in Montreal During Rebellion of 1837.

ELEVEN EXECUTED

MONTREAL, Oct 7 — Preparations for the hanging of the five condemned Hochelaga bank bandits on October 24 next, at Bordeaux Jail are now under way, and Arthur Ellis official hangman, announced definitely Monday that there would be three scaffolds and that the men would be hanged singly from each.

Carpenters began yesterday to erect a second scaffold, there being only one permanent one in the jail at present, while on Wednesday morning work will be stated on a third, which is being brought from Valleyfield for the occasion. This third scafold will be erected on the opposite side of the big prison from the one that has always been used.

Ellis, it was stated, would not have an assistant, but would spring all the five traps himself.

The only other hanging that compares in numbers with the approaching one, occurred in 1837, during the rebellion, when eleven men were hanged at the old jail on Notre Dame street.

YOUNG KING OF HEDJAZ AGREES TO QUICK TRUCE

Elected King Monday He Abandons Claims to Caliphate Under Treaty.

TO PAY SUBSIDY

Makes Terms With Wahabis and Will Meet Sultan of Nejd on Friday.

JERUSALEM, October 7 (Canadian Press). — Emir Ali, eldest son of former King Hussein of the Hedjaz, who abdicated last week, has concluded a truce with Wahabis tribesmen.

According to the terms of the truce, Ali, who yesterday was elected King of Hedjaz, promises to abandon the claims to the Caliphate, and agrees to pay a yearly subsidy to the conquering power.

Ali, who is 42 years old, is a practical politician. He concluded the truce quickly.

According to reports received here Ali is on good terms with Ibn Saud, leader of the victorious Wahabis, and will meet Ibn next Friday in Mecca.

It is also reported that opposition to the dynasty now in power is noticeable.

Ali is recalling the delegation of five sent by Hussein to Moscow to ask help from the Soviet in his fight against the Wahabis.

Ali, it is said, will sign the Anglo-Hedjaz reaty as proposed by the British Government.

Hussein had refused to attach his signature to this document on account of a clause recognising the British mandate in Palestine for the realisation of the Jewish national homeland there.

French Wine Exporters Send Funds

THE Modernationists ask why four Provinces in Western Canada have turned down Prohibition. One reason is because the organized wine growers of France sent large sums of money to Canada to help defeat our Prohibition laws. They have been spending this money in the publication of articles in the public press misrepresenting Prohibition, by circulating pamphlets for the same purpose and in other similar ways.

Thousands of people read these articles. They were mislead by them into voting against prohibkition in favor of government control. To-day because of the awful conditions that have developed already under so-called, government control, they are awakening to the fact that they were deceived—badly deceived—by the liquor interests.

FRENCH WINE EXPORTERS CLAIM CREDIT

In the annual report of the French Wines Exportation Commission of France for the year 1923 there appeared the following:

"The year 1923 will be reckoned in Canada as one of the most striking in the history of prohibition; the anti-prohibitionist campaign, advancing from place to place, gained over two provinces, Manitoba and Alberta; two other provinces, Ontario and Saskatchewan, will soon yield to this effort. The wines exportation commission may lay claim to a preponderant share in this success as being the only French or foreign organism which brought all its forces to bear in the battle. Our action assumed the most diverse forms; drawing up of tracts, and pamphlets, editing of the latter and their distribution throughout Canada, press publication and controversies, furnishing the funds at the right moment. Quite recently we organized a campaign in British Columbia for the adoption of certain measures favorable to the sale of our productions."

THE MONEY SPENT IN PETERBORO

Will the Moderationists kindly tell us how much of the money they are spending in Peterboro for legal fees, distributing literature, newspaper advertising, committee rooms, etc., is being provided by the wine exporters of France and the liquor interests of Great Britain? In view of what the Wine Exporters Commission of France has admitted the people of Peterborough and of Ontario have a right to know.

LIQUOR CONSUMPTION DECREASED

The Wine Exporters Commission of France, has only one reason for sending money to Canada to help the Moderationists defeat the O.T.A. They have found that the O.T.A. has so decreased the consumption of their liquors, their market is being destroyed. Therefore they are sending large sums of money to Canada to help defeat prohibition. In view of this information it is not to be expected that the people of Peterborough or of Ontario will allow themselves to be hoodwinked as the people in Western Canada were by the liquor interests. Therefore, they are going to

GOVERNMENT CONTROL IN QUEBEC

Remember the Mass, Public Meeting which will be held in the Grand Opera House, Thursday night. It will be addressed by E. I. Hart, of Montreal, Secretary Quebec Province Temperance Association, who by means of 75 lantern slides will prove to you how openly and shamelessly the laws in Quebec providing for the Government Control of liquor are violated and what a failure these laws are proving. Turn out and learn the facts.

PRINCE GIVEN A ROUSING WELCOME

Visited Victoria, B.C. To-day For His First Time In Five Years.

VICTORIA, B.C., Oct. 7.—(Canadian Press). — Greeted by thousands of loyal citizens who formed a dense throng from the Empress Hotel along Belleville Street to the Canadian Pacific Railway Wharf, where the Canadian Pacific Coast steamer "Princess Louise" docked a few minutes before six o'clock this afternoon, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales was given one of the most rousing welcomes here extended him on his present tour. Believing that the steamer carrying the Royal visitor would reach Victoria at 8 o'clock, the crowd started to assemble shortly after two o'clock, and waited anxiously and patiently for four hours to get a glimpse of the heir to the Throne, who is visiting this city for the first time in five years.

His plans for Monday have not been announced, aside of the fact that he has accepted an invitation from the Lieutenant-Governor to dine at the Government House. It is expected, however, that the Royal visitors will find time for a game of golf during the morning and a motor drive in the late afternoon.

NEW SIDEWALKS BUILT.

Bailieboro Extends Its Concrete Walks, Replacing Planks.

BAILIEBORO, October 7. — The citizens of Bailieboro have erected another stretch of sidewalk on College street. This makes a vast improvement to the street as the former sidewalk was made of wood and a great many of the planks were becoming loose, while others had decayed to a great extent.

Since the leaves have begun to change color, Bailieboro, with its beautiful row of maple trees along both sides of the main streets, looks its prettiest. It may well be called one of the prettiest little villages along the Provincial highway.

Rule Of Public House Forbids Second Drink

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Rules sixty years old provide that customers of the "Ship" an old-fashioned public-house near Bishopsgate, may have only one drink each, must not smoke, must not talk loudly, or in any way misbehave themselves.

The rules, which are strictly enforced, are prominently displayed in every bar.

The business was started by an ancestor Lionel Williams, the present manager. The origin of the rules is a mystery to him, but he believes they originated on religious grounds.

Chinese Society Took In The Man Who Killed David Lem.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 7.—(Canadian Press.)—The slayer of David Lem, prominent Chinese broker, was seen crossing from Windsor, Ont., to Detroit, Mich., within the last few days and the man is now under the protection of a powerful organization, according to a statement to the police by the officials of an important Chinese society. David Lem, up to the time of his assassination, was fighting the most powerful Chinese gambling organization on the continent.

DANGER IN SMALL FAMILY

Less Than Four Children Means Decline of Nation Germans Are Told.

MUNICH, Oct. 7.—"Perusing the history of man, we discover but two peoples, namely the Chinese and the Jews, that did not perish ultimately on account of rapid decline of their birth rates," declared Professor Thomsen of Munster University, speaking before the convention of the Association of Prolific Families.

Nations will slowly expand, when a standard of four children per family is kept up, the professor asserted nations with families featuring only three children or less will slowly but certainly die out, if not constantly propped up by the importation of fresh blood. He pointed out that in 1874 Germany had a rate of forty-two children for one thousand population while the birthrate declined in 1914 to 27 per thousand.

SUPREME COURT TO HEAR BANDIT CASE

Unusual Action In Montreal Follows Appeal Court's Rejection.

MONTREAL, Oct.. 7.—(Canadian Press).—Document was served on the crown here today which will bring before the Supreme Court of Canada the case of Tony Frank, Frank Gambino, Louis Morel, Guiseppe Serafini, and Mike Valentino, the five bandits who lost their fight against death sentence in the court of appeals last week and who now await execution for the murder of Henri Cleroux in the Bank of Hochelaga collection car hold-up April 1.

Announcement was made last night that the papers will be handed to R. L. Calder, K.C., crown prosecutor, and that counsel for condemned men will be in Ottawa on Friday to see to the reception of the procedure and to arrange dates for the hearing of argument by the Supemer Court.

Action by counsel leading to a hearing of the bandits' case by the Supreme Court comes as a surprise to legal circles. The possibility that the Privy Council might be approached has been ommitted. In view of the fact that the five judges of the court of appeals were unanimous last week in their rejection of the condemned men's appeal, however, was thought to have placed the Supreme Court out of consideration in view of the law which provides that, where rejection is unanimous, no direct appeal to the Supreme Court is permissable.

ROB DICE GAME OF $77,000.

Two Masked Men Force 16 to Kneel for Search at Niagara Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Oct. 7. — Two masked robbers invaded a social club at Niagara Falls early on Sunday and robbed sixteen men whom they found in a dice game, of $77,000 in cash and jewellery.

The victims were lined in a row and forced to kneel with their heads against a wall.

The robber who did the searching was most thorough. After the pockets of all had been emptied on the dice table he examined their clothes and hats.

One man reports being robbed three times. The first search emptied his vockets, the second disclosed bills pinned inside his shirt, and on the third search the enterprising robber found bils pinned inside a trouser leg. He cut the trouser leg off with a knife

The robbed victims were warned not to stir for five minutes. No one did move until the sound of the robbers moving off in an automobile was heard. Then a telephone call was sent to the police.

PAPER WATER PIPES

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7. — (United Press).—Water pipes of paper is the latest, says the Pennsylvania public service information committee. It is a French invention. The paper or pasteboard is wound around the shaft of a machine that has a tank containing adhesive material, with which the paper is coated before the actual winding takes place. The layers are coated with tar, and finally a bath of bitumen is given as a finishing coat.

MILLIONS TO CANADA.

Value of Minister At Washington Estimated By P. C. Larkin.

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 6.—"If Canada were represented by a minister at Washington, it would be worth millions of dollars a year to our Dominion," stated Hon. P. C. Larkin, high commissioner for Canada in London, in addressing members of the Canadian Club here today. Intimate trade relations with the United States surely warranted such an appointment, he maintained.

JAPANESE EAGER.

Will Explore Mongolia's Unknown Lands.

TOKIO, Oct. 7.—Tsunemichi Kiyoura, son of Viscount Keigo Kiyoura, former Premier, will lead a party of Japanese explorers and scientists into Mongolia next spring, according to plans recently announced. The purpose of the enterprise is to increase Japanese knowledge of Mongolia and to link that large and undeveloped territory more closely culturally and economically with Japan.

The scientific researches in Mongolia by the Third Asiatic Expedition of the American Museum of Natural History, under Roy Chapman Andrews, has been an incentive to Japaneses exploration in that region.

ALDERMAN HAS PROTESU

Alderman Morrison introduced a by-law to change the name of the part of Harvey Street between Antrim Street and Smith Street to Elcombe Crescent.

Alderman Maher suggested that the name be applied to the small part of Antrim Street leading from Harvey to Water Streets, and Alderman Crowe demanded the cost, saying that the City Council may be running short of funds. He was assured that the cost will not exceed $25.

The change was broached by Mayor Turner to overcome the difficulty in finding houses separated from the main part of Harvey Street by the Goose Pond.

After some discussion the by-law passed in its original form.

Alderman Morrison introduced a by-law to authorize the construction of sidewalks on certain streets. Alderman Crowe suggested a plan whereby the city might claim part of the expense by awaiting the Government unemployment assistance. The by-law was passed.

Unemployment.

An interview with the Provincial Premier on unemployment will be held on Wednesday, and the city will be represented by Alderman McIntyre, chairman of the Unemployment Relief Committee.

Views on Old Home Week.

Old Home Week for Peterboro in 1925 was broached by Mayor Turner.

Alderman Fife said he would be enthusiastic about it.

Alderman Morrison also agreed.

Alderman Crowe said many had been held around this district, and the project should lie over for two or three years.

Alderman McIntyre agreed with Alderman Crowe.

Alderman Turner suggested a committee to give the Council a report on the various plans.

Alderman Maher said he had been converted at Lindsay to the idea of having an Old Home Week, and would support it for either 1925 or 1926.

On motion of Alderman Turner, a committee, consisting of Mayor Turner, Alderman Stocker, Alderman Phelan and Mr. Armstrong, was appointed to bring in a report of the various phases of the question.

City Tax Office.

Mayor Turner said he had a conference with Mr. Green, city tax collector, in which Mr. Green said he could carry on and have the roll returned when required. Hamilton, Lindsay, Halifax and Belleville had trouble through having two tax rolls out at one time, and Peterboro is inviting difficulty in the same way. His Worship promised that he will bring in recommendations shortly.

Unemployment Conference.

Alderman Crowe reported on a conference with the Minister of Labor to discuss the unemployment situation in Ontario.

He told also of a visit to Alderman Meyers in hospital in Toronto. Alderman Meyers expects to be back in Peterboro within a few weeks.

Sewage Disposal Plant.

The sewage disposal plant should be started immediately, Alderman Crowe declared. The pump house could be built in winter and the river should be dredged at once. Factories are now slack and could be busied on making the necessary pipe.

Mayor Turner promised to take up the matter with the City Engineer, and if the plans are ready he will call a special meeting to expedite the matter.

Stop All Automobiles.

Alderman Crowe suggested a rule compelling automobiles to stop before crossing dangerous tracks and street intersections.

This practice is carried out in Windsor and Ford, where the street intersections are not manned by traffic constables.

Information will be obtained from the cities where the plan is in use.

TURKS FORCING

tapha Kemal Pasha is visiting the scene of the disaster and the American Red Cross has offered its assistance.

The earthquake came at an unfortunate period because Turkey already has nearly 100,000 Turks from Greece to shelter.

Turks to Buy Warships in U.S.

Turkey is refitting its small navy, long idle in the Golden Horn. Besides reconditioning the old units the Turks probably will buy one submarine and several destroyers in the United States.

Scout planes such as Cantain Doisy used on his flight from Paris to Tokyo will be bought in France. French and German airplane builders are competing for the Angora-Constantinople air mail line and for army contracts. Italian seaplanes are used in Turkey. The first naval units to be reconditioned are the mine layers.

Turks who have returned here from Greece are organizing because property abandoned by Greeks who fled from Turkey was not reserved to reimburse them for their losses. The newspaper Tanjne asserts that 120 families that returned from Florina, Greece, to one town in Turkey found themselves without shelter and that many of their members died of disease and exposure. Of 900 who returned to another Turkish town 250 died.

The money you make isn't half so important as the money you save. Millions of dollars are wasted on expensive, indigestible foods—foods that supply no nutriment because they are not digested. Shredded Wheat supplies the greatest amount of nutriment at the lowest cost and with the least tax on the digestion. Being ready-cooked it saves fuel, saves time, saves money. Two of these little loaves of flavory baked whole wheat with hot milk and a little cream make a perfect meal. It is the most food for the least money.

SONS OF CANADA.

If there is anything that Canada does not particularly need at the present time it would seem to be another fraternal order.

Of such there is no end in this country, and with the entry into the field of the luncheon clubs in addition to the fraternal societies the man who has not "joined" some organization or another must be an exception.

In spite of these facts, however, the launching of a new order to be called the "Sons of Canada" is to be welcomed, because, in the first place, as its name suggests, it is distinctively Canadian, and its objects are of a nature to be endorsed by every patriotic citizen.

It aims at instituting strong efforts to keep Canadians at home, to assist ambitious young Canadians who otherwise might be temped to seek opportunities and to promote lectures on subjects of peculiar interest to this country.

The "Sons of Canada" order will, of course, be non-political and non-sectarian, and if it adheres to the programme as mapped out in its organization it should be of much service to the country.

Canadians seem to lack faith in their Dominion, sometimes; they exaggerate minor setbacks, and fail to realize the possibilities before this great land.

If the new organization helps to strengthen the faith of our people in Canada and at the same time steer clear of that old selfish principle, "Canada for the Canadians"—meaning, of course, by those who use it, the native-born Canadians—its entrance into the field of fraternal organizations will be an excellent thing for the Dominion.

THE PREMIER SHOULD EXPLAIN.

Premier Ferguson could remove a great deal of uncertainty and doubt from the plebiscite campaign by uttering a few simple words.

If he would tell the people of Ontario just what particular method of Government control he proposes to establish in the event of the Ontario Temperance Act being rejected, the voters would know just where they stand

At present their choice lies between the retention of the O. T. A. or the adoption of an unexplained system of Government control.

All they know about the latter is that it is not to be the same as in British Columbia or Quebec.

The Premier has gone that far in announcing the questions to be voted on.

Why can't he go a little further and tell the people what system of Government sale he has in mind?

As the situation stands at present, they are in the dark as to the alternative policy in the event of the abandoning of the Ontario Temperance Act.

Mr. Ferguson has promised that a majority favourable to the retention of the present Act will be accepted by the Government as a mandate to strengthen the measure wherever the necessity of amendments suggest themselves and to vigorously enforce the Act.

If he would explain in detail what policy he proposes to follow if the O. T. A. is rejected the issue would be as clear as daylight.

To many people who are conscientiously endeavouring to decide how they should mark their ballots it is far from being clear at present.

NEWSPAPERS AND CRIME.

Those municipal organizations which are passing resolutions deprecating the publication of crime news in the United States newspapers because they "reflect unduly upon the integrity of a vast majority of the law-abiding people," are barking up the wrong tree.

It is not the publicity given the crimes, but the crimes themselves, that "reflect upon the integrity of the law-ambiding people."

The newspapers are not responsible; if they were to eliminate all reference to the actions of criminals there would be just as many robberies and murders as ever, and covering them up would not clean up the situation, as the Examiner sees the case.

Adequate laws, properly enforced, offer the sure way of keeping down the number of crime stories; better still, the awakening of the conscience of the community will still more effectively achieve that end.

Newspapers here, as well as in the United States, publish stories about criminals and their deeds because no matter how much they may deprecate the fact the majority of readers turn first to those very stories.

The newspapers publish what the public wants, and in so doing do not admit any responsibility.

They believe that if communities want fewer crime stories published they must see to it that fewer crimes are committed, and that criminals who are caught receive prompt and effective punishment for their misdeeds.

It would be much more to the point if the organizations that are finding fault with the newspapers would devote their attentions to urging a more strict enforcement of the law.

ONE OF RUSSIA'S PROBLEMS.

The Communist party of Russia has a method of its own to keep the revolution in active control of the situation. Before the death of Lenin it was feared that the movement was slipping from the grasp of the workers, and figures show that the fear was well founded. In 1916 59 per cent. of the party were workmen; in 1917 it was 56.7 per cent.; in 1918, 40 per cent.; in 1919, 38 per cent.; in 1920, 33 per cent., and in 1921, but 30 per cent., says the London Advertiser.

The leaders of the Communist party saw the danger, so they remedied it by the simple, yet effective, process of weeding out those who did not come from the working class, and filling up the ranks by the influx of 200,000 from the people who were opposed to a return to old methods.

The movement is not going in the direction planned by Lenin, who never intended to make it an anti-intellectual one, and this it stands in danger of becoming today. With all his faults, Lenin had a fixed purpose, and his idea was that the learned should come to the help of the revolution to give it effective leadership. At present it is travelling in the opposite direction. Although the educated are in many cases ready to lend their aid, they find that the ranks are closed against them; they can fall in and walk in the rear, but that is as close as they can get. There is always the fear that the movement shall pass from the hands of those who know no other occupation than that of manual labor.

That is the factor that makes it difficult for Russia to come to terms with other nations of the world in regard to trade and business negotiations. Those who are fitted to give guidance in this matter, who are educated and experienced, find it difficult to get a seat close up to the centre of power. They are looked upon as being graduates of the old school that the revolution overthrew. Russia is in the position of having a great national engine, but the people fear that those competent to run the thing may start it off in the wrong direction.

THE PASSING OF THE PASTOR.

One question which is being asked in the church life of today is whether, in the magnifying of the modern pulpit, and in looking upon the minister as "the preacher," are we witnessing the passing of the pastor? A generation ago the pastoral duties of the minister were the primary phases of his work. He might be an ordinary preacher, but he must be a good pastor.

* * * *

In those days—and they are days within the memory of many church members—the "pastoral call" was a solemn occasion. Due preparations were made for his visit. The children were catechized, the Bible read and prayers offered, and the people felt that the under-shepherd of the flock had really ministered to their spiritual needs.

* * * *

Now, it is feared that the pastoral work of the ministry is sadly overlooked. His visits seem to be contemporaneous with a birth, a marriage, or a death in the home. The old-fashioned habit of regular pastoral calling has largely gone. Our modern mode of living is as much to blame as the minister. Modern life has raised new problems. In the cities the afternoon finds the family at work or at school, and the mother attending social engagements. The evening, they scatter again for various places of recreation or amusement. The home has ceased to be the centre of the family's social life. The pastor's visit, therefore, as some one has said, "savors more of mechanism than morality; it is stilted, rather than spiritual." The rural districts are no easier than the city to serve in this regard, while the vast open spaces of the prairie have made the pastor's visitation most difficult.

* * * *

The church machinery of today has something to do with the passing of the pastor. The increasing multiplicity of organizations make serious inroads on a minister's time. By the time he attends to the necessary duties of his local church organizations, his denominational and interdenominational—not to speak of civic responsibilities—the visitation of his flock is apt to be neglected.

* * * *

There is no doubt, too, that the average minister has to drive himself to the task of calling. He finds a sermon easier than a conversation, and more congenial to speak to an audience than to an individual. The average calling to the minister, perhaps, is considered burdensome, tiring and effeminate work, and a tragic waste of a strong man's time. He feels that much of this general visitation does little more than minister to the personal vanity of the people, who, if not regularly called upon, feel they are "being ignored." He seems to sense that the people he calls on do not expect spiritual counsel, and have no thought of opening up the way for reading of Scripture or offering a prayer. They simply demand a call, and if it is not forthcoming the attitude is: "Well, the preacher hasn't called on me yet," and another black mark goes down against the pastor's good name.

* * * *

Yet, notwithstanding all these difficulties, and the drastic changes of modern life, the pastor is as essential as ever and the old-fashioned method of calling should not pass away. We would not ask the minister to lay less emphasis on preaching, but we do believe it is necessary to exalt the pastoral office.—London Free Press.

WORKERS' STATE

fellow delegate in the various labor assemblages.

"They will be told just what the Government can accomplish, and what it cannot, having but a minority control. In the latter event, the Labor Committees will report back to the Congress next year that their demand could not be granted, and giving the reasons."

"Thus the veteran, Robert Smillie and a delegation from the Miners' Federation will seek an audience with the Home Secretary to submit Congress resolutions to extend provisions of the Compensation Act, industrial disease legislation, etc. They will be confronted with Arthur Henderson, Home Secretary, a molder by trade, for years the head of the British Labor Party and the first Labor man to enter the War Cabinet, 1916-1917. He will probably tell them, as he has in the past, that while the proposals are those with which he is in accord, yet the plan requires millions of pounds and it is for the Chancellor of the Exchequer to say how the expense can be met. The delegates will be confronted with the stone wall of an economic fact, that even a sympathetic secretary cannot disguise. The delegation will leave, after expressing thanks for the courteous hearing, and report back to the unions.

Praise For Philip Snowden.

"The major economic demands must all come before Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer, an outstanding genius of the British Labor Government. Insurance against unemployment, for example is so vast a project, that the Prime Minister himself may attend the conference with four or five Cabinet Ministers. They will discuss what the nation can do to build roads, stimulate electrification so Britain can make production efficient to win back its world trade. A working programme is arrived at, the Government bringing a bill up in Parliament, the unions bringing the issue to the fore in their discussions with employers. Both work together. It is true that a minority of Labor in Parliament can accomplish little. But enough has been done to make the British workers, like Oliver Twist, to want more."

Mr. Brady said that British Labor wanted the Government in the new session to concentrate on home problems. A test, he said, would come within a few weeks.

"First, the Labor Government will attempt to carry out its labor programme," he said, "by remarkable jockeying, the ability of its leadership and good luck, it has survived for nine months. If it falls, it will be on some major issue, endorsed by the trade unions."

Mr. Brady said that if the MacDonald administration were defeated and a new election held, "it is more than likely that its power in the House of Commons would be greatly increased."

He quoted A. A. Purcell, President of the Trades Union Congress, as enunciating the ideal of the British Labor as follows:

"Our aim is not merely to build big unions, but to create an instrument of solidarity capable of changing the existing structure of capitalist society and bring into existence a workers' State."
